D. C. Draft Units Ready To Register 95,000 Men

Registration Sidelights

ADDITIONAL registration day stories on pages 8 and 14. Map of registration areas, page 14.

Ready to Function

Its complicated machinery ready to swing into motion without a hitch, the District tomorrow will undertake the task of registering in one day 95,000 young men for selective military service.

A job without precedent in this Republic's peacetime history, it will be performed by 7,000 volunteer registrars in 47 school buildings in 24 districts throughout the city. Between 7 a. m. and 9 p. m. every male citizen of Washington 21 to 35, inclusive, will be expected to set up and offer himself as a prospect for a year's training in the Nation's new fighting force.

Throughout the city, the 7,000 volunteer registrars yesterday attended classes of instruction in their one-day duties. Under general direction of Dr. Chester W. Holmes, chief registration officer for the District, they were sworn in and coached in their duties. Dr. Holmes said a minor avalanche of 300 resignations yesterday would not materially affect his corps of registrars.

Business houses in Washington prepared, for the most part, to make registration as painless as possible for their male employes between 21 and 36. Some said eligible employes would be permitted to come to work late in order to register early; others said their eligibles would be relieved of duties during slack periods or at staggered intervals. Practically all business houses consulted had made some arrangement to assist their employes of military age to register.

Uncle Sam, largest employer of likely young men in Washington, will place no obstacle in the way of the 25,000 who must list themselves for possible military service. Left by President Roosevelt to work out matters in their own way, some departments announced registrants would be permitted to arrive late; others will release them at stated intervals during the day; some will give two to four hours off and the Census Bureau will close altogether tomorrow afternoon. Time taken to register or to serve as volunteer registrars will

President to Talk On Registration

President Roosevelt will broadcast from Washington at 8 p. m. tomorrow on registration for selective service.

His talk, to last about seven minutes, will be heard over the Nation's four major networks, including all four Washington stations.

Willkie Gains Indiana, Illinois, Mich.

Cuts Into Roosevelt Advantage in Ohio

By Dr. George Gallup
Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 14.—A rise in Wendell Willkie's popular strength in Illinois, Ohio, Indiana and Michigan—four of the most important mid-Western States—is revealed in the latest Institute survey on the Presidential campaign. The rise, noted in interviewing which took place between September 28 and October 9, has been sufficient to shift all of these States except Ohio from the Democratic column to the Republican column, adding a rich prize of 82 electoral votes to Willkie's score.

The shift emphasizes the fact that the campaign still has every element of a horse race as it rounds the turn into home stretch. In the early days of the campaign the Institute found Illinois, Indiana and Michigan in the Republican column by a very narrow margin. Then, along with most of the other States in the Union, they shifted to the Democratic side by an equally small percentage. Today they are back on the Repub-

Willkie Attacks 'Dictatorship Pattern' Here

He Says New Deal Seeks 'Indispensable Man's Indefinite Rule'

(Willkie Text On Page 7.)

By William B. Ardery,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Syracuse, N. Y., Oct. 14.—Contending that the Democratic Party has been "kidnaped by the New Deal," Wendell L. Willkie declared tonight that the Administration is tracing a "pattern of dictatorship" which calls for "the indefinite rule of one indispensable man."

The Republican Presidential nominee, speaking in the windswept Municipal Stadium, declared that "the usurpation of power by manufactured emergencies, the circumvention of the legislature, the capture of the courts" constituted "the pattern of dictatorship."

Willkie faced a cheering crowd in the bleachers. The brisk wind swept dust from the baseball field into his face and disarranged the bunting draped around the speakers' platform.

"The pattern of dictatorship," Willkie said, provides for "the creation of one dominant party in which all power is vested."

Tremendous Shouts

Willkie's route to the municipal stadium was lined with red and green flares. When he arrived at a circular infield platform, the audience rose, applauded and sang "The Battle Hymn of the Republic."

As Willkie placed his manuscript on the reading desk, there was a tremendous shout of "We want Willkie." He put on his glasses and smiled until the cheering died.

At that time, Police Chief William E. Rapp estimated the attendance at 23,000 to 25,000.

Willkie said he had observed that Charles Michelson, Democratic publicity director, "that great disseminator of the truth," had charged that his five farms in Indiana were bought under foreclosure proceedings while other farmers "were undergoing bankruptcy because of

D. C. Funds Gone, Woman Takes Poison

$2,000 Missing In Traffic Bureau Reveals Inadequate Accounting System

Miss Julia L. Vass, District Traffic Department cashier, was treated for poisoning at Casualty Hospital late yesterday following her suspension because of a $2,000 shortage in her accounts and those of her assistant.

She was taken to the hospital from her apartment at 18 Ninth Street Northeast. After treatment Casualty physicians ordered her removed to Gallinger Hospital for observation.

Police said a friend, Spruce A. Baird, of 2125 G Street Northwest, rushed to the apartment of Miss Vass after a telephone conversation with her shortly before 6 p. m. and found she had swallowed disinfectant solution.

A relative of the cashier said she had been ill for the last few days and he had advised her to remain home from work and "take it easy" for a while.

Meanwhile an investigation was under way to determine how the shortage—reported to Tax Collector Chatham Towers by Miss Vass herself — went unnoticed for five months.

Suspension Ordered

Miss Vass, ordered suspended along with Assistant Cashier Merk Dunn yesterday by Commissioner Hazen, said she had known of the shortage since April 11, but was unable to give "a satisfactory explanation," Hazen disclosed.

Hazen quoted both Miss Vass and Mr. Dunn as saying they did not know how the money disappeared. Miss Vass, he said, reported it could have been taken from a safe which at times during working hours is left open.

The missing funds represented fees collected from auto registrations, titles, tags, permits and personal property taxes.

A spokesman at the traffic department blamed the loss to the city's inadequate accounting system, charging that financial records in the bureau have "never been properly audited."

He said it was believed the shortage resulted from an "accumulation of undetected errors over a long period." Tax Collector Towers said the two cashiers were "greatly overworked."

The Post learned that conditions which would permit similar undetected disappearance of money had been known to exist in various District government departments since 1928.

Two years ago the Comptroller General's annual report said that "generally the condition of affairs is such that a serious shortage may exist at any time without detection."

The Department of Vehicles and Traffic was mentioned specifically

Russia and Turkey Reported Leading Drive to Curb Reich; Heaviest Attack Rocks London

Ankara Vows To Aid Greece, Calls Nationals Out of Rumania

By International News Service

Bucharest, Oct. 14.—Turkey tonight added new tension to the explosive Balkan situation with notice that she would fulfill her obligations to Greece and a warning to her nationals to prepare to leave Rumania by November 1.

This declaration of Turkish policy was made by H. Suphi Tanriover, minister to Rumania, upon his return from Ankara, apparently under instruction, and diplomatic circles assumed it was a flat warning to the Axis powers.

Although the minister did not explain the nature of Turkey's obligations, diplomatic quarters heard reports of a secret pact committing Turkey to come to Greece's assistance if Germany or Italy attempted an invasion.

[Diplomats also were interested in reports that Turkey, Yugoslavia and Greece might offer a united front of their 40,000,000 people to any aggressive move by the Axis powers, the United Press said.

[The Associated Press said it was widely believed in Athens that Turkish-Greek ties were being strengthened, although there was no confirmation of reports a Turkish military mission had arrived to confer with Premier Metaxas.]

Another move by Tanriover which served to increase tension was his conference during the day with the Russian minister.

While it was officially announced that this conference was merely a formality in which the Turkish minister arranged with the Soviet minister to take over Turkish interests in case of a diplomatic break with Rumania, it served to start a flood of rumors.

Capital Strafed Over Six Hours Fires Light Up Barrage Balloons

By the Associated Press

London (Tuesday), Oct. 15.—Ancient London was alight with fires and rocked by explosions early today as Nazi airmen rained tons of bombs from moonlit skies in the fiercest assault yet made on the capital.

Casualty tolls were not immediately determined.

Firemen careened through narrow streets from blaze to blaze. Rescue workers tossed themselves headlong against buildings trembling with the raid's impact.

The raids began last night and continued for hours into the morning. In the seventh hour it slackened somewhat with only sporadic blasts.

Added to the inferno of explosives were the "breadbaskets" of fire bombs sprayed over the city. One blaze severely damaged the top floor of a restaurant, another a movie theater.

Early reports said explosives damaged a Catholic convent and church with some casualties.

One midlands town was attacked three times with at least four killed and 13 injured. A department store and a home for aged women were struck.

Balloons Reflect Glare

Four houses were smashed in a southeast coast town and the occupants were believed injured.

Observers agreed the attack on London was the heaviest yet, and at times the glare of blazing buildings cast their reflection upon the "flying elephant" balloons floating thousands of feet aloft.

[The United Press reported Nazi bombs caused damage in 56 separate metropolitan districts, and said Liverpool was under heavy attack, as well as towns in East Anglia, ad in southwest England.]

Many Londoners who as a rule do not take shelter fled to the air raid shelters.

New Deal Is Leading U. S. Toward War, Says Lindbergh

Calls for Election of Men 'Whose Promises We Can Trust,' to Replace Leaders Who Brought Nation 'Into Debt and Weakness'

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh charged last night that present "leaders" of the Nation have "a consistent record of promise followed by failure," and called for election next month of men "whose promises we can trust and who tell us where we are going."

In another of his broadcasts critical of Administration foreign policy, Col. Lindbergh declared "we have been led into debt and weakness, and now we are being led toward war."

"The same thing is happening to us that happened to England and France," he declared.

Charging the Nation is "divided" because "we are asked to merge our destiny with that of other lands" he said that "we have not confidence in our leaders . . . in their efficiency or their judgment."

He reiterated his earlier contention that the United States should stay out of "the wars of Europe" and shape its armament program strictly for home defense, and said:

"With intelligent leadership we could have built an impregnable defense for America without disturbing seriously our national life and industry. We have already spent more than enough money to have done this."

In reading his speech, Lindbergh deleted from the prepared text a statement that "our vote next month can either bring or avoid a disastrous war for our country" and another that the future of the Nation depends "upon the quality and wisdom of leadership that we choose for our Nation in November—upon our Congress, upon our Senate, and upon our President."

The Mutual Broadcasting Co., over which Lindbergh spoke, said that Col. William J. Donovan will reply to him at 8:15 o'clock tonight.

R. A. F. Bombs Berlin, Main Naval Bases

3 Raiders Reported Shot Down as Germans Flee Underground

By the Associated Press

Berlin (Tuesday), Oct. 15.—Three British bombers were officially reported shot down by Nazi fighter planes early today as other raiders unloaded many bombs on the German capital.

There were two alarms overnight. The first was uneventful. The second sent the populace scurrying to underground shelters as antiaircraft guns broke into full roar over the city.

Most of the British airmen kept high in the skies, but a few planes swooped low over the city as searchlights sought them.

One plane was caught in the beams, but escaped before German gunners got its range.

The communique said the raiders "dropped bombs which damaged a

Yugoslavs Get Nazi Demands Of Submission

Increase of Farming, Lessened Industry Are Reported Terms

By the United Press

Belgrade, Oct. 14.—Germany has demanded that Yugoslavia submit to an Axis-dictated role in "the new European order," with concessions that would strip this Balkan nation of its economic sovereignty, Yugoslav economic experts said tonight.

These demands, served by a German economic mission now in Belgrade, on Yugoslavia's negotiators, were summed up as:

1. Yugoslavia must concentrate almost exclusively on increasing her agricultural production at the expense of any industrial development.

2. Yugoslavia must concede to Germany preferential rights to all surplus products, both agricultural and otherwise.

Stand to Suffer

Acceptance of the Nazi demands, it was stated, would have far-reaching social and economic effects on the nation.

If the country becomes purely agrarian it will suffer greatly, they said, because its prosperity depends on increasing industrialization.

The German demands suddenly and quite unexpectedly became the main topic of negotiation between the Yugoslav and German economic negotiators. Most of the technical trade questions already had been amicably settled before the German demands were presented.

The chief technical questions had concerned the increase of the exchange rate from 14.80 to 17.82 dinars per reichsmark, and the problem of fixing a quota of 245,000

RUSSIA IS REPORTED preparing to back up Turkey's opposition to growing German influence in the Balkans, amid fresh reports of Red army concentration on Rumania's borders.

TURKEY'S MINISTER in Bucharest warns the Axis that Turkey will go to the aid of Greece, as London looks to Turkey, Greece and Russia to resist Germany's march into the Near East.

YUGOSLAVIA REPORTS German demands for virtual surrender of her economic sovereignty, and Bulgaria receives Axis requests that her army threaten all three of her still-independent neighbors.

GERMAN BOMBERS hammer London in the heaviest of five weeks of night raids as the R. A. F. sends Berliners into shelters twice, spreads bombs over large areas of Nazi territory.

Support for Turks

By the United Press

Bucharest (Tuesday), Oct. 15. Russia has given Turkey a promise of at least moral support against any Italo-German pressure as result of Germany's military penetration into Rumania, it was reported in well-informed diplomatic quarters early today.

German antiaircraft guns were posted yesterday along Rumania's frontier with Russia, beyond which the Soviets have massed formidable military forces.

Russia's pledges to her friend, Turkey, resulted from simultaneous consultations in Moscow and Ankara, which Russian circles in Bucharest described as "most important" and as having been directly inspired by Adolf Hitler's military moves in Rumania.

The full extent of Russian-Turkish collaboration, it was indicated in Soviet quarters, will await "further developments," including the extent of Germany's reported plan to send troops to Bulgaria.

40-Hour Code Proves Elastic

Flooded with inquiries about its new definitions of white-collar workers, the Wage-Hour Administration yesterday drew attention to the fact that not all white-collar workers making more than $200 a month are to be exempt from the 40-hour week after October 24, when the new rulings go into effect.

Officials who were kept busy all day answering inquiries about the new rulings, recommended that employers and employes study the exact language of the new definitions of administrative, executive and professional workers.

Many officials admitted that final determination of who is and who is not exempt from the 40-hour week may rest, in many cases, with the courts.

It is up to each employer and each employe to decide for himself whether the new exemptions from the hours ceiling apply to him, Wage-Hour officials said.

In many cases the only final test of these curbstone decisions will come when a Wage-Hour inspector visits the establishment in question. The agency is engaged in industry-wide inspection campaigns. Last Saturday Wage-Hour Administrator Fleming said, for instance, that "we will some day go into all the newspaper plants in the country."

Tokyo (Tuesday), Oct. 15.—A warning that Moscow's shipments from the United States needed the friendship of the Japanese navy if they were to be safe in crossing the Pacific was informally served by Japan's new Ambassador, Gen. Yoshitsugu Tatekawa, in a train interview at Hsinking as he passed through en route to Moscow yesterday.

He said his negotiations would make a fresh start in Japan's diplomacy and were aimed for broad political improvement in Soviet-Japan relations, not merely a settlement of pending questions.

Gen. Tatekawa tacitly accepted the view that his business was to defeat any American-British diplomatic maneuver at Moscow. "I will not continue the negotiations heretofore opened," he said. "Instead of handling individual issues, a fresh sart will be made in adjusting

General in Air Corps Refuses To Let Elliott Roosevelt Resign

By the Associated Press

Dayton, Ohio, Oct. 14.—Elliott Roosevelt, second son of the President, submitted his resignation as an Air Corps Reserve captain today, but Brig. Gen. O. P. Echols refused to accept it. Echols is assistant commander of the materiel division at Wright Field here.

Young Roosevelt said in his resignation letter that because of adverse publicity he felt his being commissioned a special captain might be injurious to the Government's selective service program and that he wanted to resign so he could register Wednesday in the draft.

"With Roosevelt's background in radio, he is perfectly capable of duties as liaison officer between the Air Corps and Signal Corps and in the procurement of radio equipment," Echols said in an oral statement. "His services are needed."

Echols declared that he refused to comply "on my own responsibility" because of the large amount of work at Wright Field. He added:

Echols' statement added:

"Capt Roosevelt's physical examination shows that his eyesight is such that it renders him unfit for either combat or flying duty. Due to the large amount of work resulting from the Air Corps expansion program, it has become necessary for the Air Corps to commission a large number of non-flying reserves . . .

"Instructions from the chief of the Air Corps provide that these reserve officers will be commissioned from personnel not physically fit for flying and will be trained with the view of using them to replace physically fit flying officers now on this duty . . ."

Working Out 'Rough Spots'

U. S. and Britain to Standardize Planes to Speed Production

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Secretary Morgenthau announced yesterday that the design of British and American warplanes under construction in the United States is to be standardized in an effort to speed production for both nations.

Factories now building one model of pursuit plane for the British and another for the United States Army or Navy will concentrate on one design. The program, he declared, will extend to gun calibers, parts and all phases of aircraft construction.

The Treasury chief disclosed that President Roosevelt has appointed a four-man informal committee to put the standardization program into effect and work out other "rough spots" delaying production of aircraft. Members are Secretaries Stimson and Knox, Defense Commissioner William S. Knudsen and Secretary Morgenthau.

Army and Navy technical experts will pass on the details of the standardization program and the British government has been asked to send over ten leading technicians to confer with United States experts, Morgenthau said.

In changing designs, U. S. Army and Navy requirements must be adhered to, the Treasury chief said. As a secondary consideration, efforts will be made to conform to British desires.

As an example of what may be expected of the program, Morgenthau said the Consolidated Aircraft Corporation at San Diego has been

Kennedy May Sail For Home Soon; Reports Awaited

Return to America of Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy from his post in London was confidently forecast here last night, amid repeated rumors that he would not go back to London.

Secretary of State Hull gave an indication that the Ambassador is coming home when he was asked at his press conference regarding London reports that Kennedy would sail on October 22. The Secretary said he might be able to say something on the subject a little later.

Much interest will be shown in whatever reports the Ambassador makes to the President and the Secretary of State regarding progress of the war in Europe.

Soviets Offer Turks Support Against Nazis

Three Big Rumanian Oil Wells Burn Up; Nazis Mount Guns

cate Russia and protect the Rumanian oil fields against possible British bombing attacks, neutral diplomatic quarters heard in London.]

Mysterious fires yesterday afternoon destroyed three of Rumania's big oil wells over which the German army and air force have assumed "protection" against alleged sabotage plots. Officials said, however, that the blazes were "accidental."

The fires occurred in the Balcoi district, north of Bucharest, destroying two Rumanian-owned wells and a well of the International Petrol Block Co., controlled by Germans.

Diplomats reported important Soviet diplomatic and military moves designed to resist any Axis aggression in the Balkans and including the possible creation of a Soviet-Turkish-Yugoslav bloc specifically aimed at Italy and Germany.

[Tass the official Soviet news agency, issued the following announcement: "The Reuter (British) agency circulates a report alleging that at present negotiations are going on among Britain, Turkey, the Soviet Union, Yugoslavia and Greece on the problems of German eastward expansion. Tass is authorized to declare that this report does not correspond to reality and is a fantastic invention . . ."]

Germans Set Up Guns

At least 3,000 German troops arrived yesterday at Galatz and Badilov near Rumania's new Bessarabian border with Russia and set up antiaircraft guns.

Later an entire German motorized division of about 15,000 men arrived in the Ploesti oil fields directly north of Bucharest.

This brought the total number of German troops on Rumanian soil to an estimated 45,000 or 50,000 men.

Germany, it was reported, has assigned 10 Nazi divisions or about 150,000 men to Rumania.

A Nazi naval mission arrived yesterday and is expected to supervise the building of a naval base and a U-boat plant at Galatz on the Danube close to Russian territory.

[The Associated Press said refugees reaching Bucharest from Bessarabia, former Rumanian territory on the east bank of the Prut, reported feverish Russian efforts to complete seven air bases in Bessarabia. Hundreds of planes were on hand, it was said, with additional squadrons arriving yesterday.]

Both Rumanian and foreign military quarters reported that Russia had taken military precautions along both the Bessarabian and Bukovinian frontiers of Rumania, whittled down by recent territorial concessions to the Soviets, and were building strong defensive positions on the Bukovina frontier.

Expert German fire-fighting units, recently arrived in Rumania along with Nazi troops, battled for three hours to quell the fires which today destroyed the three oil wells in the Baicoi district, about 150 miles north of Bucharest, in a narrow corridor between Rumania's new borders with Hungary and Russia.

In connection with the "accidental" oil well fires at Baicoi, four British subjects remain under arrest on charges of sabotage acts alleged to have ruined large quantities of oil about to be shipped to the Reich. A fifth Briton, Alexander Miller, was released Saturday.

[The London report of Hitler's alleged orders to Rumania to avoid an open break with Britain said this might mean release of the four Britons.]

Scores of Britons Flee

Persons witnessing the departure of British nationals from Giurgiu yesterday reported that at least 1,200 Nazi troops were stationed there, Rumania's major Danube port.

The Britons were among scores who fled yesterday in anticipation of an early break in Anglo-Rumanian diplomatic relations. They were en route to Sofia, Bulgaria, and the first of two boatloads sailed from Constanai on the Black Sea for Istanbul.

Col. John P. Ratay, American military attache in Bucharest, said today, however, that he believed there was nothing to justify alarm over Russian military activities across the border.

He said that there were no more movements than in past weeks, when Russia was garrisoning air fields for the winter.

Emphasis was placed here on the fact that all Russian military movements, important as they may be, were defensive, and that they had been proceeding for weeks and not, as some reports implied, for only a few days.

German war materials today continued to arrive in Rumania in large quantities along the Danube route and it was estimated that about 400 antiaircraft guns now were in the country in addition to the 35,000 troops.

Additional German contingents are expected and it was understood that reinforcements would follow until there are sufficient Germans to "train" and "reorganize" Rumania's army of 700,000 men.

Turkey Pledges To Help Greeks

stanta, Rumania, "is directed against Soviet Russia."

Both the Turkish radio and press have emphasized the threat to Russia since Nazi troops began moving into Rumania, and also have expressed Turkey's determination to fight if the Germans attempt to cross her territory toward the Mosul oil fields in Iraq.

The Istanbul newspaper Yeni Sabah said the real aim of the new triple alliance of Germany, Italy and Japan was to "force the Soviet Union to stand aside while the Axis took the initiative in blocking Moscow's road southward."

Many Turks are returning from Bulgaria for fear Turkey may become involved in war with that country.

Istanbul already is crowded with persons who have left Bulgaria and Rumania, including Jews and Britons as well as Turks.

Hopeful of continuing to Palestine, 1,800 Jews arrived from Rumania over the week-end. They are being cared for by the Jews here, who recently pledged that as evidence of loyalty to Turkey they would speak only Turkish.

British Count on Turks

By the Associated Press

London, Oct. 14.—Great Britain counted on the aid of Turkey and Greece and hoped for the sympathy of Russia tonight to resist an Axis drive toward the rich Mosul oil fields in Iraq.

Well-informed British sources predicted:

1. An imminent diplomatic break with Rumania.
2. Extension of the drive by Germany and Italy beyond the Balkans, with a greatly intensified war in the west if the Axis gets control of the oil in Iraq.
3. Turkish resistance because of pronounced determination to fight any power attempting to cross her frontiers, and also because of the pact to assist Britain if the war swings to the eastern Mediterranean.

These sources said the weight of popular Greek opinion was pro-British. Greece also has a guarantee of British aid if she is attacked.

It was admitted the Greeks and Turks were weak in the air, but it was contended the Greeks could put up strong fights in their hilly country in event of an invasion from Italian-held Albania, and that the Turks could hold the strategic Dardanelles until British aid arrived.

Besides using her fleet to aid the Turks at the Dardanelles and harass Italy, Britain would be expected to use her Palestine troops both to guard the Iraq oil fields and to bolster the Turkish army.

Britain's withdrawal from Somaliland in East Africa was believed in line with the more important aim of protecting the near-eastern oil reservoir.

Most observers agreed that German control of Rumanian oil wells, which produced 6,240,000 metric tons in 1939, would not give the Axis all the oil it needs.

A large section of opinion also believed that Russia was hostile to an extension of German influence into the Balkans toward the Dardanelles. The Turks and Russians are good friends, and the Turks and Greeks have been on friendly terms since 1920.

Many Britons felt that the Balkan move by Germany was a tacit indication that oil was one weak cog in the Nazi war machine.

Japanese Naval Officers Fired On

By the Associated Press

Shanghai, Oct. 14.—A shot fired at a motor car carrying Japanese naval officers caused a flurry of nervousness here tonight and led the Japanese Army to close off the Japanese-held Hongkew region from the rest of the International Settlement for two hours.

An unidentified Chinese was said to have fired the shot, which did not hit the officers. Their chauffeur was injured by windshield fragments.

The shooting heightened tension in the International community already made anxious by reports of renewed Japanese pressure on French and American and British disputes over distribution of authority in the settlement.

Informed persons said the Japanese were directing increased attention to the French Concession here, as well as preparing new steps to extend their control in French Indo-China.

These persons believed the Japanese could obtain important rights in the French concession without use of force since French authorities, receiving little support from the feeble Vichy regime, were inclined to yield rather than risk outright Japanese occupation.

Germans Bomb 40 London Districts

veyed the damage in one area and reported before midnight that a big building in that vicinity had been utterly smashed.

Hugh Wagnon, of the Associated Press staff, en route to work, twice flattened himself against a building. Edwin Stout, another member of the staff, dived several times into the sheltering gutters, as did other night workers abroad upon the streets.

The very windows were alight with German fire bombs.

As always, the morose, outraged bellow of the antiaircraft arose first over the suburbs—the bruised front line in the long battle for London—and rolled higher and higher as the Germans sought to smash through to the center of the city.

This violent night attack capped a day of quick, scattered raids over many areas of Britain and two thrusts at London itself which, according to British sources, were turned back with but little damage done.

Elsewhere in the kingdom, however, no such success was claimed. In a town in western Scotland, where five bombs fell, more than 200 families had to be removed from a time bomb section. On the East Anglian coast civilians died in the wreckage of their homes. In a town near London there were more fatalities, a single bomb destroying four houses in a row. The south and the Midlands were repeatedly assaulted.

In a northwest town a "number" were killed by a whole load of bombs dropped in one cluster in a crowded section.

An unusual victory for the British defense—the destruction of a large Nazi bomber of the sort rarely used and hard to replace—was reported from a London suburb during the day. It was said unofficially that the great craft was the victim of ground guns.

Here in the city, 5,000 troops—"pioneer corps" the British called them—worked quietly amid the air alarms to restore the town's face as nearly as possible. Joined by men recruited through the labor exchanges, they pulled down dangerous standing walls of smashed buildings and cleared away obstacles to traffic.

This job, which must be done again and again, was made urgent by Sunday night raids which caused casualties heavier than usual.

While no official total was given, there was heavy loss of life in London identified. In those two towns alone at least 15 were believed killed; in London many casualties were caused by the destruction of an entire block of flats. The greatest sufferers in Liverpool were residents of a tenement block.

The British Press Association announced that it was believed those killed in London included three, or possibly four, nuns in a smashed convent.

Japan Threatens U. S.-Soviet Trade

the Japanese-Soviet relations in general.

"Britain and the United States must be engaged in diplomatic operations at Moscow but Japan has no need to be apprehensive."

"If the Soviets import machine-tools from the United States they must depend upon Japan's power for safety. The Soviets would find it difficult to continue trade with America without smooth relations with Japan.

"It is too obvious that the power of Japan's navy cannot be ignored. The Soviet knows that.

"It will be wiser for the Soviets to make friends with Japan than with the United States which is far away across the sea."

Gen. Tatekawa expects to arrive in Moscow October 25. The retiring ambassador will not wait to receive him. Their trains will cross somewhere in Siberia.

No Japanese diplomat has ever gone to Moscow with greater hope and with greater necessity for securing a political agreement.

The Japanese government, it is said, believes that a basis of understanding exists in regard to the benefits both powers will derive from having their Far Eastern frontiers secure while they exploit the world situation.

It is argued that the Soviets have no cause to oppose Japan's South Sea advance and that Japan has no cause to obstruct Russia's expansion toward the Dardanelles.

Compared to these big prizes, disputes about fisheries are trivial. The Japanese government believes that the Soviets will want to remove the nightmare of a campaign on two fronts, and will negotiate an agreement insuring their Far Eastern border.

What price the Soviets will demand for withdrawing help from the Chungking government remains to be seen. Even a few months ago a policy which might have recognized a Soviet sphere of influence in parts of China would have met intense opposition here.

Germany's victories have opened wider horizons and those patriots who would have fought concessions to the Soviets on the continent tooth and nail are ready to approve a deal which would allow Japan to follow her "destiny" southward.

Roosevelt to Make Paid-for Broadcast

Hiram Johnson Soon To Take His Stand Against Third Term

By Cecil B. Dickson
International News Service Staff Writer

President Roosevelt will make a "paid political radio speech" Wednesday, October 23, and Senator Hiram Johnson (Republican) of California, soon will announce his opposition to a third term, International News Service learned last night.

It will be the second paid-for radio speech the President will have made during the campaign. The first was before the Teamsters Union convention here. The second, scheduled to be made from the White House, will be a direct bid for a third term, it was reported.

The advent of Johnson in the campaign may give the Republicans added strength. Johnson is to make his position known either in a radio talk or in a formal announcement.

Won Both Nominations

In 1938, Johnson voted with many Senate Democrats for the La Follette resolution which denounced a third term as "unwise, unpatriotic and fraught with peril to our free institutions." This resolution was adopted 56 to 28, when it appeared that President Coolidge might be drafted for a third term.

In the California primaries this year, Johnson received both the Democratic and Republican nominations, assuring his reelection in November. During the primary campaign President Roosevelt told his press conference he no longer considered Johnson a liberal. Johnson, who supported Mr. Roosevelt in 1932, retorted, "it's the old stab in the back."

Republican National Chairman Joseph W. Martin charged "the third-term candidate himself" along with the New Deal high command with responsibility for the attack made on Wendell Willkie by the colored division of the Democratic National Committee raising the racial and pro-German issue.

Pamphlet Repudiated

In New York, Julian D. Rainey, chairman of the colored division, said at a press conference that the pamphlet containing the attack was the work of "a volunteer worker who is very enthusiastic," that the circular was never distributed, and that it came to light through a "newspaperman who pilfered a couy off the floor."

Democratic National Chairman Edward J. Flynn, in repudiating the pamphlet, called it "stupid." Martin branded the attack as a "vicious slander."

Aberdeen Angus Auction Conducted At Warrenton

Warrenton, Va., Oct. 14 (AP).—Wintonian, owned by Col. James B. Dillard, Va., was named grand champion bull at the annual auction and show of the Virginia Aberdeen Angus Association today.

He was purchased for $1,100 by the Canterbury Farms of Warrenton. Total sales at the auction amounted to $15,840 for an average of $561, about $100 above the average of last year's sales.

The grand champion female was Kepi of Cresthill, owned by Mrs. Wallace D. Kenyon, of Cresthill, Va., and bought for $535 by Suerest Stock Farm, Pine Plains, N. Y.

Wintonian, sired by Enfieleens Bandolier II, was presented the West Galwap Cup by Mrs. Charles T. Neale, of Gordonsville, wife of the secretary-treasurer of the association.

The champion female was sired by Erl King of Wickwire.

Witness Tampering Charge Weighed by Worcester Judge

Snow Hill, Md., Oct. 14 (AP).—Investigations of reported attempts to "spirit away" State witnesses in three criminal assault cases, and alleged illegal sale of beer to minors, were begun today by the Worcester County grand jury.

The 23-man panel heard associate Judge James M. Crockett deliver a 40-minute charge urging special emphasis on the inquiries and noting the tampering with State witnesses would be "a plain case" of an attempt "to thwart justice."

"We learned," he said, "that it is likely that certain State witnesses will not be here today due to reported efforts on the part of some persons to spirit them away. It is a plain case of an attempt to thwart justice and this court hopes that you grand jurors will investigate such action and indict anyone whom you may find responsible."

Senators to Inquire at Once Into Chicago Vote Charges

An immediate investigation into alleged "vote buying and vote stealing" in Chicago was ordered yesterday by the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee.

A subcommittee of two was named to look into charges of "fraudulent elections in Chicago" brought by Robert L. Hunter and Fred W. Blaisdell, officials of the Better Government Association of Chicago.

Senator Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, chairman of the committee, said Senator Hill (Democrat), of Alabama, and Reed (Republican), of Kansas, planned to be in Chicago on Thursday to investigate evidence.

Act Before Election

Gillette said the committee acted at once "due to the shortness of time existing before the November election."

Hunter and Blaisdell called the Senate group's attention to evidence now being presented to a Cook County grand jury and the findings of a previous grand jury.

They further charged that "intimidation, coercion, vote buying and vote stealing are being conducted in a number of politically corrupt wards in the city of Chicago, despite the efforts of the board of election commissioners and various civic organizations."

The Gillette committee meanwhile ruled "out of its province" a complaint by Senator-elect Brewster (Republican), of Maine, of an alleged "scurillous" attack on Wendell Willkie in a pamphlet entitled "Hands Across the Sea."

Gillette said:

"If the circulation of this document or any other campaign document is in violation of libel laws, it is a matter for criminal investigation, and the committee does not comprehend that its duties comprehend censoring campaign material of any kind unless such material is being circulated or paid for in violation of Federal election laws."

Call for Facts on Booklet

Other action of the Gillette committee:

Called on Federal Works Administrator John Carmody to explain "all the facts" on a booklet, "Millions for Defense," allegedly printed at Government expense and distributed by the Democratic National Committee as part of a speaker's kit. The National Committee of Democrats for Willkie charged the document was being used for campaign purposes, in violation of the Hatch Act.

Scheduled a meeting for Friday to hear charges that WPA rolls have been strongly increased during the past few months and in previous election years immediately preceding the elections.

Invited the Workers Alliance and certain union bodies in New York City to testify at the same meeting on their charges that a WPA organization known as "The Guard" is using star chamber methods to eliminate from WPA rolls persons charged with radical views.

Circuit Court Gets Vepco Appeal On NLRB Order

Richmond, Va., Oct. 14 (AP).—The United States Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals heard arguments today in the Virginia Electric & Power Co.'s appeal from an NLRB order directing the company to terminate a closed shop contract with an independent employes union and to "cease discouraging" membership in C. I. O. and A. F. of L. unions.

The argument centered on a company bulletin issued in 1937, in which, the board said, VEPCO appealed to its employes to bargain with the company directly without the "intervention of any outside union."

Counsel for the I. O. E. (Independent Organization of Employes of the Virginia Electric & Power Co.) contended that the workers generally did not interpret the notice as coercive. At one point in this argument, Judge John H. Parker injected the comment, "the weight of the employer's little finger is greater than that of most men's hands."

Ball, Reporter, Named Senator Of Minnesota

Stassen's Appointment Gives Republicans Another Seat

By the Associated Press

St. Paul, Minn., Oct. 14.—Joseph H. Ball, 34, political reporter for the St. Paul Dispatch and Pioneer Press, morning and evening newspapers, was appointed today by Gov. Harold Stassen to the United States Senate to succeed the late Senator Ernest Lundeen.

Ball is a Republican, like the Governor. Senator Lundeen was a Farmer-Laborite and the Republicans thus gain another Senate seat. Minnesota's other Senator, Henrik Shipstead, is a Republican. Lundeen was killed in an air crash near Washington August 31.

The youthful Ball, a tall man with heavy black hair, father of three children and a reporter since 1927, has long been an intimate friend of the Governor. He has been reporting politics since 1934.

The Governor said he thought that Ball's "experience as a newspaperman, studying both sides of problems, watching closely the actions or all political parties, his faculty for hard work and careful study of governmental problems . . . and independence of judgment" especially fitted him for the job

Favors Aid to Britain

Definitely eliminating himself as a senatorial possibilty in 1942, when Ball's appointment expires, the Governor said he hoped the State would return Ball to office then.

Ball was born in Crookston, Minn., November 3, 1905, and worked summers on a farm while in high school and earned money for his first year at Antioch College, Yellow Springs, Ohio, by raising seed corn. He later attended the University of Minnesota. He began newspaper work on the Minneapolis Journal, now the Star-Journal, in 1928, freelanced for a year writing fiction, and in 1929 went to the St. Paul newspapers. In 1928 he married Elizabeth Robbins, of Minneapolis. They have two girls and a boy.

Ball said that in the Senate he would favor "all aid possible to Britain without crippling our own defenses" and that he thought the Army and Navy the "best judges of how much and what sort of aid we can extend with safety."

Ball Youngest Senator

Ball will be the youngest member of the Senate at 34.

His closest rival will be 35-year-old Senator Holt (Democrat), West Virginia, who was elected to the Senate before he was 30 and could not take office until June, 1935.

Upon Holt's retirement—he was defeated for renomination—Senator Clark (Democrat), Idaho, will be second youngest member. He was 38 on April 2.

The Political Arena

President Roosevelt discussed the progress of his campaign for reelection yesterday at a luncheon conference with Henry A. Wallace, and Attorney General Robert Jackson.

WALLACE

Wallace, Mr. Roosevelt's running mate, said afterward that the campaign seemed to be going "very well," and that he would resume his speaking activities with an address at Pittsburgh tomorrow and another at Cincinnati Thursday.

He said Jackson's presence at the luncheon was "purely fortuitous" and had nothing to do with legal phases of the campaign resulting from the Hatch Politics Act.

Gov. Stassen Asks Flynn for Apology

St. Paul, Minn., Oct. 14 (AP).—Gov. Harold Stassen, in a telegram to Edward J. Flynn, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, demanded an apology today to the State of Minnesota "for slurs upon the patriotism of the people."

The Governor charged that in a pamphlet "of your Negro division" Minnesota is referred to as the "'German State of the union.'"

"The people of Minnesota, in their ancestry, are sons and daughters of every nation in the world and they are loyal and patriotic citizens who love the United States and will defend it against all dangers," Stassen wired.

"We practice tolerance and the rights of all minorities are respected."

Rep. Norton Asks Probe Of Use of Her Name

Chairman Norton (Democrat), New Jersey, of the House Labor Committee, asked the Justice Department yesterday to investigate the use of her name on two telegrams sent Saturday from Washington.

She said the messages were sent to T. James Tumulty, Jersey City, N. J., and to a New Jersey newspaper. The one to Tumulty accepted a challenge to a political debate. Upon receiving Tumulty's acknowledgement of the message, Mrs. Norton sent him one accusing him of a "cheap political trick."

Communists Barred From Nov. 5 Ballots

Nashville, Tenn., Oct. 14 (AP).—The State board of election supervisors barred the Communist Party from the November 5 ballot in Tennessee today because, the board said, "it is the aim and purpose of the Communist Party to overthrow the Government of the United States by force or violence."

Defense Workers Halted by Pickets

Dues Collectors Keep Hundreds Out at Steel Plant

By the Associated Press

Aliquippa, Pa., Oct. 14.—District Attorney Robert E. McCreary reported today workers at the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation plant in this western Pennsylvania town had been "turned back by the hundreds" by C. I. O. dues-collecting pickets at the mill gates.

At least two automobiles driven by workers who "tried to run the gantlet" were stopped, he said, adding that most of the other workers had not attempted to penetrate the picket lines.

Sheriff Charles J. O'Laughlin asked and obtained State police reinforcements to guard against fresh outbreaks.

Company officials said the plant is working on orders for both the Army and the Navy.

Ship Firm Negotiates

Camden, N. J., Oct. 14 (AP).—The management of the New York Shipbuilding Co., which holds $500,000,000 in national defense contracts, agreed today to resume negotiations at once for a new working agreement with a C. I. O. shipworkers union.

The Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America had voted yesterday to accept a proposal of Sidney Hillman, national defense commissioner, for reopening the contract talks, and empowered its negotiating committee to issue a strike call at 6 p. m. (E. S. T.) today if the company refused.

Hillman urged that the differences be submitted to arbitration if an agreement is not reached by Thursday.

The one-year working agreement expired October 4, but was extended for 10 days to permit further deliberations. The union has asked for a 10 per cent wage increase and eight other provisions and spokesmen said a 5 per cent boost had been offered by the company, which rejected all other requests.

Hillman's plan called for appointment of an arbiter by the National Defense Advisory Commission in the event of a deadlock.

Picketing Restrained

Linden, N. J., Oct. 14 (AP).—The Allied Clothing Corporation obtained a temporary injunction from Chancery Court today restraining the C. I. O. Amalgamated Clothing Workers from picketing and other union activity at the plant where a walkout by the C. I. O. union has tied up production of 7,500 Army overcoats under a War Department contract.

Vice Chancellor Alfred A. Stein in Elizabeth signed the order, returnable next Monday, which barred the Amalgamated from accosting employes, intimidating them, visiting their homes, loitering in front of the plant, jeering and demonstrating as well as picketing.

The Amalgamated, of which National Defense Commissioner Sidney Hillman is national head, contended the strike was in protest against a series of wage cuts.

making two types of flying boats, one for the Navy and one for the British, and two models of a four-engined bomber, one for the Army and the other for the Royal Air Force. The plant hereafter will construct one type of flying boat and one type of bomber.

Other defense developments of the day:

President Roosevelt signed a bill authorizing a $150,000,000 housing program to provide living quarters for married Army and Navy enlisted men and for workers near national defense industries. He approved an appropriation bill to carry out the program at the same time.

The House completed Congressional action on a bill authorizing states to set up "home guards" to replace National Guardsmen called for Federal service.

Figures given out by the White House disclosed that employment in the aircraft manufacturing industry has quadrupled in the last two years. The number employed in September, 1938, was 28,700.

Wage-Hour Office Flooded With Inquiries on New Code

Under the new definition, an "executive" employe must meet six tests in order to be exempt from the 40-hour week. They are:

(1) His chief work must be managing the establishment where he works or a customarily recognized department or subdivision of it.

(2) He must customarily and regularly direct the work of other employes.

(3) He must have authority to hire or fire, or his suggestions on hiring or firing and on promotions, raises and similar matters must be given "particular weight."

(4) He must customarily and regularly exercise "discretionary powers."

(5) He must be paid a salary of at least $30 a week.

(6) The time he spends doing the same type of work as performed by nonexempt employes must not be more than 20 per cent of the weekly working hours of the nonexempt employes under his direction.

Second Group Exempted

This sixth requirement does not apply, however, in the case of an employe who is in sole charge of an independent establishment or a branch office. In other words, an employe in a one-man branch office can spend most of his time doing nonexecutive work and still be classed as an executive, if he lives up to the five other tests.

"Administrative employes" are a second group of workers exempted from the 40-hour week after October 24 by the new rulings. In this class some bank tellers, personnel managers, credit managers, buyers, supervisors of machine tools, safety directors, claim agents, auditors, wage rate analysists, tax experts and many others.

To find out exactly whether a person is exempt from the hours ceiling as an "administrative employe," there are, first of all, two tests that apply to all:

Firstly, exempted persons must be paid $200 a month or more; secondly, they must all be engaged in "nonmanual" (brain) work which requires the exercise of "discretion and independent judgment."

But there are three other tests and, to be exempt, the "administrative employe" must satisfy at least one of them. It is not necessary here, as it is in the case of "executives," to satisfy all the tests.

Three Additional Tests

The three additional tests, one of which must be satisfied for exemption as an administrative employe, are:

He must regularly and directly assist The "administrative employe" an executive or another exempt administrative employe, or

He must perform under only general supervision "responsible nonmanual office or field work, directly related to management policies or general business operations," along specialized or technical lines requiring special training, experience or knowledge, or

His work must involve the execution only under general supervision of special nonmanual work directly related to management policies or general business operations.

Thus, if the "adinistrative employe" gets $200 a month, does brain work requiring discretion and independent judgment, and also satisfies one of the three tests cited above, he may work longer than 40 hours a week without overtime compensation.

A third exempted group are the thousands claimed as "professional employes." This covers a broad group but, according to Wage-Hour officials yesterday, it does not leave newspapermen in general outside the maximum hours protection of the wage laws.

No one may be exempted as a professional unless he is paid $200 a month salary. The only exceptions from this flat requirement are for licensed members of the medical and legal professions, who need not be paid that much to be exempted.

For professionals in general getting $200 a month or better, however, there are five other tests that must be satisfied before the professional qualifies for exemption from the 40-hour week.

Five Tests Must Be Met

These five tests, all of which must be satisfied, are:

(1) The professional must do work that is predominantly intellectual and varied in character, as opposed to routine work that is not intellectual.

(2) The professional must do work requiring consistent use of judgment and discretion.

(3) The work done by the professional must be of such a type that the time he needs to do it cannot be standardized.

(4) The professional, in effect, must not spend more than 20 per cent of his time in work performed by nonexempt employes; provided, that if this nonexempt or nonprofessional work is an essential part of his job this incidental work shall not be counted as nonexempt work.

(5) The work of the professional must either require advanced knowledge of the type usually gained by long specialized study or from specialized training, or else the work must be artistic in nature, such as could not be done by persons with ordinary manual and intellectual skills.

Under this definition of "professional," highly-paid singers, actors, scenario writers and other Hollywood luminaries would be exempted, officials said. Also, advertising agency copy writers might be exempted and perhaps even some highly specialized newspaper feature writers, but not the general run of journalists.

Marian Anderson Concert Is Subject Of Mural Contest

The Interior Department is going to have a mural commemorating the concert given by Marian Anderson, colored singer, at the Lincoln Memorial on Easter, 1939, when she was denied the use of a hall owned by the Daughters of the American Revolution.

The fine arts section of the Federal Works Administration yesterday announced a contest for the painting, which is to be 12 feet 8 inches, by 6 feet 10 inches. The prize-winning artist will receive $1,700, which was raised by public subscription through the Marian Anderson Mural Fund Committee.

The Anderson incident stirred up a tempest of controversy, and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt resigned from the D. A. R.

House Adopts Report on Land For Garrison

Measure Transfers Experimental Farm To War Department

The House yesterday adopted without debate a conference report on a bill transferring the Arlington Experimental farm from the Secretary of Agriculture to the Secretary of War, and authorizing the latter to spend $5,000,000 for the purchase of additional land and the establishment of a permanent infantry garrison.

The conference report represents a compromise between bills passed by the Senate and the House. Under the Senate measure the Arlington tract would have been divided between the Interior and the War Departments.

The legislation, as agreed to, gives the Interior Department a 200-foot right of way between Arlington Cemetery and Arlington Memorial Bridge, and authorizes the Secretary of War to transfer, with approval of the President, whatever portion of the land that is not needed for military purposes to the Secretary of the Interior.

The Washington Hoover Airport is expected to be purchased for $1,000,000 under the terms of the authorization as soon as money is made available.. Other privately owned land in the vicinity also is to be bought.

The Senate probably will act on the conference report today.

State Aide Defends Byrd's Handling of Forestry Fund

Baltimore, Oct. 14 (AP).—Walter N. Kirkman, State director of budget and procurement, asserted last night that Dr. H. C. Byrd, University of Maryland president, had planned properly the department of forestry's current budget.

The statement followed a complaint to the Governor Saturday by the advisory board of forestry that Dr. Byrd had "assumed personal control" of the department's funds and had kept matters from the board of regents and the board of public works.

Dr. Byrd, joining the discussion, called the advisory board's complaint "a misstatement" and said "whoever is responsible for the misstatement simply lacks knowledge of how the budget is handled."

Kirkman said that when the budget advisory commission recommended, two years ago, that the University of Maryland's budget be cut 16 per cent, this reduction was applied equitably to all departments and the university's board of regents was designated to "distribute the reduction."

G. O. P. to Stump Carroll County

Westminster, Md., Oct. 14. (AP).—Led by former Gov. Harry W. Nice, G. O. P candidate for the United States Senate, Republican candidates and campaign leaders will tour Carroll County Wednesday.

Scheduling the tour despite the fact that Wednesday is conscription day, party leaders said the caravan would start from Mount Airy at 8:30 a. m. and continue all day, ending at a mass meeting in the State armory here at 8 p. m.

Nice will team with Theodore F. Brown, Westminster attorney and Congressional candidate from the Second District, for the tour of brief talks and many handshakes.

Towns where the caravan of cars will stop include Taylorsville, Winfield, Eldersburg, Sykesville, Gamber, Finksburg, Hampstead, Manchester, New Windsor, Uniontown, Union Bridge, Middleburg, Keymar, Detour, Keysville and Taneytown.

Willkie Condemns 'Indefinite Rule'

the economic depression."

Willkie commented that "was the one issue that has been raised."

"I want to meet it fearlessly and unafraid," he said, while the audience laughed. "I did buy them at a sheriff's sale and in a great economic depression. It was while Franklin D. Roosevelt was President."

The nominee changed many phrases in his prepared address as he read it.

His voice broke frequently, but he did not pause in his address. There were boos when he mentioned "Hopkins, Ickes, Corcoran, Cohen and Wallace" as members of the New Deal group. Cohen's name had not been included in his prepared talk.

Willkie declared in a prepared speech that President Roosevelt, "is indispensable only to the little clique of power-hungry men who hide behind his smiling mask."

"A third term," he asserted, "will give them the opportunity they seek to fasten their grasp irrevocably upon this country.

"It is not the party of Jefferson and Jackson and Woodrow Wilson that has abandoned its principles. It is the New Deal of Hopkins, Ickes, Corcoran and Wallace, which has captured the Democratic Party."

Charges "Smear Campaign"

Willkie came here for a major address on the third-term question after expressing concern in earlier talks at Schenectady and Amsterdam, N. Y., that President Roosevelt "by some extravagant or reckless statement," might "bring warfare to our shores, when it may mean destruction for thousands.

"Taking this country into war when it is inadequately prepared is worse than betrayal of the country," he said. "It is just taking men to slaughter and to murder."

Making his chief drive to increase the normally Republican majority in upstate New York, Willkie accused the Democratic National Committee of conducting a "smear campaign" while the President was "making lofty statements about international affairs."

Willkie said he was fully cognizant of the seriousness of the international situation, but added that "our first duty is to keep lit the torch of liberty in this land so that it can be relit in other lands hereafter."

Willkie told his Schenectady audience he knew what "dislocations and disorganization" arose from war, because he and two of his brothers had been in active military service during the World War and all other members of his family had been engaged in various branches of war work.

"I hate war," he nominee said. "I hate it from the soles of my feet to the top of my head, and my hatred is not a theoretical hatred." national Democratic chairman "the New Deal dropped one of the most trustworthy pilots that ever guided the Democratic Party ship," Willkie said here.

At Rome, N. Y., Willkie was struck by a ripe tomato as e was driving back to the Rome railroad station after making a speech.

It was dropped into his open car from a bridge, and struck him in the lap. Willkie tossed the tomato outside and brushed off his suit with his handkerchief.

A State policeman riding in the procession ran up an embankment to the bridge, collared a teen-age boy and turned him over to the Rome police.

lican side, but again by a narrow margin.

The results for these States form part of the Institute's latest Nation-wide poll. The trend follows:

	Oct. 6 Poll	Today	Change Pts.
ILLINOIS
Roosevelt	53%	48%	—5
Willkie	47	52	+5
OHIO
Roosevelt	53%	52%	—1
Willkie	47	48	+1
INDIANA
Roosevelt	51%	47%	—4
Willkie	49	53	+4
MICHIGAN
Roosevelt	52%	48%	—4
Willkie	48	52	+4

Approximately one voter in every ten in the four States was undecided, the exact "undecided vote" being: Illinois, 11 per cent; Ohio, 10 per cent; Indiana, 9 per cent; Michigan, 9 per cent.

Interviewing in the poll was completed just before President Roosevelt's visit to Ohio last week-end, and the figures do not reflect any changes in sentiment which may have been caused by his Dayton speech.

Willkie's gains in the four States may represent merely a temporary phenomenon, and may not be typical of the whole Nation. On the other hand, if an equivalent rise is noted in other important sections of the country the Presidential race may turn into a nip and tuck affair in electoral votoes.

The last Nation-wide Institute survey (Oct. 6) found that whereas Roosevelt was leading with 499 electoral votes to 32 for Willkie, 221 of Roosevelt's electoral votes were accounted for by 11 States in which the President's popular vote lead over Willkie was small —4 per cent or less. If Willkie's gains in Illinois, Indiana and Michigan extend to other "close" areas, enough States would be pushed into the Republican column to make the electoral vote line-up far less one-sided.

The Institute's next complete State-by-State report on Friday will indicate whether this has happened.

Willkie's Text Condemning 'Pattern of Dictatorship'

New Deal Plans Call For Dominant Party, Syracuse Is Told

By the Associated Press

Syracuse, N. Y., Oct. 14.—The text of Wendell Willkie's speech here tonight follows:

It is a fundamental concept of democratic government that there shall always be available men who are fit to be entrusted with the responsibilities of government. That concept is today being challenged.

We are being told that in all this land, among all those 131 million people, there is only one man qualified to be our chief executive. There is only one indispensable man.

If that were true, America would have ceased to be a democratic nation. Let me read you the words of a great Democrat, a man who never reached the Presidency, but who was often entrusted with the leadership of his party—William Jennings Bryan. This is what he said:

"Whenever this nation can find within its borders but one man qualified for the Presidency, it will have reached a condition when its preservation will be a matter of little concern."

Have we reached that condition today? In effect, the New Deal, by its doctrine of the indispensable man, tells us that is so.

I say that the preservation of this country and of its democratic system is today the deepest concern of every one of us. If we in this country fail to preserve our traditional system, then the last hope of democracy will have been lost. We cannot and we must not fail.

Perhaps it may seem to some that in the troubled world we face the preservation of the third term tradition is a small thing. We see a world aflame. We see abroad ruthless military aggression trampling upon the rights of free peoples. At home we have seen for too many years long unemployment and economic distress. The tution. He determined to establish as a tradition the example that had been set by Washington. The principle of rotation in office, he declared, should never be dispensed with because there will never be a time when real difficulties will not exist and furnish a plausible pretext for dispensing with that principle. And in his autobiography he expressed the solemn hope:

"That should a President consent to be a candidate for a third problems of our day are heavy.

Oppressed by the difficulties, it is understandable that some of our people should feeel that the preservation of a mere tradition is relatively unimportant.

If it were merely a tradition that was being challenged, I would agree. Traditions as such are not sacred; principles are.

The tradition against a third term is no mere accident. The fact that it has never been violated in 150 years is no mere tradition.

Perhaps the best way to understand the importance of the principle underlying our rule against third term is to go back and examine the conditions under which this principle developed into tradition.

Why did Washington feel so strongly that he must refuse a third term? Why did Jefferson insist so strongly upon this principle?

The answer is that these men lived their lives in a world where tyranny had been the rule and freedom the exception. They knew that freedom is not something that can be taken for granted. They knew that freedom must be earned and they knew the price of freedom is eternal vigilance.

The men who established the third-term tradition knew that power long continued in the hands of one man will inevitably and insensibly corrupt him. They knew that no man is to be trusted with prolonged and increasing power.

Jefferson Felt Strongly

When Washington came to the end of his second term a war was raging in Europe. He, above all men of this age, was qualified by experience and character to lead our country in those troubled times. His popularity was such that he could have been unanimously reelected. Yet Washington deliberately chose to set the example of no third term.

Jefferson felt so strongly about the principle of rotation in office that he would have liked to have seen it written into the Constielection, I trust he would be rejected on this demonstration of ambitious views."

The tradition that Jefferson established was reinforced by Madison and Monroe. Jackson could have been President for life. But he, too, chose not to destroy the unwritten law against a third term. He chose deliberately to strengthen it.

Two Other Attempts

"I cannot but believe," he said, "that more is lost by the long continuance of men in office than is generally to be gained by their experience."

And since those days, the principle against a third term has been upheld by every thoughtful leader in American public life. Twice before in our history the attempt has been made to violate it. But never in our history until this year, has a major political party sanctioned the attempt.

Republican conventions have turned back the only two serious third term bids in our history. But justice compels us to say that it is the Democratic Party that has been pre-eminent in upholding this unwritten law. It was the founder of that party who established the tradition. It was the great popular hero of that party, Jackson, who reinforced it. And more than once it has been Democrats who have offered in Congress resolutions and amendments to limit the Presidential term.

It was the Democratic Party which on two occasions adopted planks against the third term. It was that party which in 1896 made this solemn declaration:

"We declare it to be the unwritten law of this republic, established by custom and usage of 100 years and sanctioned by the greatest and wisest of those who founded and have maintained our government, that no man should be eligible for a third term of the Presidential office."

This is among the deepest traditions of the Democratic Party, and the Democratic Party today would not be seeking to violate that principle had not the Democratic Party been kidnaped by the New Deal.

The truth is that it is not the real Democratic Party today which seeks to break the unwritten law against a third term. We know that many real leaders of that party are not behind this movement.

We saw the real nature of the third term movement revealed in the convention in Chicago.

We saw there how Carter Glass and other statesmen of that party were howled down by the voice from the sewers.

We saw a man who had given long years of faithful and devoted service cast aside. When James A. Farley was dropped, the New Deal dropped one of the most trustworthy pilots that had ever guided the Democratic Party ship. And since then we have seen day after day how real Democrats have been compelled by conscience and a loyalty to the principles of their party to reject the leadership which has captured it.

It is not the party of Jefferson and Jackson and Woodrow Wilson that has abandoned its principles. It is the New Deal of Hopkins, Ickes, Corcoran and Wallace, which has captured the Democratic Party. They seek to substitute for Democratic doctrine, the doctrine of the indispensable man.

And what makes the third-term candidate an indispensable man?

More than 9,000,000 men are unemployed in this country today. Unemployment is as great as it was four years ago when the third-term candidate was running for his second term. And today the New Deal tells us that no man living or whoever lived can get jobs for all those men. The candidate who now asks for a third term has proved that he does not know how to get our people jobs.

Is that what makes him indispensable?

The New Deal has spent more than $50,000,000,000. It has doubled our national debt. The New Deal candidate excels all others in the art of spending money.

Is that what makes him indispensable?

We have figures showing the degree of recovery that had been made by 18 leading nations of the world up to the outbreak of the war. These show that in industrial recovery the United States stood next to the bottom of that list. In reemployment, the United States stood sixteenth in that list of eighteen. The third term candidate has succeeded in putting the United States at the bottom of the list in economic recovery.

Is that what makes him indispensable?

The Democratic platform of 1932 promised "an immediate and drastic reduction of Governmental expenditures by abolishing useless commissions and offices, consolidating departments and bureaus and eliminating extravagance. The New Deal candidate repeated that pledge and here is the result:

We now have more than a million employes on the Government pay roll in the executive department. That is the highest in our history It is an increase of 73 per cent over the number of Federal employes in 1933 just after the third-term candidate took office for the first time. It is more Federal employes than Woodrow Wilson needed in 1918 to fight the World War. There has been an unparalleled increase in the number of Government bureaus and bureaucrats under the third-term candidate.

Is that what makes him indispensable?

While the New Deal has added hundreds of thousands of employes to the Government pay roll, the proportion of Government employes under civil service has declined. It has declined from 80 per cent in the last Republican year to 68 per cent in the last New Deal year. Under the third-term candidate, political preference has displaced civil service as the test of eligibility for Government service.

Is that what makes him indispensable?

Reported on Situation

Under the third-term candidate, men on WPA have been forced to contribute to New Deal campaign funds. They have been forced to sign pledges to vote for the New Deal candidates. In some sections of the country allegiance to the party in power has been made the test of eligibility to a WPA job.

In 1938 a Senate committee, a majority of whose members were Democrats, reported on that situation. The committee said that "organized efforts have been made and are being made to control the vote of those on relief work and that contributions have been sought and obtained from Government employes on behalf of one of the Senatorial candidates . . ."

And then the committee, the majority of whose members were Democrats, went on to say, and I am quoting:

"These facts should arouse the conscience of the country. They imperil the right of the people to a free and unpolluted ballot." Yet the third-term candidate in a speech in Kentucky in that same year referred to charges of political pressure on workers on relief and said:

"Personally, I am not greatly disturbed by these stories."

The third-term candidate is not disturbed that the right of the people to a free and unpolluted ballot has been imperilled.

Is that what makes him indispensable?

These are precisely the things that make the third-term candidate indispensable. These are the things that make him indispensable to the little clique of power-hungry men who hide behind his smiling mask. A third term will give them the opportunity they seek to fasten their grasp irrevocably upon this country.

The powers of the Presidency are great. The advantages of a President who wants to perpetuate himself in office are enormous. They were described by Grover Cleveland in these words:

". . . The patronage of this great office, the allurement of power, the temptations to retain public place once gained, and, more than all, the availability a party finds in an incumbent when a horde of officeholders, with a zeal born of benefits received and fostered by the hope of favors yet to come, stand ready to aid with trained political assistance."

And the longer a President remains in office the stronger are his powers to keep himself in office.

Franklin Roosevelt has taken into his own hands in eight brief years more power than any President of this nation ever had. He has declared the existence of more than 67 emergencies as the basis for the exercise of extraordinary powers.

He has obtained from the Congress blank check appropriations of $16,000,000,000.

Pattern of Dictatorship

He has multiplied the Administrative agencies which regulate our enterprise and has secured for these agencies the power of economic life or death.

He has established a vast organization of propaganda.

Congress rebuked his bold attempt to pack the Supreme Court. But time and human mortality have given him his way. He has appointed to the highest bench in the land five of his closest followers. Given another four years and he will fill with his own men not only the Supreme Court but the entire Federal judiciary.

There is the pattern of dictatorship—the usurpation of power by manufactured emergencies; the circumvention of the legislature; the capture of the courts. The pattern calls for the creation of one dominant party in which all the power is vested. It calls for the indefinite rule of one indispensable man.

These are the last steps on the road to avsolute control. These are the steps which we are now asked to approve. These are the steps whereby the people of other countries have lost their freedom. This is the way democracy has been destroyed. We must not let that happen here.

Registration Day to Mean Part Holiday

Employes Will Get From Two Hours To a Half Day

By Edward Ryan

Military registration tomorrow will mean part-holidays for thousands of Government employes, and at least one building here will shut down for the morning, officials said yesterday.

President Roosevelt decided against giving the Government employes subject to registration a full or part holiday and left it up to the agency heads to decide how much free time their employes would be given.

Secretary Early said yesterday that the President would expect the agency chiefs to treat their employes as well as private employers in giving enough time off to register. An executive order authorizing time off for registrants, he said, was no more necessary than one to let employes leave their offices on a hot day.

In most of the Government departments, a checkup showed, orders have gone out to bureau and division chiefs authorizing them to give eligible employes "sufficient time" to register. A few departments set time limits, from two to three and a half hours, while all the workers in the Census Annex will be given a half-holiday in the morning regardless of whether they are subject to registration.

Fourth to Register

The free time, it was pointed out, will not be charged to annual leave. Several hundred employes who have volunteered to help with clerical work at the registration centers will be given the day off to work there without leave deduction.

About 25,000 Government employes in the District, and 235,000 more outside the District, or more than a fourth of all Federal workers, will register tomorrow, according to estimates by the Civil Service Commission.

The commission reported yesterday that they are already set to fill whatever Government jobs are likely to be emptied by the call to military service. Vacancies resulting from the selective service needs can be filled either by probational appointment or temporary appointment, and employes who go away for military service can expect to step back into their old jobs afterward, it was explained.

Employes of the commission and of the General Accounting Office will be given 3½ hours off to register, officials said. In the Commerce Department, except for workers in the new Census annex, the time limit for registration will be two hours.

The half-holiday in the morning for Census annex employes was ordered after it was learned that more than 3,000 of about 8,000 working there would have to register. Most of the work in the annex is machine processing of the census returns, and officials decided that stopping half the machines would mean bringing the work for all employes to a standstill. The office will remain closed until 1 p. m.

Dr. Verne K. Harvey, director of the Indiana State Board of Health, has been appointed medical chief for the Civil Service Commission. He will set up a new medical division, combining the separate medical units in the examining and retirement divisions.

Calendar: Archibald MacLeish, Librarian of Congress, will speak tonight at the first dinner meeting of the new Washington Chapter of the American Society for Public Administration. John J. Corson, organization chairman, and Donald Stone, of the Budget Bureau, will discuss plans for the chapter. The dinner will be held at 6:30 p. m. at Barker Hall, Seventeenth and K Streets Northwest.

The District Federation of the N. F. F. E. will meet at 8 p. m. tomorrow in the Willard Hotel. New District committee chairmen include Henry G. Nolda, Pearle Cooper, Glen Gordon, Joseph E. Harry, Olive Greer, Nora James, Ola King, Fred Rhem, Harvey B. Gram, Charles Kothe, and Lee H. Shugar.

Old-time movies, with Charlie Chaplin, Harry Carey, Blanche Sweet, and others, will be shown at 8 p. m. Friday in Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard Streets Northwest, by the U. F. W. A. entertainment committee.

Rainbow Division veterans in the District will meet at 7 p. m. Saturday for a "supper rendezvous" at the Capitol Park Hotel.

Dozen Legislators Exempted by Law From Registration

At least a dozen members of Congress fall within the age limits for registration tomorrow for selective service, but they won't be in line. They were exempted when the law was written.

Those whom the Congressional Directory shows to be between 21 and 36 are Clyde T. Ellis, Arkansas, 31; Robert A. Grant, Indiana, 35; Robert K. Goodwin, Iowa, 35; Elmer J. Ryan, Minnesota, 33; Carl T. Curtis, Nebraska, 35; Frank C. Osmers, jr., New Jersey, 32; Edwin A. Hall, New York, 31; Robert F. Jones, Ohio, 33; Robert J. Corbett, Pennsylvania, 35; Albert A. Gore, Tennessee, 32; Lindley Beckworth, Texas, 27, and Warren G. Magnuson, Washington, 35.

Ugh! Indians Get 3 Days to Register For Heap Big Draft

Gallup, N. Mex., Oct. 14 (AP).—Big war medicine was being made today on the Indian reservations of New Mexico.

Registration for selective service was under way. Three days have been allowed for registration of Indians because of communication difficulties, and when all names have been taken it is expected 4,200 braves between 21 and 36 will be listed.

24 District Draft Boards Ready

not be counted against annual leave, it was announced.

Maj. Daniel E. Gould, of the Selective Service System's national headquarters, emphasized that eligible men will be expected to register in the districts where they live, rather than in those where they work. For instance, a man living in Anacostia and working in Georgetown should go to the designated school nearest his home, rather than a school in Georgetown to register. Residents of adjacent Maryland and Virginia who work in Washington likewise should register in their home counties.

Any other practice, Gould pointed out, would cause intolerable congestion in the downtown districts, whereas the city has been divided for registration according to density of population to distribute the burden evenly.

Persons unavoidably out of the city, Maj. Gould said, will be permitted to register wherever they are tomorrow, their cards to be returned here. Every man within the age limits, it has been pointed out, must register, even the bedridden being required to delegate someone to be sworn in as a registrar. He added that registration places will remain open after 9 p. m., if registrants are waiting.

Approximately five minutes should be sufficient for the average man to fill out the registration card, Maj. Gould said. More registrars will be available, he explained, than the number of election officials usually delegated to expedite matters at the polls.

Should anyone fail to register, Maj. Gould said, "he'd better go down to his local board early Thursday morning and explain why." If he has a justifiable excuse, he said, the board may permit him to register then; if not, he can be penalized under the law.

Though the local boards can function without official appointment, the District boards have been set up and all their members sworn in except two. These, according to Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, District draft executive, will be sworn in within the next few days. Names of replacements for ten local board appointees who, for various reasons, will not serve, will be sent to the District Commissioners today, Cox said, though "they may not recommend them to the President, since the boards are already legally full." While three members are required on each of the 24 local boards, five were appointed originally, making a total of 120 members.

Office space for the boards, which will pass on eligibility for service of drafted registrants and on claims for exemption, has been chosen, Cox said. The boards will be ready to function at a moment's notice after the first numbers are drawn, which may be as early as October 21.

As preparations for registration day neared completion, the District Commissioners announced yesterday they had accepted the resignation of Justice David A. Pine as chairman of the District registrants advisory board.

No successor has been considered, said the Commissioners, who accepted Pine's resignation "with regret." The resignation, Pine said, was "reluctantly" submitted because the chairmanship "is or might be incompatible with the judicial office I hold in the District."

A pretty problem was posed by the expected presence here during registration hours of some 30 Latin American army officers on a tour of United States defenses, some of whom are within the age limits established by law for registration. The draft law distinctly provides for the registratio of all aliens, except those with accredited diplomatic connections.

After a hurried conference with draft officials last night, Maj. Gould said these officers would be excepted. They are here, he pointed out, on limited passports, and anyway "we couldn't call any of them and to require them to register would simply clutter up the records without serving any purpose.

Holt Delays Senate Approval Of Dykstra as Draft Chief

Formal Indorsement Expected Today; House Goes on Partial Recess Basis Until After Election

Immediate confirmation of Clarence A. Dykstra to be director of Selective Service was blocked in the Senate yesterday by Senator Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia.

Approval of the selection is expected today.

Holt declared that the appointment of Dykstra, president of the University of Wisconsin, was "far superior" to most of President Roosevelt's nominations, but declared that as a matter of principle the Senate should follow usual procedure of not acting on nominations the day they are received.

Meanwhile, the House entered upon a state of suspended animation until after the election—unless an emergency should call members back to the Capital.

Allows Time to Campaign

Formally, the House merely agreed to hold its next meeting Thursday; but, actually, the leaders on both sides of the aisle reached an understanding that sessions would be held only every three days and that no controversial legislation would be brought up for action.

In this way, the House remains technically in session and can reconvene if a majority of the members so desire. At the same time, the "gentleman's agreement" permits the members to go home to conduct their political campaigns without fear of being embarrassed by surprise roll calls in the House.

House efforts to reach a formal agreement on the three-day recesses were twice balked by members who refused to acquiesce in the necessary unanimous consent.

Majority Leader McCormack asked approval of the entire arrangement which he had reached with the Republican leaders.

Representative Burdick (Republican), of North Dakota, objected on the grounds that "we might be in war by tomorrow night—if any nation declares war against us, we're in."

"Shouldn't Tie Our Hands"

Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, suggested that "we should not tie our hands," in case some "noncontroversial" national defense matter should suddenly arise.

McCormack then asked the House meet Thursday but conduct no business, but Representative Church (Republican), of Illinois objected. Finally, McCormack whittled down his original request for three-day recesses still further—to a request merely to adjourn to Thursday. Unanimous consent was given.

Nevertheless, it was generally understood that despite failure to reach formal agreement, the result would be the same. Very brief sessions will be held on Mondays and Thursdays until after the election—probably until November 18.

Germans Say They Expected Roosevelt's Dayton Speech

Berlin, Oct. 14 (AP).—Authoritative Germans said today President Roosevelt's Columbus Day speech on American defense was addressed chiefly to North and South America and commented, "We already know his attitude."

"We wonder," these sources added, "how far one can go helping a belligerent and yet remain neutral. That, however, is for Americans to decide."

Buenos Aires, Argentina, Oct. 14 (AP).—President Roosevelt's address drew editorial applause here today.

The newspaper La Nacion said "the speech was inspired by the ideal of liberty, equality and Christian brotherhood, which makes the American countries the goal of those who suffer persecution."

"Although we now prepare ourselves to face danger," it said, "war has never been the American ideal."

La Prensa said "in the European nations, where the thirst for conquest and vengeance prevails, liberty, which is happiness, cannot flourish. The liberty so dear to Americans is being defended by only one nation and if she is defeated we shall suffer the bitter consequences."

Mexico Pleased

Mexico City, Oct. 14 (AP).—A high official of the foreign ministry tonight characterized President Roosevelt's Dayton address to the Western Hemisphere as a "masterpiece that marked the opening of a new era of mutual understanding and community of ideas among the Americas."

The spokesman, who asked to remain anonymous, said the speech had created a "profound and favorable impression" in Mexico because Mr. Roosevelt spoke in terms of "the needs of the American Continent and not of the United States alone."

"United States Presidents have frequently talked of cooperation among the American republics and of Pan Americanism," he said, "but they have never really seemed to understand the significance of Pan Americanism to Latin America.

Closer Relations Expected

"That is why we in Mexico were so impressed by President Roosevelt's address. He plainly indicated he understood the idea of continental cooperation as we have envisioned it. His words created a profound and favorable impression here."

A Mexican diplomat said, "I am confident that the cause of Pan Americanism and closer relations among the republics of the New World were furthered by Mr. Roosevelt's speech."

Some Firms To Let Workers Off to Register

Provisions Range From Fixed Time To Staggered Shifts

Most private business concerns in the District will permit their employes to register tomorrow for selective service during office hours, a survey of representative organizations revealed yesterday.

Provisions range from a fixed time, usually in the morning, to a staggered time-off arrangement. Concerns whose workers are normally through early generally have made no provision for registration on company time.

Typical arrangements follow:

Florists of the George C. Shaffer concern, at 900 Fourteenth Street Northwest, will register at the time they would normally report for work, according to General Manager F. W. Meyer.

Automobile salesmen and mechanics of the Capitol Cadillac Co will follow the same procedure, registering before coming to work.

Hotel employes of the Wardman Park and Carlton will be given time off at staggered periods throughout the day. Managers George Johnson and Frank Swadley said.

Staggered Hours

Chain store employes of the Atlantic & Pacific food stores will be let off to register during slack periods, although many normally have Wednesday afternoon off anyway, according to Assistant General Manager J. C. Oliver.

Department store workers with the Hecht Co. will follow no set policy. If it is inconvenient for them to register after working hours they will be let out during slack periods in the day or permitted to come to work late, each department making its own arrangements.

Specialized business employes of the M. S. Ginn & Co. will be let out at consecutive periods during the day, according to General Manager W. Rhodes Lewis.

Capital Transit Co. employes will be asked to register before or after working hours, because the nature of their work makes replacement for short periods difficult.

Bankers and banking employes will likewise register generally after hours. An official of the Riggs Bank said: "To the extent that we are able to spare employes during banking hours we shall permit them to register throughout the day. However, it will be impossible to excuse all of our employes for this purpose." Others will register after banking hours and before 9 p. m.

During Free Time

Salesmen of the General Fireproofing Co. will be permitted to register at any time they are free during the day, General Manager E. V. Lee reported.

Laundry employes of the Tolman Laundry will be let off in some cases, although most will have ample time to register after they finish work at 4 p. m., President F. W. Mackenzie's office declared.

Clerks of Peoples Drug Stores will be let off some time in the afternoon except for those on the late shift, the manager's office said. Whalen's will follow the same plan.

Col. Munson Will Discuss Legal Queries; Symposium Nov. 1

What would you do if you were enlisted through tomorrow's registration and then committed a military offense while under civilian jurisdiction?

Legal queries of this type will be discussed in a series of public lectures by Lieut. Col. F. Granville Munson, U. S. A., of the Judge Advocate General's Department, at Catholic University, beginning today at 8:30 p. m.

Sponsored by the university's school of law, the series will consist of five lectures and a round-up symposium on American military law to be held in McMahon Hall auditorium, on the university campus.

Entered Army in 1917

Col. Munson, author of a standard text on military law, was in private legal practice for ten years before entering the Army in 1917. He was a captain with the New York National Guard and has been with the Judge Advocate General's Office for six years.

Lectures will be held each Tuesday and Friday for the rest of the month. Presiding at individual meetings will be Maj. Gen. Allen W. Gullion, U. S. A.; Comdr. Arthur B. McCrary, U. S. N.; Lieut. Col. Robert E. Wysor, U. S. A.; Rear Admiral Walter B. Woodson, U. S. N.; and Lieut. Marlin S. Reichley, O. R. C.

Participating in the symposium on November 1 will be Assistant Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson; Capt. Thomas L. Gatch, assistant to the judge advocate general of the Navy, and Col. Munson.

Planned for Selectives

Col. Munson will discuss the origin and development of military law and analyze the current written and unwritten law on the subject. Detailed consideration will be given the jurisdiction of courts-martial, their place in the Federal system, and instances when military and civil courts have concurrent jurisdiction.

Planned especially for selectives and lawyers handling military cases in civil courts, the lectures will examine the respective rights and duties of enlisted men and officers and the manner in which these rights may be asserted and protected in military courts.

This is the third annual series of free public lectures to be offered by the university. It is the first lecture series to be offered on military law in Washington, outside of the War College, according to Father Robert J. White, dean of the Catholic University Law School.

Steel Worker Hurt In 14-Foot Fall

Dewey Lee Kilbey, 42, of Warrenton, Va., a steel worker, suffered a broken back yesterday when he fell 14 feet from a building under construction at Westover Hills, Arlington, Va.

Kilbey was taken to Georgetown Hospital by the Arlington Rescue Squad. His condition was reported serious.

Guard Chief Derides Report Of Wholesale Resignations

Maj. Gen. Williams Terms 'Cockeyed' Article Saying Militia May Be Forced To Recruit Officers From 90-Day Camps

A published report that the National Guard, suffering from "wholesale resignations of officer personnel," might be forced to recruit its officer strength from 90-day training camps was labeled "cockeyed" yesterday by Maj. Gen. John F. Williams, chief of the National Guard Bureau.

Gen. Williams said a statement in the report that it was "a military secret" that "more than 600 of the approximately 4,000 Guard officers have resigned their commissions" contained "not a word of truth." Similarly he described another statement that "scores of officers have declared they are not willing to serve unless granted immediate promotion."

"As a matter of fact," Gen. Williams said, "there are about 19,000 officers in the National Guard instead of 4,000. In addition, some 2,200 enlisted men in the Guard already have qualified for commissions when vacancies occurred and we have about 900 officers on the inactive list who can be called into active service when they are needed."

The Guard, he added, is losing "more medical officers than we'd like" and is taking measures to replace these losses. There has been "some slight increase" in officer losses through resignation, physical disability, retirement for age and other causes over the normal annual loss of 1,350. He pointed out also that an increased demand for officers has arisen from the change in organization strength from maintenance to war footing, but that this demand can be more than met from within the Guard itself.

Records at the bureau indicate that since June, a total of 898 officers have left the service for all reasons, including resignation under the Guard Mobilization Act, it was said. It also was indicated that their places, except in the cases of some medical officers, have been filled already by promotions and commissions to men within the ranks.

Courthouse to Get Tablet This Week

A tablet with the Ten Commandments, which a committee of women representing all denominations in Montgomery County arranged to have made for a wall in the Rockville courthouse, is completed and will be placed this week, it was announced yesterday by Mrs. J. Frank Wilson, of Rockville, committee chairman.

According to Mrs. Wilson, unveiling exercises will be held later in the fall, probably about Thanksgiving. The county commissioners have expressed interest and a desire to be made part of the committee to arrange for the formalities.

Text of Lindbergh's 'Plea for American Independence'

November Election To Determine U. S. Future, He Declares

Here is the text of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's address last night, entitled, "A Plea for American Independence:"

I come before you tonight to enter a plea for American independence. It is amazing that one should have to plead for American independence in a Nation with a heritage such as ours; in a Nation which in its infancy revolted against foreign control, and whose people have fought time and time again against the armies and interference of the Old World. Yet the independence and the destiny of America were never more in jeopardy than they are today.

During the first century and a quarter of our existence as a free and independent people, we opposed, and opposed successfully, all the major powers of Europe. At the same time that our forefathers pushed through the wilderness to the Pacific, they forced, one after another, England, France and Spain, to discontinue their interference with American affairs.

In World Crisis

We won our independence from England when we were a Nation of less than 4,000,000 people. We numbered only 10,000,000 when the Monroe Doctrine was established. With a population of 35,000,000, even though we had just emerged from four years of Civil War, we made France remove her invading armies from Mexico. Later in the century, with a population of 75,000,000, we forced Spain to withdraw entirely from the New World.

Why, then, with 130,000,000 people, are we being told that we must give up our independent position, that our frontiers lie in Europe, and that our destiny will be decided by European armies fighting upon European soil? What has happened to this Nation that it fears in maturity the forces that it conquered in its youth? What change has come over us; what foreign influence has sprung up among us? Where is the blood of such leaders as Washington, Jefferson and Lincoln; blood that stood firm on American soil against the threats, the armies and the navies of the greatest empires on earth?

What we lack today is the type of leadership that made us a great Nation; the type that turned adversity and hardship into virility and success. No one doubts that we are in the midst of a world crisis. No one denies that our defenses are weak, that our debt is great, that dissatisfaction is rising among us. We do not question the need for rearmament, for reform, for a better economic system.

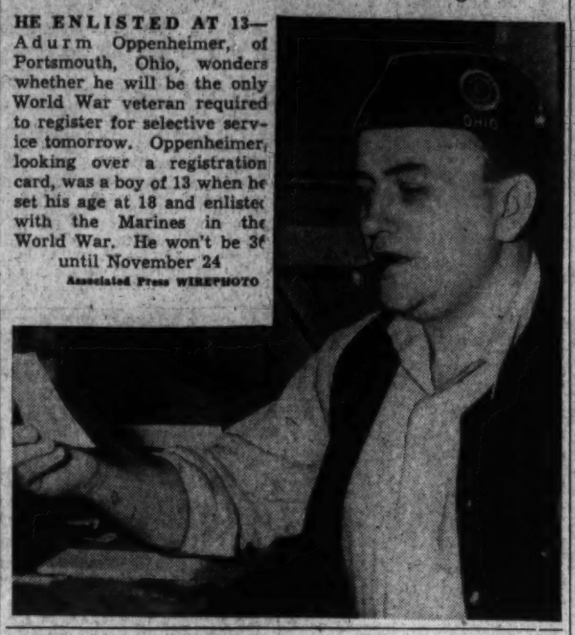
What we do question is the leadership that has brought these conditions upon us. We question that the men who were unable to foresee these conditions in time to avoid them, who could not foresee the war in time to prepare for it, who refused to believe reports of rearming abroad when there was still time to take action, are now competent to carry this Nation successfully through a period of great crisis. Under their leadership, we have alienated the most powerful military nations of both Europe and Asia, at a time when we ourselves are unprepared for action, and while the people of our Nation are overwhelmingly opposed to war.

There is no question about the fundamental courage and solidarity of Americans when our national welfare is at stake. There is no division among us about the defense of our own country. We have always been ready to fight against the interference of foreign powers in our affairs. If need be we are ready to die for the independence of America, as our forefathers have died before us when necessity arose. On a clearly American issue we stand a united Nation. It is only when we are asked to take part in the quarrels of foreign countries that we divide; only when we are asked to merge our destiny with that of other lands; only when an attempt is made to transfer loyalty for America to loyalty for some other nation.

Confidence Lacking, He Says

The fact is today that we are divided; we have not confidence in our leaders. We have not confidence in their efficiency or in their judgment. Instead of a Washington warning us against the wiles of foreign influence and excessive partiality for any nation, we are told that our frontiers lie in Europe. Instead of a Lincoln telling us that if danger ever reaches us it must spring up amongst us, and that it cannot come from abroad, we are informed that we may be invaded from the ice-bound mountains of Greenland; and by fleets of nonexistent transatlantic bombers.

World War Veteran Must Register



HE ENLISTED AT 13—Adurm Oppenheimer, of Portsmouth, Ohio, wonders whether he will be the only World War veteran required to register for selective service tomorrow. Oppenheimer, looking over a registration card, was a boy of 13 when he set his age at 18 and enlisted with the Marines in the World War. He won't be 36 until November 24

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

We find the same men who have led us to the greatest national debt in our history, now telling us that as a Nation we are weak and unprepared; that we must appropriate more billions of dollars, and devote more years of time, to building up our military forces. These same leaders who have failed to solve even our peacetime problems, who have a consistent record of promise followed by failure, now ask us to put ourselves in their hands again as they lead us steadily toward that climax of all political failure—war.

They do not tell us openly what their intentions are. They say we should leave our decisions and our destiny to specialists—to their particular specialists—to the same specialists who have made us a weakened Nation in the center of an antagonistic world. They harangue us about "democracy," yet they leave us with less knowledge of the direction in which we are headed than if we were citizens of a "totalitarian" state. We are told that we are being prepared to defend America at the same time that orders are placed for the type and quantity of armament that would be used for a war in Europe.

We do not need untold thousands of military aircraft unless we intend to wage a war abroad. What we do need is a thoroughly modern and efficient Air Corps, trained, equipped and maintained for the specific mission of American defense. What we need even more, however, is balanced action, a clear-cut plan, and a consistent attitude.

Adequate defense does not necessitate this alarm and confusion. With intelligent leadership, we could have built an impregnable defense for America without disturbing seriously our national life and industry. We have already spent more than enough money to have done this. With an Army, a Navy and an Air Corps of high quality and reasonable size, we could have maintained our position with safety at home and respect abroad. But today, while we listen to talk of aircraft, guns and battleships, couched in figures so astronomical that they compare only to our national debt, we find ourselves in confusion at home, and under ridicule abroad.

The same thing is happening to us that happened to England and France. We have been led to debt and weakness, and now we are being led toward war. Instead of building their own national strength, the peacetime leaders of England and France told their people that security lay abroad, that the best way to defend their own countries was to fight for Poland. They followed this advice and failed. Now we in America are being told under similar circumstances, and by leaders of similar caliber that our security lies abroad; that the best way to defend our own country is to defend England.

All these lessons of Europe have passed unheeded before us. The effort that should have been devoted to the welfare of our own Nation has been spread ineffectively over the difficulties of other parts of the world. The attention that should have been concentrated on the defense of America has been divided by a controversy over what part we should take in the wars of Europe.

If we desire strength, and freedom, and independence for our country, the first step must be to assure ourselves of leadership which is entirely and unequivocally American. When a man is drafted to serve in the armed forces of our country, he has the right to know that his government has the independent destiny of America as its objective, and that he will not be sent to fight in the wars of a foreign land. The doctrine that we must enter the wars of Europe, in order to defend America, will be fatal to our Nation if we follow it. When men are called upon to fight and to die for their country, there must not be even the remotest question of foreign influence involved.

If we desire the unity among our people that is essential to national life and strength, we must select leaders who believe sincerely in national defense, but who are wholeheartedly opposed to our involvement in foreign wars.

Above all, we must select leaders whose promises we can trust, who know where they are taking us, and who tell us where we are going. The entire future of America and of our system of life hangs upon the action we take and the judgment we show. It does not depend upon the outcome of the war in Europe, but upon men, regardless of their party, who will lead us to strength and peace, rather than to weakness and to war.

Our vote next month can either bring or avoid a disastrous war for our country. We can either throw the world into chaos or lead it to new heights of civilization. The future of America and of our system of life hangs upon the action we take at that time. It does not depend upon the outcome of the war in Europe, but upon the quality and wisdom of the leadership that we choose for our Nation in November—upon our Congress, upon our Senate, and upon our President; upon men, regardless of their party, who will lead us to strength and peace, rather than to weakness and to war.

Connie Bennett Extends Extras a Helping Hand

Annual Scholarships to Be Awarded Unknowns; Another New Picture House Opens Thursday; This, That and the Other About the Theater

A HELPING HAND reaches down from the heights to give a lift to those struggling on the bottom rungs of the ladder to cinema fame—or so the story goes.

Constance Bennett, now exercising her talents on the Columbia lot with Pat O'Brien in an item bearing the working title of "Passage West," has announced that she will offer an annual scholarship at Max Reinhardt's Dramatic School in Hollywood for the "extra" girl judged best qualified to become a leading woman on the screen. The winning contestant will be awarded a six months training course at the school. Some 220 assistant directors will act as judges of the scramble. The scholarship will be known as the Annual Bennett Award.

BELL

The joker, if any, in this generous business would seem to lie in the fact that balloting will be my mail, although it is not stated in the announcement by whom the voting is to be done. If by the picturegoing public, it would be interesting to know by what means the extra girls are to be identified, since their names do not appear in the cast lists and not even the most ardent film fan could be expected to know all of the extras in Hollywood by name. Anyhow there it is.

When 10 or 15 of 20 unknown aspirants are established as the leaders in the blind polling, the 220 assistant directors will go into a huddle and attempt to pick the ultimate victor. With a committee of that bulky number, it ought not to take over six months at the outside!

Come Thursday evening of this week, another residential picture house will be added to the constantly growing list of Washington's neighborhood theaters. Mr. Louis Bernheimer has sent out silver-sprinkled, robin's-egg blue invitations to the grand opening of his new Village Theater, 1307 Rhode Island Avenue Northeast, Thursday evening, October 17, at 7:30 by the clock. Mr. Bernheimer already operates the Newton, Palm, Sylvan and Jesse theaters in and around the Capital.

The newly redecorated Little Theater now is able to sell reserved seats for the first time in its history. The rows have been lettered and the seats numbered for the gala premiere of "The Baker's Wife" tonight, sponsored by the British-American Ambulance Corps. The premiere will be at 9 o'clock and will be attended by a distinguished audience representative of the Capital's social and diplomatic sets and charity workers. The regular run of the picture—and it is one of the best to come to a local screen in many a moon—will begin tomorrow morning, at a slight increase in prices but with no seats reserved.

Edward G. Robinson, who has been vacationing in New York, is, was, or is about to be in White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., to be guest of honor at the American Druggists Association convention and to receive its kudos—that's what the man says—for his portrayal of Dr. Paul Ehrlich in "The Story of Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet." Upon his return to the West Coast, Robinson will begin preparation for his starring role in the new picturization of Jack London's "The Sea Wolf," in which our old friend Hobart Bosworth was the original star, back in the old silent days. George Raft, Ida Lupino and Alan Hale will be in his support. His most recently completed picture, "A Dispatch From Reuter's," will be shown the delegates to the convention and soon will occupy the screen at the Earle Theater.

The Washington Players, under the direction of Bess Davis Schreiner, will bring Harry Welker, of the Cathedral Thespians and The Vagabond Playhouse, in Baltimore, to the Capital to appear in the leading role of their production of "Rip Van Winkle," scheduled for Central High School Auditorium Friday, November 1, at 8:30 p. m., and Saturday, November 2, at 2:30 p. m. This is the offering that was rained out of the Summer Festival season at the National Sylvan Theater last August. The cast surrounding Mr. Welker will be composed of the cream of Washington's resident actors.

After opening their 1940-41 season with a successful, three-night stand of "Three Men on a Horse," the Pierce Hall Players are wasting no time getting their second production under way. Tryouts—for roles of both genders—for "I Killed the Count" will be held tomorrow night. The place, Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard Streets Northwest; time 8 p. m.; date, October 16, which thus becomes a double registration day.

To blast the anticipations of the hopeful, the Earle Theater reiterates that "Knute Rockne—All American," with the Andrews Sisters starred on the stage, will not be held over for a second week. Jimmy Cagney and Annie Sheridan will open in "City for Conquest" on Friday—but positively.

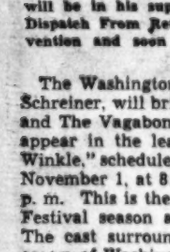
In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Oct. 14.

Kay Kyser, while talking to Peter Lorre, who plays a bogeyman in "You'll Find Out," said, "You know, Peter, I could be a psychopathic murderer myself. I look just as simple as you."



HOPPER

"Sure," replied Peter, "just swing an ax instead of a baton. As a matter of fact, I used to be very much like you—a baby-faced comedian until I played the killer in 'M.' Then I went from one horror to another until I reached 'Mr. Moto'—and now I don't know what I am."

Louis B. Mayer, since his return from the East, is going to concentrate on the youth at his studio, which means Rooney, Garland, Laraine Day, John Shelton and Doug McPhail. Ann Rutherford was called back from the South, where she again served as "Queen of the Cotton," to make a test for an important picture, and I understand Shirley Temple is willing to take $100,000 less salary to make her pictures at Metro. Well, I'll hand it to Louis B.—he certainly knows how to build 'em up.

Marlene Dietrich wants to be our first woman "cameraman." She spends as much time watching camera angles as she does acting.

After Warners signed Irene Dunne to do "Mr. Skeffington" they tried to get the author, Elizabeth (really Countess Mary Annette Armin), over from England to do the screenplay, but she doesn't like ocean voyages.

Alfred Hitchcock is directing his first comedy, "Mr. and Mrs. Smith," so that he can do "Before the Fact," which R.K.O. owns, with Cary Grant. Grant, in the picture, is by way of being a bit of a swine. Not only is he a petty thief, murderer, heel, but has a way with very nice women, and so captivates one of them that she'll drink a glass of milk, knowing it's been poisoned. That part may be played by Martha Scott.

In exploring the histories of the communistic social Utopias that dotted the United States in the early and middle years of the nineteenth century, Lawrence Langner and Armina Marshall unearthed two rich veins of material for their new comedy-drama of "Suzanna and the Elders," presented by Jack Kirkland in the National Theater last night as the first Theater Guild-American Theater Society subscription play of the season. One provided the authentic evidence that socialism is short-lived on the American continent; the other the supplemental hilarity attendant upon the attempted operation of a communal society that placed common interest above individual acquisitiveness, sanctioned plural marriages and fostered a practical application of the law of eugenics through the agency of a "breeding committee," whose aim was the evolution of a race of supermen.

The three acts and four scenes, laid in the Communal Hall of the Community House at Harmony Heights, are dedicated rather to the thesis of communistic failures than to the amusing complications that arise when the second generation begins to succumb to its orthodox and capitalistic instincts.

It is, at first blush, a daring charade that seems to treat matters of some delicacy with almost ribald frankness. The laughs which it engenders—and they are many—as often as not are preceded by gasps, even by an audience inured to the freedom of speech of the present-day theater. The authors, however, are absolved from any charge of deliberate suggestiveness by the fact that they have merely translated to the stage a factual record of the numerous enterprises that once flourished, if only briefly, in this country.

Capitalism Plays a Hand

The first act is purely expository of the conditions and manner of life that give rise to the developments that are to follow. John Adam Kent, the pseudo-fictional head of the Harmony Heights settlement, is identified as a genius of organization and leadership under whose guidance the socialistic colony has prospered for 30 years; his followers as abject disciples of his will. Then there comes upon the scene a churchly reformer and his son, who part company when the junior Owen perceives in the "new order" elements of the "free life" of which he always has cherished hopeful dreams. He also perceives Sister Suzanna Leeds and becomes an apprentice socialist.

The second act, the most brittly enlivening of the three, traces the capitalistic effect Charles Owen's inventions have upon the communal life of the group and leads easily and logically to the last act's dissolution of the sect—accomplished too slowly and a little too heavily to place "Suzanna and the Elders" unequivocally in the comedy brackets.

The piece is quaintly and authentically costumed and inoffensively performed, even in its most irreverent moments. Morris Carnovsky makes John Adam Kent a character of authority, leavened with a deep understanding of his flock and infinite patience with those who attempt to thwart his will, but never succeed. Particularly effective supporting portrayals are contributed by Haila Stoddard, in the title role; Lois Hall, as the "ugly duckling," who finally solves her difficulties "the easiest way;" Frances Bavier, as Patience Kent, and Paul Ballantyne, who gives an uncommonly fine impersonation of the rebellious Charles Owen. Among the others, Howard Freeman "steals" every scene in which he appears, as the shy Brother Tupper, whose courage eventually is bolstered by large doses of applejack. Royal Beal, Theodore Newton and Tom Ewell are among others to whom the comedy owes much.

If "Suzanna and the Elders" falls short of a rousing Broadway success, it will be, perhaps, because it deals with dated subject matter with which today's public is largely unfamiliar and toward which it may feel too keen a sense of remoteness.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Oct. 14 (INS).—The asking price for the film rights to Ernest Hemingway's unpublished novel, "For Whom the Bell Tolls," is $150,000. It has been voted the "book of the month" already and 200,000 copies on the first printing have been ordered. The Myron Selznick office is handling the sale of the book and, according to Donald Friede and those who have read it, it is even a stronger story than "Farewell to Arms," which Gary Cooper and Helen Hayes made for Paramount.

PARSONS

Gary Cooper, at the moment, is in Sun Valley, where he has been talking to Hemingway, who is also there, about playing the hero in the movie, "For Whom the Bell Tolls."

"Wilfred Lawson in "Pastor Hall" received so much comment he is being paged by every communication Darryl Zanuck can get into England to return to Hollywood for "How Green Was My Valley." Just this week I saw Lawson in "The Long Voyage Home" in just a small role. What a fine actor he is, but before everything else he is an Englishman and so great was his desire to help his country that he packed his bags and returned to London the day "Voyage" was completed.

Snapshots of Hollywood Collected at Random: When Jackie Cooper is old enough —and if he feels the same toward Bonita Granville as he does now—I'd like to put a little bet there'll be a marriage; Peggy Moran and Franchot Tone discovered each other in their movie, "The Trail of the Vigilantes," and now it's an every-night date; the Joe Pasternak-Dorothy Darrel romance will bear watching; Mary Beth Hughes is that excited over her first mink coat; Brod Crawford has given up his bachelor quarters and is looking for a home in Bel Air preparatory to his marriage to Kay Griffith; George Tobias says he hasn't been having a romance with Shirley Deane. She is engaged to his good friend, Russell Bowditch; Jane Darwell has the mumps of all things and she swears she's returning to juvenile roles right away.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

That Buzz Is Sea

That buzz on Stage 4 at Paramount studio was talk of the sea. More than 150 actors and technicians working in "Mystery Sea Raider," with Carole Landis, Henry Wilcoxon and Onslow Stevens, have been selected because of their seagoing experience, and as a result the between-scenes chatter has a salty tang.

Knife-Throwing

Jerome Cowan, a frequent "heavy" in motion pictures, added a new trick to his collection of lethal arts when he had to learn knife throwing for "Victory."

Starlet Audience Of One for Film

Rita Johnson was an audience of one at "Edison, the Man," recently. Although the actress attended the New York premiere of the picture, in which she plays Mrs. Edison, she was too busy with personal appearances and signing autographs to see the picture. When she returned to Hollywood she was immediately cast in "The Golden Fleecing," and, because she refuses to view "rushes," had never seen the film.

"I finally got tired of explaining to visitors that I hadn't seen the picture myself and seeing the look of disbelief on their faces," she explained, "so I arranged to have it run for me—and had the fun of being the only one in the audience."

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Oct. 14.

". . . and maybe you can miss a few clubs and start coming home earlier, dear. . . . What? A significant job? . . . Let me tell you—starting next week, the only significance you'll have will be in a common, ordinary number—on a conscription blank. . . . G'night."

11 P. M.: "I just spoke to Lion Feuchtwanger," a producer informs at Fefe's Monte Carlo. "He said he's applying for American citizenship on the first day possible. His wife is on her way over here. He's going to Hollywood for a rest, and to finish his newest work, the third volume of 'Josephus.'" . . . "When Dudley Digges was hired to replace Berton Churchill," an actor relates at Sardi's, "he told Kaufman & Hart he was taking the role on condition that Churchill could get it back as soon as he recovers—but, unfortunately, Churchill died." . . . "Before the openings of all Sam Harris' productions," a stage director reports at Toot Shor's, "the feminine lead always poses for a photo on the lap of Sam Roseman, Harris' prop man. Marilyn Miller, Margaret Sullivan, Mary Boland, Florence Eldridge and others posed with him, and the shows were all hits. But this wasn't done for 'George Washington slept here'—and Truex broke his leg and Berton Churchill died. On Monday, Jean Dixon, feminine lead of the show, will pose on Roseman's lap."

LYONS

12 P. M.: "Henri-Haye, the French Ambassador, comes here all the time," the headwaiter informs at the Versailles. "He used to be mayor of Versailles, and says that the Versailles murals here make him feel at home" . . . "I'm going to have my own Riviera night club in Miami this year," Ben Marden states at the Riviera. . . . "I just sent Quentin Reynolds a cable in London," Joe E. Lewis reports. "I cabled: 'We miss you over here. Hope they miss you over there'" . . . "This girl Minerva last week won the $1,500 prize, plus a round trip clipper flight to Chunking—for writing the best essay on 'The U. S. Future Stake in China,'" an editor relates at El Morocco. "Well, the day after she won the prize, the President recalled all Americans from the Orient—so her prize trip is canceled." . . . "Four movie companies are bidding for Hemingway's new book," a publisher states at the Gamecock. "The movie rights will be the highest ever paid for any book."

1 A. M.: "I'm crossing my fingers, hoping my luck holds out," Roma Vincent sighs at the Hurricane. "This week I was signed for the new Bobby Clark-Luella Gear show, signed to make Decca recordings, and on Wednesday I open at the Paramount." . . . Arthur Treacher, the Hollywood butler, and Curly Howard, of the 3 Stooges, give "double-talk" orders for beer rooms to the clerk at the Astor, who summons Bob Christenberry, the manager. He recognizes the playful screen duo, and assigns them the windowless rooms used by the chambermaids. . . . "AFRA's dispute with the radio networks will be settled on Monday," a radio executive declares at the Village Barn. "Both sides are crediting William H. Davis, of the State Mediation Board. The radio chains, always wary of arbitrators, are writing to Gov. Lehman, commending Davis" . . . "Spud Murphy, who received lots of publicity some months ago when he was designated 'Mr. Tin Pan Alley,'" a song-writer informs at Leone's, "has had his last three songs rejected by publishers."

3 A. M.: At the Stork Club, John Garfield admits to Ted Husing that he's never met a real society girl. "Here's one," says Husing, and introduces him to Betty Lawford, the famed bath-tub girl of "The Women." Garfield, dancing with Betty, asks: "What does a society girl like you do?" Betty tilts her nose and yawns: "Oh, flit from cocktail party to cocktail party. And what do you do?" . . . "In Sweden, at a dinner party, I asked a Nazi official about some comedians I had known in Germany, reported to have been put into concentration camps for joking about Hitler," Victore Borge, the Danish comic, reports at the Castleholm. "The Nazi said it wasn't true—and that there are no comedians in concentration camps. I asked about Paul Morgan, who died in Dachau. So he said, icily: 'They are either dead or have escaped—but there are no comedians in concentration camps in Germany.'" . . . "Franz Werfel," an editor informs at La Conga, "arrives Sunday on a Greek boat."

4 A. M.: "Frank Buck is going to Minneapolis," a producer reports at Leon & Eddie's, "to testify in a suit brought against the city. Buck will testify, as an expert, concerning the worth of an animal" . . . "I'm opening in George's set, in Buffalo," Mrs. Lois Andrews Jessel affirms at the Beachcombers. "Yes, we're selling our Hollywood house. Why? Well, we've been living in only one of the rooms, and the cats and dogs messed up the other ten rooms" . . . "Yes," Jessel adds, "and you just can't put all that in a house-for-sale ad." . . . "Watch Paramount's new musical, 'Dancing on a Dime,'" a director advises at the Famous Door. "It's a honey of a picture. Allen Rivkin wrote it." . . . At the 18 Club, William Saroyan is asked: "How does one become a writer?" . . . "That," he shrugs, "is like asking me how to become an Armenian."

5 A. M.: "Mexico will permit gambling casinos to operate, starting New Year's Day," a film executive informs at Longchamps. "A new casino at Cuernavaca is being prepared." . . . "Up at the Savoy ballroom," an agent states, "a movement will be started to change the name of the Lindy Hop to the La-Guardia Hop." . . . "Dewey has been investigating a jurist from another borough," a lawyer reveals at Reuben's, "questioning him concerning irregularities in the settlement of an infant's injury case. The story should break soon" . . . "Yes, I was on the Lancastria when she was sunk at Dunkirk," a British engineer relates. "When the ship keeled over, while I was in the water, the only thing I could think of was that, after 22 years at sea, I never had seen the inside of a ship's funnel, and this was the first time. It's gray . . ."

as one place correcting methods were considered "essential to proper control."

"The system of accounting prescribed for the Department of Vehicles and Traffic," said the report," . . . has not been installed and no reason for not installing it has been advanced." The system still has not been installed, it was learned at the Traffic Department yesterday, but no further comment was offered.

The report said there had been cooperation "in portions of the District government" but not enough "to effect the improvements believed vitally important.

Referring to "many forms of irregularity," the report declared:

"Records to which receipts were posted were not subject to proper control, taxes were abated and canceled apparently without authority, overdue taxes were not advertised as required by law and payment records never balance with cash records."

Efforts of the G.A.O. to correct the situation appear to be countered in the District government with a form of "passive resistance," the report added.

G.A.O. spokesmen said the same conditions exist today, "but we have washed our hands of the whole mess—given it up as a bad job."

Rezoning Asked By Takoma Park

Mayor Oliver W. Youngblood and the Takoma Park Council last night voted to recommend to the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission the rezoning of the four corners at Ethan Allen and New Hampshire Avenues from a residential to commercial territory.

The motion in favor of the recommendation was made by Councilman Joseph Martin, who said he was acting on the request of nearby property owners. Col. A. L. Conger opposed the motion, pointing out that business enterprises located at the intersection would create an unfavorable approach to Takoma Park.

Insurance Men Told to Blow Own Horns

Johnson Advises Life Advertisers Not To Rest on Laurels

Life insurance companies should not stand pat on "superb performances. The story of this performance must be told and the primary place to tell this story is in America's newspapers," the Life Advertisers Association was told at the opening of its annual convention here yesterday.

"Everyone knows how the life insurance companies have faithfully fulfille dthe payment of their contracts over the years, through wars, panics and epidemics; but comparatively few realize the extent to which the business has constantly improved the extent of its manifold services to the public," Holgar J. Johnson, president of the Institute of Life Insurance, said.

250 Delegates Present

Approximately 250 association members are attending the sessions, which will continue through Wednesday. New officers were elected at the opening session, as follows:

C. Smner Davis, Provident Mutual, Philadelphia, succeeding Karl Ljung, Jefferson Standard, Greensboro, N. C., president; A. S. Anderson, Equitable of Iowa, Des Moines, vice presedent; Carleton Loeble, Presbyterian Ministers Fund, Philadelphia, secretary, and C. Russell Noyes, Phoenix Mutual, Hartford, Conn., treasurer.

The sessions here will be interrupted for approximately 60 members when they go out to register nder the Selective Service Act on Wednesday.

metric tons of maize to be shipped to Germany from the present crop.

The theory that Yugoslavia's prosperity depends upon increasing industrialization finds support in the steel industry which has been receiving government assistance for the last five years, much to Germany's disapproval.

The demand that Germany receive all Yugoslavia's surpluses, however, might not create much difficulty, since Germany is the normal customer for such surpluses.

Sofia, Bulgaria, Oct. 14 (AP).—Bulgaria maintained a cautious military policy tonight amid reports that the Axis powers have urged the Bulgarian army to concentrate on the frontiers of Turkey, Greece and Yugoslavia.

Official quarters continued steadfastly to deny that mobilization steps have been taken.

Some diplomatic sources said Germany and Italy were seeking to have Bulgaria go on a war footing, coincident with Axis pressure on the remainder of the Balkan Peninsula.

They said, however, that their information indicated that Russia, with which Bulgaria has bonds of race and sentiment, had advised the Sofia government to "give the Axis everything but that (mobilization)."

The Bulgars admittedly were uncertain as to whether Russia now was approving or opposing Germany's expanding foothold along the Black Sea.

A flurry of rumors swept the Balkans concerning supposed German and Russian demands to individual countries, including Yugoslavia.

Members of the Yugoslav cabinet returned to Belgrade after a week-end absence, but no activity was noted which would substantiate a rumor that Germany has demanded passage to the Greek frontier for troops.

At the same time, Yugoslav officials indicated that there was no foundation to a rumor they were negotiating an alliance with Turkey and Greece.

Negotiations Reported Ended

New York, Oct. 14 (AP).—The Berlin radio broadcast a dispatch from Sofia, saying that negotiations between Germany and Bulgaria about several economic questions were concluded by agreement there today.

Mr. Flynn's Apology

Chairman Flynn of the Democratic National Committee has responded in a courageous and forthright manner to the malicious attack on Wendell Willkie by the colored division of that committee. He attributes the issuance of "this stupid document" to "some reckless individual." His chagrin over the incident is undoubtedly shared by every fair-minded supporter of Mr. Roosevelt's third-term candidacy.

Thus the circular drawing absurd, but nevertheless vicious, implications from the fact that Mr. Willkie's ancestors were German has in large measure defeated its own purpose. Slander of this sort may leave an unfortunate impression on some ignorant minds even though it is officially repudiated. On the other hand Mr. Flynn's apology will doubtless reach more people than did the scurrilous and bigoted document which he has denounced.

There is, of course, no element of secrecy in the fact that Mr. Willkie's grandparents fled from Germany to escape oppression. That story was fully told in the acceptance speech at Elwood. Unquestionably this heritage is one reason why the Republican candidate has such a keen appreciation of the human liberty this country affords. The real tragedy of this attempt to inject a racial issue into the Presidential campaign is that it comes from individuals who ought to have the keenest and most fundamental interest in eliminating racial prejudices.

It should not have been necessary to demonstrate anew the fact that bigotry is certain to recoil upon those who employ it. So long as there are any groups in American politics which have not learned this lesson, however, sharp and stinging reminders will be necessary.

By implication Mr. Flynn also apologized for the efforts of former Secretary Wallace and some others to establish the impression that Hitler would prefer to see Mr. Willkie elected. "No one for a moment questions Mr. Willkie's 100 per cent Americanism," the Democratic chairman said. That should put an end to the unwarranted pretense that Hitler is in any way an issue in the Presidential campaign.

Some Republican speakers replied to Mr. Wallace by trying to show that President Roosevelt is the real choice of the European dictators. In the short time remaining before election day politicians of both parties owe it to the public to drop this contest in innuendo and concentrate on such genuine issues as recovery, the third term and effective mobilization of the national strength for defense.

Quality Counts

The military collapse of France, overwhelmed by the German juggernaut in little more than a month, opened the eyes of Americans to certain dangerous weaknesses in our defense system.

Airplanes, tanks and motorized divisions had played a large part in winning the Battle of France for the Germans. Yet it is precisely in such categories that our shortages are most glaring. No wonder, then, that the present emphasis in American defense planning is on overcoming these shortages as rapidly as possible.

This demand for speed is logical and sensible. Yet in stressing quantity production we must not forget quality. The planes of today are likely to be obsolete next year. In other words, the emergency for which we are preparing might find us with a defense apparatus unsuitable to the actual needs of the occasion, unless airplane designs are adjusted to take advantage of every new improvement.

In a recent newspaper article Maj. A. P. de Seversky, the airplane designer, pointed out that the superior performance of British pursuit planes, more than any other single factor, has been responsible for saving England to date. This British superiority in quality has offset Germany's superiority in point of numbers. "We must never," said Maj. de Seversky, "take our eyes off the factor of quality, of performance, under the misapprehension that numbers alone can make up for defects in speed, maneuverability, armament and other such elements."

This is a point which those who have the rearmament program in charge can never afford to ignore. Our defense industries must be so geared that they can take immediate advantage of every important change in design so that the Army, Navy and Air Force will always be up-to-the-minute.

The Community Spirit

President Roosevelt has issued an appealing call for whole-hearted devotion to "the community spirit" which is reflected in the annual Mobilization for Human Needs. Every year citizens have an inescapable obligation to aid their less fortunate neighbors. This year the President also has good reason to invoke "the community spirit" as a means of strengthening those qualities which "make up a nation's morale."

In making this appeal Mr. Roosevelt correctly sees that the strength of America lies in mutual helpfulness, in cooperation among neighbors. "The vigorous expression of our American community spirit," he says, "is truly important." It is important not only as a means of aiding the less fortunate, but also as a means of cultivating a sense of group responsibility which is the basis of democratic government.

The grave mistake which the President makes is in trying to link up this sense of local responsibility with the relief policies followed by his Administration. Instead of fostering the community spirit, the centralized work-relief system operated by the WPA has actually undermined it. The operation of a relief system financed and controlled in Washington is the antithesis of the "intimate and human touch" which the President would like to inject into the handling of these problems.

Everyone knows that Federal aid became necessary to save an enormous number of persons from hunger and dire want. But that fact does not justify the transfer of responsibility for the administration of relief to officials in Washington. It is precisely because the community spirit is so vital to democracy that relief should have been left in the hands of local agencies, with national aid in supplying money and fixing standards.

Democracy cannot be strengthened by centralizing all power and discretion in a national capital. It thrives only when men and women in towns, villages and cities and on the farms have sufficient integrity, training in citizenship and patriotic spirit to solve their own local problems. In many instances they will need outside assistance. In some cases they may be inefficient, wasteful or even corrupt. But to forestall such shortcomings by transferring power over family welfare problems to Washington is to strike a blow at our system of self-government for the sake of easing an immediate emergency.

The country does indeed need more community spirit. But that spirit can never be attained by glowing verbal appeals if the sense of local responsibility is weakened by the perpetuation of unwise emergency policies.

The Spur Of War

President Santos of Colombia recently said that the European conflict has thrown into relief the deficiencies of his country's economic development. Not only in Colombia but also in other parts of South America there are many indications that the war has heightened interest in plans for expansion and diversification of crops and industries.

From Brazil, for instance, comes word that President Vargas who has been touring the Amazon Basin is laying plans for developing its agricultural resources and speeding up industrialization. He also has in mind a conference of Amazon nations—that is, neighboring countries with access to tributaries of the Amazon—"to adjust common interests and show a spirit of solidarity." In view of our great consumer interest in the products of these regions President Vargas suggests that the United States might be invited to participate.

It is worthy of note that these plans are being pushed independently, with emphasis on the cooperation of neighboring states of the South American continent. Undoubtedly our help—especially if it takes the form of loans and technical advice—will be welcomed. But the South Americans are looking for more than temporary aid to tide them over a crisis. They are eager to strengthen their economic structure, individually and collectively, to make themselves less vulnerable in the future to war or other disasters originating abroad. That is, they seek a greater degree of economic self-sufficiency, with consequent decreased dependence upon a few export outlets.

At the same time the desire to pursue their common objective cooperatively, rather than in isolation, appears to be strong, as indicated by various conferences and discussions dealing with transportation problems and methods of fostering trade among themselves. President Vargas expressed very well the dual objectives of this planning when he said:

> We should not think only of preventing possible collisions but principally of reasons for uniting and forming a true economic community. It is clear that acting thus will augment our reserves for defense and our capacity to resist any attempt at absorption.

Sensible Ruling

By liberalizing the definitions of executive, administrative and professional employes the Wage-Hour Administration has succeeded in exempting the great majority of higher-salaried white-collar workers from compulsory adherence to the 40-hour week. Hereafter employes earning $200 or more monthly, engaged in non-manual work requiring the exercise of discretion and independent judgment, need not be held to the statutory schedule of hours or be paid time and a half for overtime.

The necessity of exempting these higher-paid white-collar workers early became apparent. In many cases their work was of a type that could not be made to conform to a rigid schedule. Furthermore, few employes in this relatively favored group needed statutory protection against the evils of overlong hours. Finally, the administrative difficulties of enforcing the hours provisions as to workers not accustomed to fixed routine were insuperable.

The first Wage-Hour Administrator recommended revision of the law to exempt from its operations all persons whose regular earnings exceeded $200 per month. Opposition from organized labor caused Mr. Andrews to withdraw his proposal and nothing was done.

Now by an interpretative series of regulations, the present Wage-Hour Administrator, Col. Fleming, has succeeded in transferring most of these higher-salaried employes to the exempt group. That is probably the more satisfactory way of dealing with the situation. For comprehensive regulatory laws of this type cannot be constantly revised to deal with the innumerable special problems encountered by administrative agencies.

Unless a large amount of discretion to interpret regulatory legislation is vested in the officials who administer it, undue rigidity results, and effective enforcement is made unnecessarily difficult.

In case of the Wage-Hour Act the authorities have been called upon to decide many moot questions which the act itself fails to clarify. Protection against unfair or obviously wrong interpretations is afforded by the courts which, as Col. Fleming recognizes, are the final authoritative interpreters of the law.

Fearing The Light

It is difficult to understand the reasoning back of the resolution of the National Lawyers Guild urging President Roosevelt to veto the Voorhis Bill. That measure would require organizations controlled from abroad to make public their membership lists and their finances.

The Guild argues that "the necessary effect of this legislation will be either to force out of existence or to force underground many organizations now performing perfectly lawful functions because of a fear on the part of the officers of the organizations that the penalties of the law will be applied against them."

Certainly no organization that is open and above-board has anything to fear from such publicity. It is only those ostensibly operating as American organizations but actually serving as the agencies of foreign governments that will be adversely affected by the legislation. And it is entirely in the national interest, at this critical juncture, to expose the foreign strings by which such puppet organizations are controlled.

"There is $1 worth of gold in each 120 tons of sea water." It seems there's such a thing as an asset that is too liquid.

So Do We

From the Montgomery Advertiser

All we have to say is that we hope all the Selma Times-Journal says in the following editorial is correct and true:

"Officials at Washington have been advised that the secret weapon recently introduced by Great Britain with 'spectacular success' introduces an entirely new principle to aerial warfare.

"According to reports from Britain, the new weapon is a shell fired by antiaircraft guns to any desired level, where it explodes and releases a recently discovered gas. With the same density as air, this gas holds together something in the nature of an invisible cloud and in turn explodes by ignition.

"When an airplane engine noses into one of these invisible masses of gas, we are told, the resulting explosion rips the ship to pieces.

"Described as the most ingenious defense instrument the war has yet produced, this shell is expected to become a big factor in future developments. If it performs as described, the new shell offers possibilities of development which might eventually largely nullify the threat of airplanes as an offensive device. It is easy to imagine what a perfectly executed barrage of these shells would do to an invading air armada and the fact that defensive flying is handicapped by their use could be more than offset by effectiveness of well-placed gas 'walls,' invisible but deadly."

A Serious Choice

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In a few weeks the electorate of this Nation will go to the polls to choose a President of the United States. In view of the present serious situation, it will be well to give this matter much thought.

It will doubtless be a choice between war and peace, between dictatorship and democracy, between industrial chaos and industrial recovery, between unemployment and real jobs for men, between promises and fulfillment.

A continuance of the New Deal means the beginning of the end for a democracy which has been the inspiration and hope of all free men since the days of George Washington. It does not seem possible that the people will permit this to happen, yet the New Deal is being largely backed by forces that wish to destroy free government and will therefore resort to anything to win.

Mr. Willkie can save democracy for this Nation. Shall we men and women of America fail to do our duty at a time like this?

Health And The Series

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

That's a mighty good series of illustrated articles on medical preparedness appearing currently in The Post. Your pictures, captions and layout are unusually attractive and well organized. As for the subject matter, workers in the public health field know how difficult it is to present technical scientific material to the general reader interestingly and accurately. It seems to me that your staff writer, Gerald C. Gross, attains notable success in this aim. The stories are both timely and helpful.

And Povich did a whale of a good job of World's Series covering.

Boosts Mr. Willkie

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

It was cheering to read Saturday's page full of letters stressing the fact that Mr. Willkie is the man to pull the country through the present emergency. In the present state of experimentive chaos into which Mr. Roosevelt has plunged us, we need desperately the immediate help of a trained organizer who with speed and efficiency can reshape into a going concern this abused contraption, our Government.

We need a man who, having signed the checks, can put push into our defensive agencies. We need one who instead of cabling abroad, "Please, please don't fight!" can talk horse-sense to foreign economists. We need a man who had to start from scratch himself and who achieved influence and position by his own efforts, for in this kind of citizen lies the sole strength of our Nation.

Twelve years is too long a term for an American President. Thus began the terms of Hitler and Mussolini. We shall not need either Mr. Roosevelt or Mr. Willkie for 12 years. Examination of the portraits of Presidents before and after eight years of service show conclusively that they have contributed the best of their effort in that period of time.

In a Nation of 130,000,000 people where public education is compulsory, we can without too much difficulty find one capable man every four or eight years, who can put fresh effort, along with a Congress of carefully chosen representatives and a Supreme Court supposedly made up of the noblest judicial minds in the country, into the advancement of the United States.

Warning To Motorists

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The following is offered to the motorists of the District of Columbia in order that they may be spared the embarrassment and the loss of time and of money which the writer experienced at the hands of two officers on October 8.

Three cars, one behind the other, were stopped at Florida Avenue and Sixth Street Northeast; the drivers of two of these cars (one of them being myself) were personally escorted by the officers to the police station where we forfeited $2 each on a charge of passing to the left instead of to the right of an elevated safety zone platform, where passing to the right was indicated by an arrow.

Because this regulation in the past has been violated as much as it has been obeyed, because such general violation has had at least the tacit consent of the local police, and because many drivers have acquired the habit of yielding to convenience instead of to the regulation, it seems fair that all motorists in and around the District should be given notice that strict enforcement of this regulation is to be in effect from now on.

Most conservative drivers will agree that a capable driver who passes to the left of such a platform does not jeopardize the life or property of anyone else, and that an attempt to turn to the right on approaching such a platform during rush hours could in many cases be a source of danger to those following.

Do the tactics of these arresting officers, in subjecting the drivers to the embarrassment of being officially escorted to the precinct station for such a minor offense, conform to the accepted standards of policing motor traffic in the Nation's Capital?

Praises Petain

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

My only reason for writing this letter is to ask whether it is quite fair of our writers and commentators constantly to criticize Marshall Petain, who is trying to do the best he can to save his country. France is like a man bleeding to death, and each one of us seems to want to pour some salt and vinegar on her wounds.

When Marshall Petain accepted the leadership of the French government he realized that, with Gen. Weigand, he was the only man the French would trust at such a time. He knew it to be a thankless task. He wanted his countrymen to go back to the virtues of their race.

It will be hard, but I believe they will work and suffer, and soon, sooner than we think, I believe that France will rise again. We should pray for it, and not criticize, for she is the only true friend America has.

Petain is a Frenchman; he knows his country. He knows how to speak to the people, because, in common with them, he loves the soil and his land.

Comments on "Political Tyranny"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The Richmond Times Dispatch of October 5 carried a reprint of an editorial from The Post having as its title "Virginia's Political Tyranny."

The story details the amazement of many friends of Senator Glass when he was quoted as saying that he would vote for President Roosevelt in spite of the Senator's stiff opposition to a third term.

The editorial is very interesting, and it is rather difficult to have information of this character printed in the majority of the papers in this State for obvious reasons.

A sentence which appears in the next to the last paragraph is to my mind of vital interest to every citizen of the State of Virginia—"In this instance, however, the Democratic Party of Virginia has come dangerously near to acceptance of this totalitarian system."

In my opinion, if you would make a little further investigation into the organization of the Democratic Party of Virginia, and give a little light as to the person or persons who are responsible for this condition, I am quite sure that not only Virginia would be interested, but also the Nation at large, as the men concerned are national figures.

WM. McC. PAXTON.
Norfolk, Va., Oct. 10.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Your editorial in The Post of October 4, "Political Tyranny," in which you wax indignant over Mr. Glass' having to vote for Mr. Roosevelt is so amazing that I cannot resist the temptation to tell you some facts of which you seem unaware.

To those of us who bitterly resent the machine by which Mr. Glass and Mr. Byrd have tyrannized over Virginia for years (long before 1932, when they must have passed the tyrannical role to which you refer), it is rather a gleeful occasion when they get caught in their own machinery.

This indignation over the machine in Virginia is only equaled by my mortification and shame at the contemptible position Virginia held at the Democratic convention—Virginia, whose statesmen in the past have guided her in ways of which we are so proud. If I am not mistaken, it was Mr. Willkie who said recently that machines are the curse of our country, political machines. Indeed, they are, and while they are not all as vulgar as the Huey Long regime, or as bold as some of the selfish, unscrupulous business interests, they are all alike in one thing. Instead they are all trying to divert the attention of the public from themselves, the real dictators, by calling Mr. Roosevelt "dictator."

If one-tenth of the effort spent in putting obstacles in his way had been applied sincerely to help the New Deal (the highest expression of real democracy on a national scale the world has seen and real democracy is an offshoot of Christianity) this country would not be in such danger at present. The magnificent strokes in foreign policy won by Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Hull were the results of a hard fought obstacle race, also.

The Post Impressionist

Park Row

Gorham Munson's interesting Post Impressionist sketch, "Greenwich Village," causes me to turn to the clock back to a period nearly a quarter century prior to the time of which he writes. Then the Village was in the hey-day of its existence, and among the principal patrons of its several famous eating places were members of the Fourth Estate.

Park Row of long ago led much the same life, and cultivated much the same vagabond customs and manners as did the small settlement south of Fourteenth Street.

I recall a room on the second floor of the New York World's first home in which stood a long, wide table, accommodating eight persons, with plenty space between chairs. It was a table littered with copy paper, pencils, mucilage pots with brushes with which to paste the city flimsy; cigar stubs, pipes and beer bottles—some of them dead soldiers; others very much alive. Into the necks of several dead ones had been thrust candles, to reinforce gas lights above.

"Randall, boil that stuff down to a stick," said Charles Rich, head of the copy desk, as he handed him a manuscript of eight pages.

For entertainment of the staff, Culver passed along a wire, just received from Dallas, Tex. It read: "A cyclone largely composed of wind passed over this place today."

From a cubbyhole across the hall issued a bellow. "What's the best for the first page? Nothing in the proofs I've seen is worth a tinker's damn!"

The voice was Col. Cockerel, a live-wire newsman, imported from Missouri, to become managing editor of Joseph Pulitzer's second love, his first having been the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, which he had bought on a shoestring and had built up over the bruised bodies of many "prominent" citizens, from whom he had scalped the sheep's clothing. Cockerel subsequently was sent abroad as correspondent, and one day, in Cairo, Egypt, he dropped dead as he left a barber's chair.

While busy at that copy desk a hand was placed on my shoulder, and someone said, "What are you doing, young man?"

Glancing one side, I recognized a face that was lowered to near the desk level, in order that eyes, once bright, might pierce a cataract mist.

"Writing an underline for this cut, sir."

"Ah!" He picked up the proof sheet for closer inspection. Then—"That will never do! Never! When you print the picture of a cow in the World you must write underneath, 'This is a cow'."

Early of an afternoon, Smith spied me, the only occupant of the city room, and told me to visit a Williams Street office and endeavor to unscrew words from the individual who was commencing to enjoy a recess from the White House.

A plump office boy indicated a larger room, wherein sat an equally plump employer. This dialogue ensued:

"Mr. Cleveland?"

"What may I do for you, son?"

"I am on the World, and the World would like to know what you think of the P. M. L."

He stared for a full minute, from eyes resembling those of an elephant, then a smile, curving the lips, was chased away by a broad grin, as he said:

"The P. M. L.? The P. M. L? What the hell is the P. M. L.?

"Mr. Cleveland, do you intend that for publication?"

"I never say anything that I do not mean, and I never object to being quoted, when quoted correctly," replied the man who once defied both Great Britain and Germany to collect by force debts due them from Venezuela.

The largest type in the World's composing room carried the sarcastic rejoinder across the first page next morning.

The Peoples' Municipal League was sunk; scuttled by Stephen Grover Cleveland; Tammany and the World became twain again, and I received a bonus check for $25.

One evening, when I was acting city editor, a Washington special told that both Senate and House had passed a bill that would bring about a radical change in the Nation's financial setup. As this action would affect many residents of New York, the city room got busy on a local story. Copies of the telegram were handed reporters, who started out to interview men whose names had weight in Wall Street, the star reporter being assigned to Henry Clews, who in that day was the outspoken campion of big business.

Soon the city room was cleared of all newsmen, except Arthur Kenealey, a graduate of Oxford University, who had been in America one month, looking upward from the lower rung of a newspaper ladder.

"Hotel arrivals," printed on a sheet of city flimsy, announced that ex-President Rutherford B. Hayes had registered at the Fifth Avenue. He must be seen, so Arthur was given instructions, and he sallied forth, armed with the telegram from the Nation's Capital.

The reporters returned in due season, and what they wrote was woven into a column article. Kenealey's stuff was good, and some of it was used in the first paragraph.

It was a busy night, and no one had an opportunity to talk with the cub from London, who hovered near the city desk, evidently anxious to get something off his chest.

Finally when Thirty had been sent to the composing room and tobacco glowed once more in pipes and cigars; when "Pop" Hicks placed his heels on the desk and tilted back his chair, young Kenealey had his inning.

"I fear that I committed a faux pas," he said apologetically.

"How come?" he was asked.

"The gentleman you sent me to interview became very angry."

"What about?"

"I really don't know. When I had completed the interview I asked him a perfectly innocent question, and he ordered me to leave his room."

"What was the question, Arthur?"

"I merely asked him the name of the bank where he was president."

Today And Tomorrow

The Washingtonian Principle

IN ANOTHER three weeks the election will be over. Either Roosevelt and Wallace or Willkie and McNary will have been elected. The Senate will remain Democratic in either event. The House will certainly be Democratic if Roosevelt wins and probably it will be Republican if Willkie wins.

If Roosevelt wins, his task will be to come to an understanding with the Willkie Republicans and the disaffected Democrats. He will be able to do that only if he places the ablest among them in posts of responsibility, especially posts involving the relationship between government and business, and if he gives the national defense priority over all commitments and considerations.

If Willkie wins, his first task will be to make clear to the country and to the world that in the interval between election and inauguration, the Government of the United States will not be paralyzed by indecision and impotence. His second task will be to establish his leadership in and to organize the discipline of the Republican Party. His third task will be to come to an understanding with the President and with the Democrats in Congress and with the key men of the Administration so that in the interval between election and inauguration and afterwards in the interval during which the new men he appoints are becoming acquainted with their duties, national affairs will continue to be carried on without delay or confusion.

THIS BEING the situation which will confront the winner on the day after his election, I conceive it to be the part of wisdom, and indeed a public duty of the first order, for each of us to do what can be done to see that this campaign is conducted in such a fashion that no unbridgeable chasm is opened up between Mr. Willkie and Mr. Roosevelt, between the two party machines, and between the large masses of sincere and loyal citizens who prefer the one or the other. I realize very well that this is not a dramatic view of the election: It would be more exciting, no doubt, to become inflamed and explode with the cry that Mr. Roosevelt is conspiring to be a dictator or that Mr. Willkie will end by trying to appease the dictators.

But I consider that in the circumstances of this hour, the gravest one in our lives, campaigning of that sort is like shouting "Fire!" in a crowded theater; even if someone thinks there is a fire, it is his duty to keep cool and collected and to remember that in human affairs a panic is far worse than a fire, for a fire can be put out. But a panic is almost certain disaster.

IN MY VIEW the character of the campaign is more important than its results. A violently conducted campaign which divides the people and poisons their confidence in one another and in their leaders wins no votes for either side. But it will place an additional heartbreaking burden upon the man who must bear the awful burdens of the next President of the United States. In the next year, in the next two, three and four years, the burdens of that office will be greater than any borne by any man who ever entered the White House, excepting only Washington who had to organize the Nation and Lincoln who had to keep it united.

No one is equal to the task. In himself no one can be. Whoever is President, he must rise to the occasion, he must be made equal to it, and this is impossible unless he is certain of the loyalty and affection of a united people, unless there can be generated here something of that heroic unity with which the British people have amazed the world. It is the simple truth, I believe, that if free institutions are to pass victoriously through their ordeal, each of us has to behave more magnanimously, and thus more nobly, than he is normally inclined to behave. The ordinary ripsnorting of a happy-go-lucky campaign is just not good enough at a time when the democratic system stands on the defensive, fighting for its existence.

TO THOSE who may think this is too rarefied a view of practical politics I should reply that there is an older tradition than the party tradition. It is the tradition that descends from Washington, who in his deepest convictions, his practice—and his most fervent advice to his countrymen—represented the principle that men may, and in great times should, take their stand above the struggle of parties. Had Washington been a partisan there might well have been no American Republic. That is what Washington saw, that is why he dreaded the spirit of faction, that is why he made a government in which both Hamilton and Jefferson participated.

In ordinary times the Washingtonian principle is perhaps undesirable and unworkable: A government without organized parties would probably be rent with purely personal intrigue; in the clash of parties ideas are generated and men are tested. But in the supremely critical moment, the defiance of partisanship is the principle of national salvation. In that principle this Nation was founded; had that principle prevailed in the fifties, the Nation might have been spared the War Between the States. Only if it prevails today can the Nation make sure of its certain survival in the freedom, in the security, and in the peace which it must earn once more.

Fair Enough

Spelvin's Dream

GEORGE SPELVIN, the average American, tossed on his bed last night and, in his troubled sleep, dreamed that he had been elected President of the United States. In this strange situation he dreamed, with a curious sense of shame, that his first paper as President-elect was a letter to his son, Dummy, just turned 21, repudiating the old homely decencies and exhorting Dummy and other members of the family circle to adopt a new, streamlined code of citizenship.

"I have decided," he wrote, "to release you from the teachings which Americans have always respected.

"Cheating is no longer taboo, and I urge that if you find it possible to take an unfair advantage of your position, and given your action an appearance of honesty, you lose no opportunity to do so. This is the new civic morality, and by getting the jump on our fellow citizens our family will be able to discredit their old ideals and place them on the defensive.

"Relax, please, while I depict, in general terms, the activities which I recommend to members of our family during my term in office. You all must be on your toes to seize every chance to make a thousand dollars or a hundred thousand.

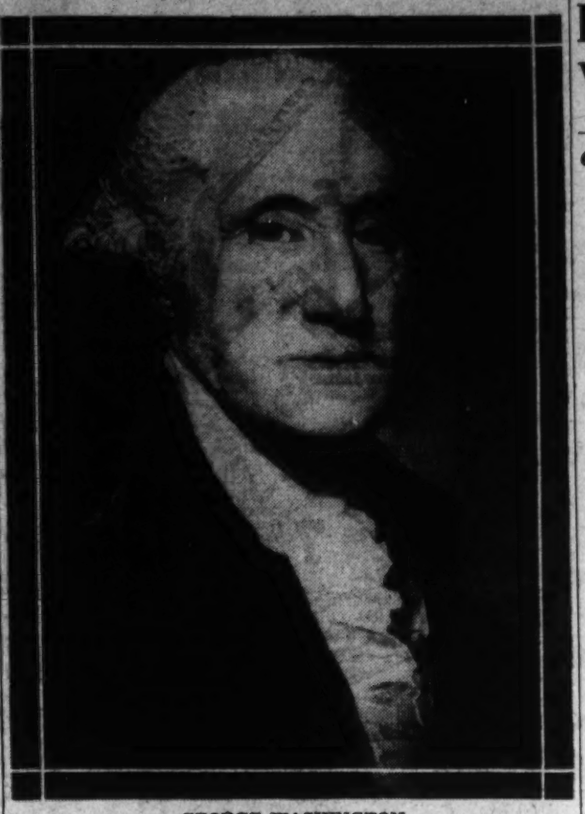
"I REALIZE, of course, that neither your mother nor your sister has any marketable ability or reputation as a writer, but I urge that both start cashing in on the Presidency at once by turning out a great volume of literature and selling the same at the highest possible figure. No false, old-fashioned sense of propriety is to deter them from the exploitation of an office which belongs to the National and all the people for the private enrichment of the Spelvin family. Your mother will seek and accept at the highest figure engagements to deliver public addresses as the wife of the President. Your sister, if offered a job at $15,000 or 20,000 a year at a calling for which she has no professional preparation, is not to decline on ethical grounds or out of respect for working women who are professionally equipped for the work but receive only modest wages.

"You and your brother have my permission to make use of the White House as your business headquarters for the sale of insurance or imaginary services to firms having dealings with the various bureaus of the Government. And I shall take occasion, from time to time, to enact laws which will make such potential clients extremely sensitive to the ill-will of the sons of the President. Shipping companies, aviation companies, liquor companies, radio corporations and all sorts of companies coming within the sharp and arbitrary power of the Treasury, the Alcohol Administration, the Communications Commission and the SEC should be willing to deal generously with you. And you, my sons, should be able to grow rich during my time in office without violating any law to a criminal extent, although, of course, you will cheerfully violate all the old dead teachings to which I referred in the beginning. You must remember, constantly, that you can, and I impress on you again the necessity to be bold and defiant in these dealings and to justify them rather than apologize for them.

"YOUR MOTHER has a relative who has never done very well, and I hope he will seize this chance to become a lobbyist for companies which have reason to fear the SEC and you, Dummy, should be able to make some very profitable deals in airplanes and radio management notwithstanding your inexperience. After all, we are not even pretending that you are able to deliver any service of value, we are just cashing in on the Presidency as profiteers in the patriotism, but we will make a virtue of our conduct if we have sufficient gall and the proper cynicism.

"During my term in office we all will get enormously rich. We will make more money than any other American family while I heap contempt on the average American for trying to acquire a home and a competence for his family by honest means.

"I know I can rely on you, because I know your character. If you have any trouble with obstreperous suckers a call from the income tax department will break down the sales resistance."



GEORGE WASHINGTON

Whoever is elected next month, Walter Lippmann, urges, should follow the example of the first President, who, placing himself above partisanship, named both Jefferson and Hamilton to his Cabinet. See Mr. Lippmann's article on this page today

Change Of Heart

By Mark Sullivan

Miss Thompson Indorses Roosevelt

COLUMNIST Dorothy Thompson has come out for President Roosevelt.

I am going to quote some things Miss Thompson has said about Mr. Roosevelt in the past. I do this, not at all for any purpose of proving inconsistency on the part of one individual—there are graver matters afoot than that. I do it for a broader reason, not personal to Miss Thompson. I do it because Miss Thompson's change of position illustrates something which is at the very heart of the present state of the world.

Miss Thompson, in 1937, wrote (concerning bills Mr. Roosevelt was trying to drive through Congress): "These bills . . . add up to a consistent picture. The picture is of a tremendously controlled government, with a power and authority vested in the President, not far from equal to the power and authority vested in Mussolini or in Stalin. . . . The independence of the States is to become the independence of local soviets . . ."

Miss Thompson, in 1937, wrote: "The President's philosophy is not a means for preventing a revolution. It is a means for making it . . . It is incompatible with the principles upon which this country was founded and it is incompatible with human freedom.

MISS THOMPSON, in 1937, wrote: "The President demonstrated early in his first Administration that he conceives of the Presidency in terms of personal dictation."

That was Miss Thompson in 1937. And now, today, here is Miss Thompson recommending that the United States reelect, to a third term, the man who during his second term sought a power and authority "not far from equal to the power and authority vested in Mussolini or in Stalin;" who wished to reduce the States of the Union to "local soviets;" who "conceives of the Presidency in terms of personal dictation."

Why Miss Thompson's change? In attempting to answer we must depend in part on surmise; yet we can derive much justifiable inference from Miss Thompson's writings. As in change in any person, much of the reason lies in personality, temperament, background of personal experience and associations. Additional to that, so far as the reason is within the field of identifiable fact, some of Miss Thompson's reason must lie in what happened between 1937 and 1940.

What happened is the war. In 1937 Miss Thompson dreaded Mr. Roosevelt because he was a revolutionary threat to the American system of government. In 1940, Miss Thompson prefers Mr. Roosevelt when he is a military threat to Hitler and Naziism. About Hitler, Miss Thompson is very emotional, justifiably, of course.

Miss Thompson wants Mr. Roosevelt reelected, it is fair to infer, because of qualities which she once deplored, when she said, November 24, 1937: "The President is audacious, sometimes to the point of recklessness; his is the temperament that, under strain, acts." She prefers Mr. Roosevelt, it is fair to infer, because his greater audacity, his greater impetuousness, would lead him to act against Hitler more quickly than the more phlegmatic and orderly Mr. Willkie would.

IF THAT is Miss Thompson's reason, it is her right to make that choice. But let us look at it from the point of view of the United States. We must seek our answer in the maze of two intricately-mingled problems. One is the war. The other is preservation of the United States against revolutionary change of government. These two problems, complexly related, are made yet more complex by the relation of them to two very different personalities, Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Willkie.

There is space here only for conclusions:

We may have to go to war under either man. Mr. Roosevelt would go more quickly and audaciously. Mr. Willkie would go more cautiously.

As to the other problem, saving America from revolutionary change, the answer is utterly clear. I do not need to repeat it; it is in the words quoted from Miss Thompson above. Against Mr. Roosevelt there are the objections Miss Thompson described in 1937. In addition, in 1940 and after, war would make more likely and easier the thing Miss Thompson feared.

FINALLY, there is one point which underlies all others—one point which America may take as a guide for every decision.

It may be necessary for us to resist totalitarian government as a world movement, by going to war. That is a possibility, a chance. But it is definitely and positively necessary for us to resist totalitarian government by another means. It is a matter of spiritual life and death, for us and for the world, that we preserve in America the form of free society and democratic government that we have.

If we let it go here, it is gone everywhere; it perishes from the earth. But if we preserve it here, as a living example, then, presently, in the countries which totalitarian government has conquered, there will arise again, here and there among the peoples, the aspiration toward freedom. If that aspiration has America to look to, it will live and grow. That, in the long view, is the surest hope for overcoming totalitarianism, more sure than arms. To preserve our form of government is the one most necessary requisite in every decision we make, any course we take.

Bethlehem's War Profits

Court to Review Case

By the Associated Press

THE JUSTICE Department yesterday was granted a Supreme Court review of its controversy with Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation over World War shipbuilding profits—a case which the department called of major importance in view of the current defense program.

Government attorneys contended that Bethlehem was seeking "unconscionable profits," while the corporation, which won in lower courts, replied that the Government was trying to "escape" the terms of contracts.

The Labor Board, meanwhile, found cause for satisfaction in five other cases. The court refused to review four controversies in which lower courts had upheld the board but agreed to hear a fifth in which the lower court's order was unfavorable to the board.

The Supreme Court also agreed to review Earl Browder's conviction on a passport fraud charge and a case involving constitutionality of the wage-hour law similar to one already pending.

The court refuse to consider its May 27 decision holding that 200,000 clerks, stenographers, bookkeepers, accountants, warehousemen and similar employes of motor carriers are subject to the wage-hour law.

A rehearing was sought by the American Trucking Associations, Inc., which contended the Interstate Commerce Commission had jurisdiction. The I. C. C.'s position that it had jurisdiction only over employes whose duties affected the safety of operation was sustained.

THE CASES involving shipbuilding profits grew out of the construction of 86 World War vessels by the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation. The Justice Department said that in view of the defense program it was "of immediate national concern that there should be an authoritative determination of the extent to which the country's need should place the Government at the mercy of its contractors."

The Federal District Court, while calling the situation a "daylight robbery," granted Bethlehem a $5,272,075 judgment representing profits still unpaid. The Government said that a profit of $20,055,556 already had been paid the company and that the additional payment would bring its profits to 23 per cent of the cost.

Counsel for the company replied that the cost of the ships was less than that of comparable vessels built by others and that the contracts had been found advantageous both to the company and the Government.

Justice Murphy, who was Attorney General until his appointment to the bench last year, did not participate in considering the applications for reviews in the Bethlehem and Browder cases. Justices Stone and Roberts also abstained from participating in the Bethlehem case.

The reviews granted yesterday, at the first business sessions of the court's new term, will be set for argument shortly and decisions will be forthcoming later.

BROWDER, COMMUNIST Presidential candidate, was convicted in New York of wilfully using a passport obtained by false statements and sentenced to a four-year prison term and $2,000 fine. His appeal involved the technical point of whether the "use" he made of the passport—proving his citizenship to an immigration inspector upon returning to this country—was prohibited by the statute. His counsel contended that the prohibition was only against "use in foreign travel."

The wage-hour law case which the court agreed to consider was appealed by the Opp Cotton Mills, Inc., of Opp, Ala., from a lower court ruling which did not pass upon constitutionality of the legislation.

In the labor board case which the court agreed to hear, the board appealed from a decision denying enforcement of an order directing the Link-Belt Co., of Chicago, to withdraw recognition from a union of company employes and to reinstate a group of employes with back pay.

The court also agreed to review a $50,000,000 damage award against Germany as a result of the Black Tom and Kingsland, N. J., munitions explosions during the World War.

Hitler Moves East

By Rear Admiral Stirling, Jr. (Retired)

Britain's New Danger

Copyright by the United Press.

New York, Oct. 14.—There is one question on which Great Britain and Russia long have been in agreement. It is that the Dardanelles and the Bosporus, narrow waterways between Europe and Asia, must not be in the hands of any other great power.

Years ago a Berlin-to-Bagdad railroad, to be built and controlled by Germany, was halted by Great Britain because that dream of the great Bismarck would have given Germany too much influence in Turkey. British statesmen feared it might be a wedge for a German seizure of the coveted straits. The railroad is now finished but is not under German control in Asia.

Is Germany's face now turned East?

Czecho-Slovakia, a Versailles Treaty nation, was set up for the purpose of halting a German "Drang nach Osten" (drive to the east). Germany, after her military comeback under Hitler and her drive to the East still in mind, took Austria, then won Czecho-Slovakia at Munich, after which Hitler invaded Poland, which brought on the war. Today Germany is seizing control of Rumania and Bulgaria by intimidation. These are stepping stones needed in the "Drang nach Osten."

HITLER has a trained army of many millions, rendered practically idle through the collapse of France, "all dressed up and no place to go." Hitler knows he must employ his armies else his own security among his people may be jeopardized.

Coming on top of the Japanese alliance with the Axis, the Brenner Pass meeting of Hitler and Mussolini may have decided them to risk antagonizing Russia, and together make the long contemplated drive into Asia. It is sure that this drive was a Hitler objective when he began the invasion of Poland, for the large army of Poland would have been a dangerous menace on the flank of such a march by the German war machine.

Elimination of the French and British armies in Europe gave Germany the opportunity to make her delayed drive to the East, for which Hitler has been paving the way. If Russia should interfere, that would not be considered insurmountable now. The vast German armies, occupied nowhere else in any numbers, can take care of Russian opposition, provided Stalin will not be placated. In fact, Hitler might even welcome the opportunity to march into the Ukraine.

The German move into Rumania and Bulgaria, of course, is aimed at the Dardanelles, Turkey, Syria, and last and most important, the Suez Canal. If Russia holds its hand there will be nothing to oppose this advance except the Turkish army, estimated at 2,000,000, and the almost insignificant force of the British in Syria.

THERE IS only one place for Britain to stop this drive, and that is at the Dardanelles and the Bosporus, with her naval and air forces. This probable move of Hitler's armies to the east again may force Great Britain to spread out her naval power yet more than thinly. In concentrating a powerful war fleet in the Dardanelles and Bosporus to oppose the German crossings, Great Britain yet must retain in the eastern Mediterranean sufficient naval power for the defense of Alexandria and the Suez Canal against the Italian move across Egypt.

It seems evident that a German move to the East now would be the severest blow that could be struck by Hitler at Britain's sea power. Once the German army succeeds in passing the Dardanelles, there would be little to stop it, for it seems evident that the Turks would be no match for it. Unless Russia comes to Britain's aid the seizure of all oil in the territories of Iraq and Iran will be accomplished and the canal and Egypt will pass to Hitler's control.

Supplementing this advance of the German army, the Italians could seize Greece, then using Greek ports for its warships, cut off communications between the Mediterranean and the British fleet in the Dardanelles. Great Britain would require many warships to defeat these Italian attacks.

THIS MOVE to the East seems to be a rare opportunity to embarrass further Britain's sea power. Unless the British navy can stop it, it seems likely to succeed without Stalin's intervention. It is even doubtful, if once started, and with the Bosporus behind it, despite the British navy, that even Russia could defeat the move.

In the close quarters of the Dardanelles and Bosporus, British warships could be frequently and disastrously bombed by German air forces, unless Britain's air forces can be rendered equal to the occasion by large additions from England and America.

This war in the Mediterranean can be won by Britain if sufficient warships and airplanes can be made available. All of England's forces are being used. Reinforcements must come from elsewhere. Russian help would be a great asset in stopping Hitler, especially in the air. Russia's Black Sea fleet, though small, would be useful.

But America's full help in warships and planes may be the only thing that will prevent the eastern Mediterranean, the Suez, the Dardanelles and Bosporus from passing to Axis control. Such an all-out stand by America would influence Stalin, if anything could, to decide to throw in his lot with Britain to keep Germany within bounds.

Bygone Elections

Lincoln Is Elected

IN 1848 Abraham Lincoln and Stephen A. Douglas were candidates for United States Senator from Illinois. They conducted a history-making series of debates. These disclosed Lincoln as a leader ranking with the foremost.

When it came time to make nominations for President in 1860 the Republicans were in the position of declining to accept as final the decision of the Supreme Court in the Dred Scott opinion and refusing to obey the Constitution.

Lincoln and William H. Seward, of New York, the party's national leader, were the leading contenders. Two-thirds of the delegates were for Seward, and although 234 were necessary to a choice, his high mark was only 184½.

THE CONVENTION met in Chicago May 16, 1860. Balloting was to begin on the 18th. While Seward's followers were holding a parade that morning, Lincoln's managers filled all 5,000 seats in the temporary wigwam where the delegates met. Every mention of Lincoln's name excited cheers.

Lincoln's nomination came on the third ballot. Hannibal Hamlin, of Maine, was named for Vice president.

After several meetings of Democratic factions three tickets were put up.

The Democrat name was carried by Douglas and Herschel V. Johnson, of Georgia. John C. Breckenridge, of Kentucky, and Joseph Lane, of Oregon, were candidates of the Independent Democrats. John Bell, of Tennessee, and Edward Everett, of Massachusetts, ran on the Constitutional Union ticket.

While the popular vote for Lincoln's opponents was greater than his by 500,000, he nevertheless had 180 electoral votes to their combined total of 123.

Teachers, Police Will Be Registrars

Teachers never demanded greater concentration from their pupils than they themselves gave yesterday afternoon to the assignment of "Learning to Be a Registrar in One Lesson."

At one of the five meetings for teachers who will register men in the District tomorrow under the Selective Service Act, approximately 950 persons gathered yesterday in Eastern High School for a typical "class."

Nine hundred and fifty voices said "I do," with upraised right hands after Charles Hart, principal of the school and notary public, read the oath of faithful performance of duty on Registration Day.

Dr. Chester W. Holmes, assistant superintendent of schools and chief registration officer for the District, then gave last-minute instructions on every step in a registrar's duty.

The teachers were advised to "practice printing names and addresses . . . and polish their penmanship, because legibility of printing and of handwriting is absolutely indispensable."

They were told that "the registrar must be patient and take plenty of time." If the first answer of the man registering is not clear, "the question shall be explained carefully and asked again." But the teachers were told that "the registrar must enter into no argument or discussions with the registrant."

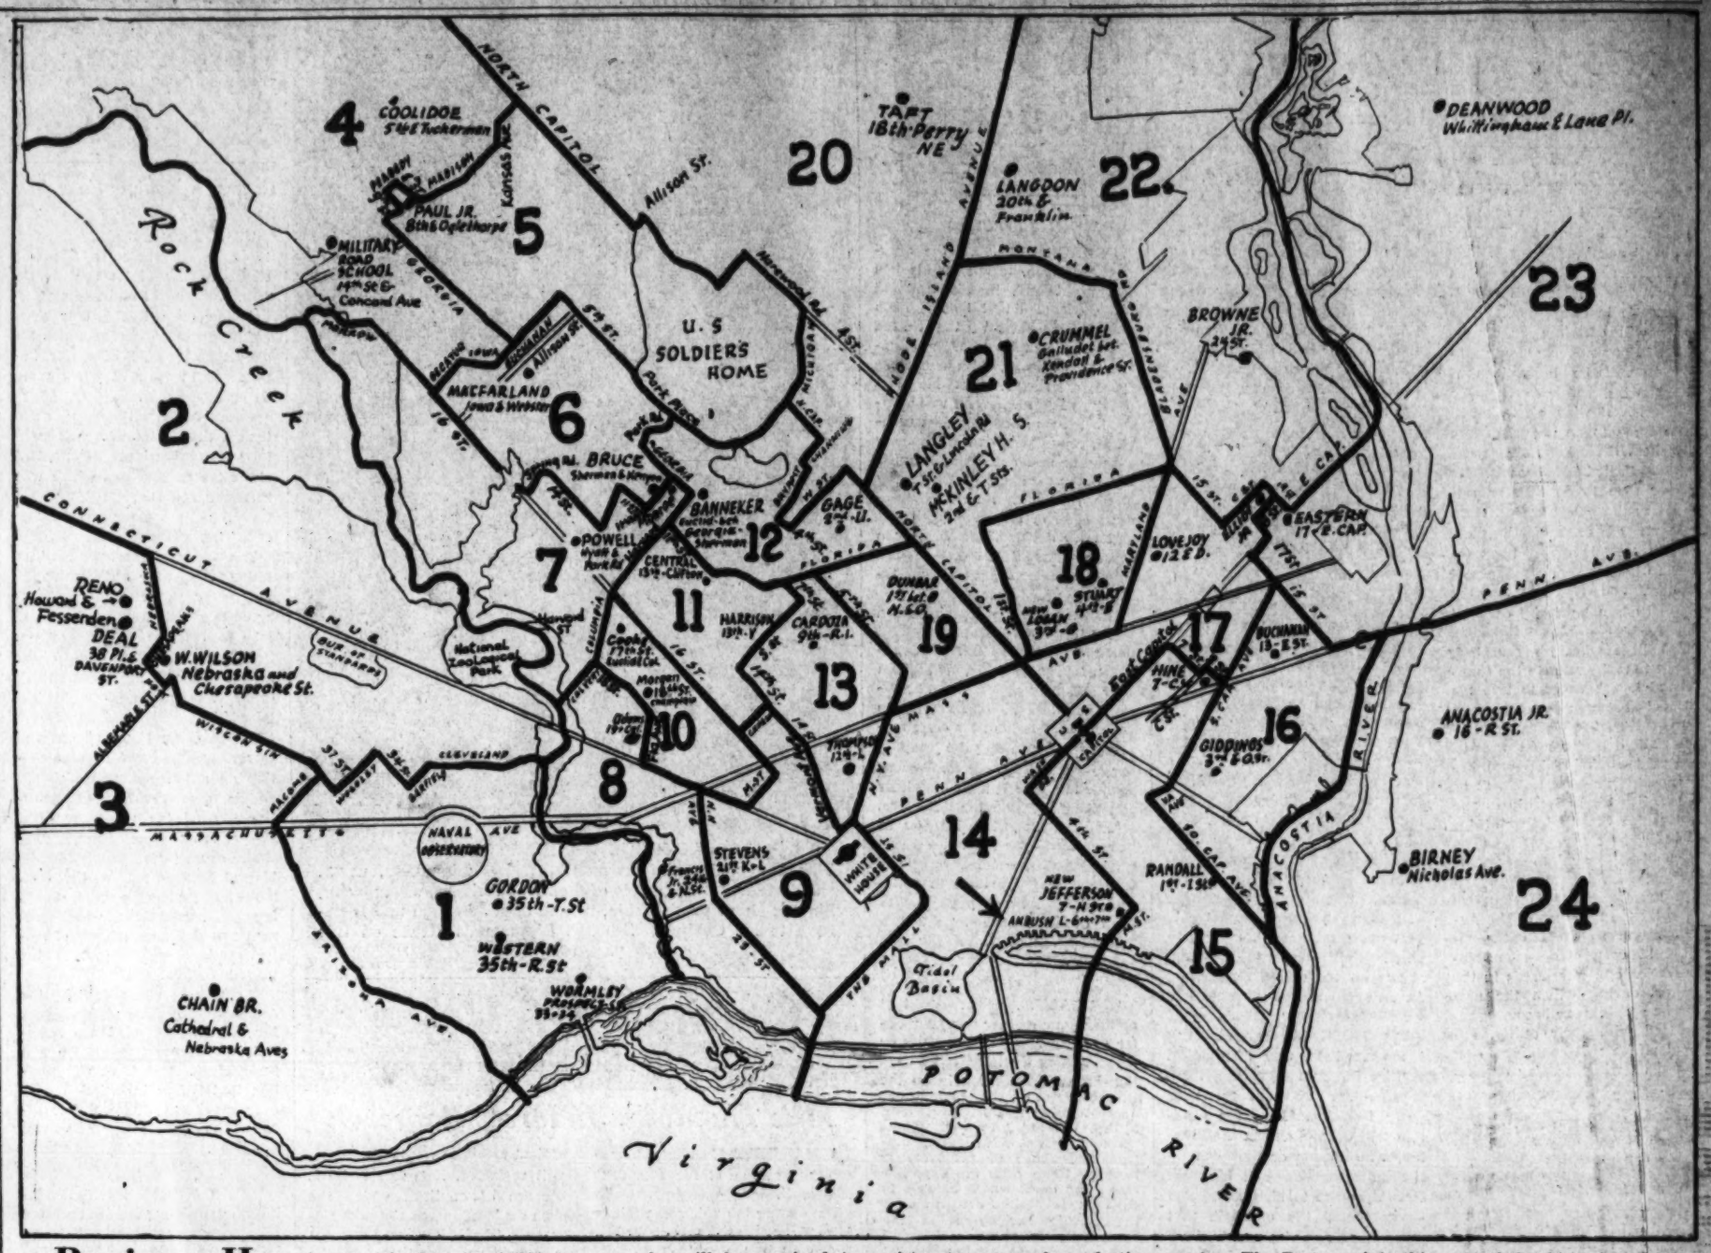
REGISTRATION CARD D. S. S. Form 1 — John James Doe

THIS IS THE CARD REGISTRANTS WILL BE REQUIRED TO FILL OUT TOMORROW

The 950 teachers and other school personnel who met at Eastern will serve tomorrow at Buchanan School, Anacostia Junior-Senior High School, Eastern High, Eliot, Hine, Jefferson and Stuart Junior High Schools. Teachers' regular pupils will have a holiday tomorrow, as District schools serve for Registration Day.

Dr. Holmes yesterday explained entry after entry on the registration card and certificate, as methodically as any teacher instructing a class. The directions filled six mimeographed pages.

Similar instructional meetings were held yesterday at Langley Junior High, Coolidge and Wilson High Schools for white teachers, and at Armstrong High School for colored. At the same locations, meetings for volunteer registrars other than teachers were held last night. Special classes for policemen and firemen who will be registrars were held in the afternoon at Central High School. Thus the District's registration staff of more than 7,000 persons was given one lesson for its tremendous one-day chore.



Register Here—For the benefit of District men who will be required to register tomorrow for selective service, The Post reprints this map of the 24 registration areas and the public schools selected as places of registration. The Military Road School will serve District 5 as well as District 4. The Gordon Junior High, actually in District 1, will serve registrants in District 9 because of lack of requisite schools in the area. Similarly, one of the two schools for District 19, Langley Junior High, is actually in District 21

Government Goes to Work in Earnest To Increase Appeal of Cotton Stockings

THE Defense Commissioners would require women to wear cotton stockings if they listened long enough to Chief Ruth O'Brien of the clothing textile division, Bureau of Home Economics. "Girls could hardly go into battle with silk hose," she claims; "they'd have to stop every once in a while to put soap or chewing gum on a run." Between us, however, that's not her only reason for advocating cotton hosiery. The real story comes out in statistics showing that about 4 per cent of American women's stockings nowadays are of cotton, compared with more than 70 per cent 20 years ago. This situation annoys our cotton-conscious so much that it has given the bureau funds with which to increase the appeal of cotton hosiery.

RUTH O'BRIEN

Entrusted with this delicate task is David H. Young, veteran of the hosiery industry whose present job is to create sheerer weaves and more flattering patterns for the use of manufacturers. He considers every type of feminine taste, from the nurse, who needs long-wearing, white hose, to the college girl who goes in for novelty meshes. He is proud of a quaint style suggested to him by the movie, "Lillian Russell;" it has an embroidered design running down the calf. He already has perfected 83 styles, some of which the manufacturers now have on the market.

If you notice a group of ladies discussing Shanghai, "Kong," "Mahj" and "Pung," you may be sure you're overhearing, not a discussion of the Far Eastern crisis, but a game of Mah Jong. The 300-year-old Chinese sport so popular in the 1920's has accompanied the short skirt back to style; many is the set of yellowing ivory tiles which has been dusted off after a decade of neglect. Prominent among local enthusiasts are Mrs. Edward A. Mitchell, Mrs. Lee Warren, Mrs. Woodbury Blair, Mrs. Dwight Davis, Mrs. John Newbold and Mrs. Wallace Merriam.

Summoned to repair the Venetian blinds in the impressive and, on occasion, formidable office of a local executive, a workman approached the firm's receptionist and inquired, "How do I get to the execution office?"

REPARTEE—A patient about to have her abdomen X-rayed said to the doctor, "I hope you'll do as good a job as Harris & Ewing did on me last spring." "It'll be an excellent likeness," the doctor assured her, "but it may not be as flattering."

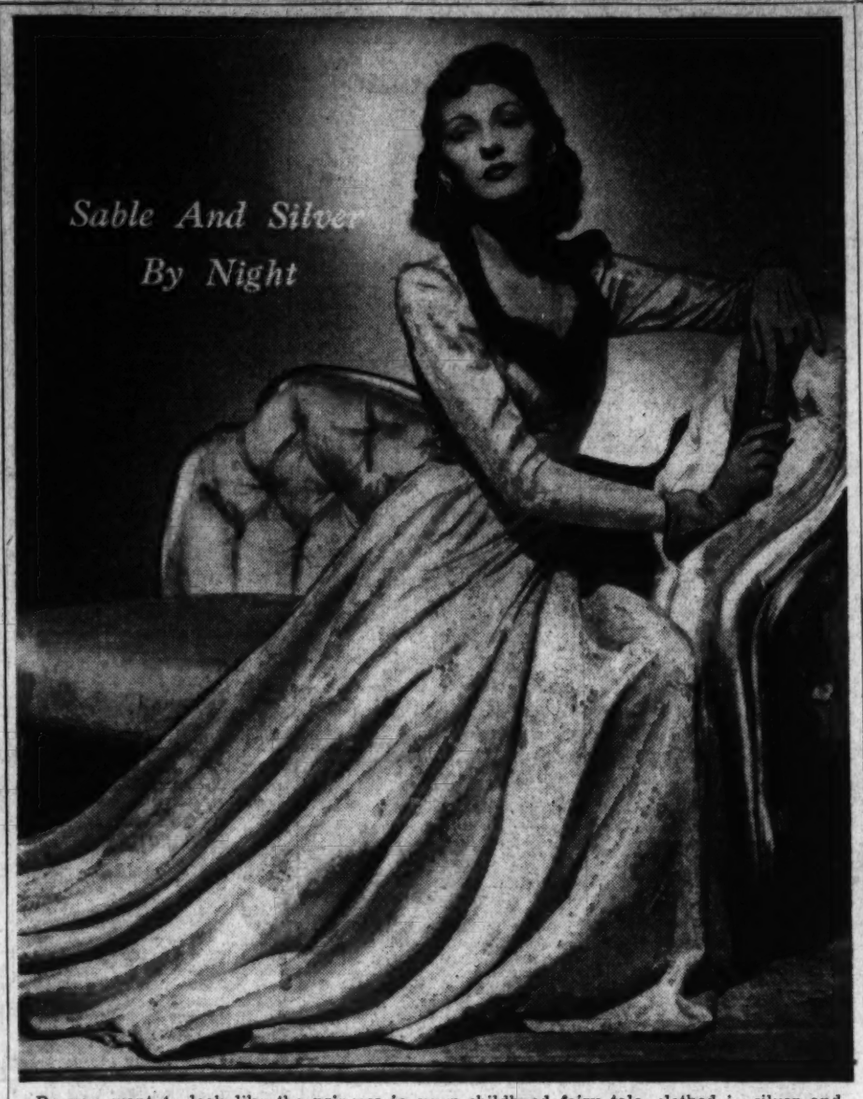
VICKS VA-TRO-NOL



Do you want to look like the princess in your childhood fairy tale, clothed in silver and royal mink? If this is your ideal of glamour, then gaze at the gown above. It is of rayon brocade, shot with silver for the proper glitter under dinner-dance lights. The very covered-up look of sleeves and neckline is given added beauty by the Kolinsky border, dyed to resemble sable. A local shop is suggesting this silhouette for women who love drama in good taste. And the price is not a king's ransom

The Gentler Sex

'The Name Is Garbo'

TWO PRESSING social problems—what name to be introduced by in a reception line, and what to say to the hostess on departing—are about to be solved.

Mrs. DeGoofey

Mrs. Henrietta De Goofey, who recently initiated public contests to solve these dilemmaas, yesterday announced she was receiving many valuable suggestions.

"The Association for Advancement," said Mrs. De Goofey, "which supported me so nobly in my fight to retain the presidency of the Do Something About It League has sent in many excellent ideas on how to say goodbye to the hostess without overtaxing one's mental capacity.

Mrs. Palooka And Madame X.

"Another contributor, who signs herself 'Professional Tea-Goer' has sent in a splendid idea on reception line introductions." Here is her letter:

DEAR MRS. DE GOOFEY: You have asked for ideas concerning a standard name such as "Mrs. Oomph" by which guests could be introduced down a reception line. I have a much better method that I have tried successfully on some of the stoniest faced reception lines in Washington.

"My device is to give the butler some striking cognomen that will compel notice. For instance I recently became the center of attention at a war relief tea by having myself announced as 'Frau Hitler.' Other names I have tried with signal success are Miss Garbo; Mrs. Joe Palooka; Senora Tarzan; Mrs. Robinson Crusoe; Madame Recamier; Miss Peggy Joyce; Mrs. Tommy Manville and Madame X.

Commenting on this suggestion, Mrs. De Goofey said it was a "splendid device." "It would greatly add t othe gayety of tea and cocktail parties if we would all adopt some striking and interesting aliases," she said "since no one ever hears or remembers our right names anyway."

Association for Advancement Reports

The famous reformer made public the following letter from the Association For Advancement:

DEAR MRS. DE GOOFEY: Best of all may we compliment you on your new hat. Our association has gone on record as unanimously indorsing it.

We also wish to report that we are very much interested in your newest reform—the adoption of a standard goodbye at parties. We are very eager to win the prize offered—a handsome cellophane canape container, disguised as an afternoon or evening bag, and we herewith submit the following suggestions for bidding the hostess farewell:

"I left a good book for this."

"Remind me to have my phone disconnected."

"Invite me sometime for another week."

"I haven't been so bored since I went to the dentist."

"I am allergic to your parties."

"So nice to leave you."

"You must spend such an evening with me sometime."

"Thanks for a lousy time."

The prize may be sent to the headquarters, address of the organization, 11 Maple Avenue, Hyattsville, Md. Since it will belong to the association as a whole it will be carried by the member who is going to the best party in event of conflicting dates.

If we can be of any further help in your reforms, please do not hesitate to call on us, individually or collectively. THE ASSOCIATION FOR ADVANCEMENT.

Mrs. De Goofey said the results of the contest would be annuonced after the judges, who include the three most inveterate party goers in Washington, had passed on the slogans.

Revival of Old Lace

Old lace curtains are being conscripted for war use in England. It seems that they're better than strips of paper for pasting over glass window panes in order to keep them from shattering during explosions. A grim use indeed for the fancy Nottingham lace that once looped itself over every parlor window in England and is now being brought out from attics and old trunks to serve again.

Setting Off Chops

To set off pork, lamb or veal chops, do this: As soon as the chops are done spread a little chili sauce, mixed with finely chopped celery and parsley, over them.

Home Study Of Shorthand

WHAT A disheartening place the world can appear to an untrained girl starting out on a search for a job.

Business these days calls for trained workers and the employment agent assumes that she has at least one of the long list of skills he places before her. Yet she can only say, "I'm very willing."

But the world has a different face if you have a skill like shorthand. You can teach yourself shorthand at home—and it is not only a step to getting a stenographer's job, it aids you to other jobs. Helping in a shop or a real estate office, your rating is higher if you can also take dictation when necessary.

By regularly giving a little of your spare time to its study you can soon acquire a working knowledge of shorthand. The Pitman system is really simple. Instead of spelling out words, you write symbols for the sounds in them. And though there are thousands of words in the language there aren't really many sounds—so you haven't many symbols to learn.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, Pittman Shorthand Self-Taught, to Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Meat Pies Make Food Dollars Go Far

NOSES do not usually go up in the air when a flavorsome meat pie is the order of the day. And this is a dish that makes food dollars go just a little further. A budget cut of meat or left-over cooked meat, plus some carrots, onions and potatoes, makes a dish that is sturdy and yet most appealing.

When made with self-rising flour the dish is all the simpler to prepare. Such flour is easy to use because it assures the homemaker of uniform results, for she knows that each cupful of flour contains the same amount of leavening and salt as every other cupful. Each time she uses self-rising flour she knows that she is using just enough leavening—neither too much or too little—for delicate lightness, as well as just the right amount of salt for good flavor.

First make a biscuit dough according to the recipe of Clara Gebhard Snyder, Director, Foods and Nutrition, Wheat Flour Institute, and then follow her directions for making it into a meat pie.

Meat Pie

Cut or rub 2 to 4 tablespoons shortening into 2 cups sifted self-rising flour. Add milk to make a soft dough—2-3 to ¾ cup. Turn out on lightly floured board and knead gently ½ minute. Roll out ½ inch thick. Cut with floured biscuit cutter.

Cut 1 pound lean beef into ½-inch cubes. Melt 1 tablespoon fat in a baking dish. Add the meat. Brown well. Add 1 tablespoon flour, stirring until smooth. Add 1 cup diced potatoes, 1 cup diced carrots, 1 cup peas, 1 cup cut celery, 1 teaspoon salt and ½ teaspoon pepper. Cover and bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees, for 45 minutes. Uncover and put the biscuits over top of pie. Return to moderately hot oven, 425 degrees, for 15 to 20 minutes. Yield, about eight servings.

Drain-Pipe Care Is Essential

When you are using an ice refrigerator, pay extra attention to the drain pipe. If it is removable, take it out weekly and wash in hot soapy water into which you have put some washing soda—two tablespoons of soda to a quart of water. Rinse the pipe in boling water and give it a sun bath for half an hour or so.

If the drain pipe is not removable, pour strong soda water down it every week—four tablespoons of soda to a quart of boling soapy water. Rinse for two minutes with boiling water, the pour in some cold water to chill the pipe so your ice won't be melted away. A long handled narrow brush will help in cleaning the pipe.

Retiring Minister of Rumania To Make U. S. His Permanent Home

Radu Irimescu and American-Born Wife To Make Six Months' Trip Over Country; Other Envoys Attend Farewell Party

By Hope Ridings Miller.

AFTER TODAY the man who has served as Rumania's envoy since April, 1938, will be plain Radu Irimescu, whose colorful career is temporarily terminated but whose memories of the past are no more thrilling than his plans for the future.

Now a matter of record is the fact that from his homeland several weeks ago came notification that his term of office would terminate on October 15. Immediately, friends in Washington wanted to know when he would be going home; whether he would be assigned to another diplomatic post; and if so, where.

HOPE RIDINGS MILLER

What most of his friends apparently forgot was that he is not a career diplomat; that this was his first foreign post, and that he is not an established member of his country's diplomatic service.

In other words, unlike most retiring envoys, his work is ended but he has not been recalled to his homeland; and he has no intention of returning at all. Instead, he has charted a course that will include first a trip across the United States, an extended stay on the West Coast; a return to his lakeside cottage in New Hampshire, and possibly, after that, a connection with some American concern.

A TRAINED ENGINEER, with wide experience in the field of aviation—including service as a licensed pilot and as Rumania's Air Minister—he probably will have no difficulty in finding the type of position to which he is suited. But right now, he is more concerned with completing plans for his trip and winding up his affairs in Washington. Also, he and his wife are being widely feted, and are trying to find time to entertain friends at a series of small farewell luncheons and teas.

It was at such a luncheon yesterday that I talked briefly with the Minister about his plans. Yes, he hoped to make America his permanent home. He has long loved this country; saw it first as a midshipman on board the training ship Freya in 1908, and returned a number of years afterward to study at Columbia University and then to serve as manager of the Bank Chrissoveloni in New York.

"I feel as if I am part of America already," he said, "and I have so many friends here." He has. Also, a wife who is the former Henrietta Maench, of Buffalo. As they travel by motor across America, both will be renewing friendships that started many years ago.

IN RECENT weeks, invitations have poured in to them from all over the country; and in the course of their six months' trip, they will make a series of visits in Florida, New Orleans and San Antonio, and will spend some time at Floyd Odlum's Western ranch. Later, they will travel through northern California and Washington State before returning East.

Small and informal was yesterday's luncheon at which the Minister freely discussed his itinerary, and mentioned incidentally that one of his chief worries now centers around getting some of his household effects, state papers, pictures and books shipped back to Europe, since the cost of transportation now is exactly five times more than it was formerly! (Frankly, the Minister would like to sell some of his household effects, including some valuable objects of art collected carefully over a long period. One piece of furniture he would not part with under any circumstances, however, is the handsome crested chair on which he sat at King George's coronation where, with Crown Prince Michael, he represented Rumania.)

THE BULGARIAN Minister and Mme. Naoumoff, just back from a 10-day stay in New York, were among the luncheon guests; as were the Greek Minister and Mme. Diamantopoulos, and Mme. Irimescu's daughter, Mrs. Oscar Green, the accomplished pianist, who left shortly after the party to return to her home in New York.

The Irimescus will leave Washington about October 25, going from here to New York for a visit. They will return early in November for a brief stay before continuing southward. The Minister plans to be his own chaffeur for the see-America trip, and one of the initial points of interest on his tour is the Skyline Drive, which he has planned to visit ever since he came to Washington.

The departure of the Irimescus is but one of the many changes now on tap at the Rumanian Legation. Eugen Teodorescu, who has been serving as Secretary for some time, has resigned, and the Second Secretary, Brutus Coste, will be Charge d'Affaires. Incidentally, there's other news about Teodorescu. Last Thursday, at a very quiet ceremony at the District Court he married a pretty Latvian girl, Xenia Lazareva, who came to this country only a few months ago.

The wedding climaxed a four-year romance that began in Riga, when Teodorescu was with the Rumanian Legation there. Only the Latvian Minister, Dr. Alfred Bilmanis, witnessed the rites, and there was no honeymoon trip afterward. Mr. Teodorescu and his bride are at home in his apartment at the Marlyn and plan to remain in Washington for at least a month.

Gen. and Mrs. Miles Entertain For Latin-American Officers

Defense Tour Over, Visitors Are Honored at Reception Before Returning to Their Own Countries

Capitalites had a chance to air their French and Spanish at the reception given yesterday by Gen. and Mrs. Sherman Miles in honor of the first group of Latin-American officers who recently completed a tour of the United States. For those who couldn't speak anything but their native language, able interpreters were Lieut. Thomas Crystal and Capt. Enrique Benitez, of our Army, who are detailed to go with the visitors everywhere.

With true military efficiency, the South Americans were organized to take turns in the receiving line. In three shifts of 20 minutes each they greeted the guests. Gen. Miles, who is head of Military Intelligence, and the attractive hostess were first in line. The latter wore a floor-length dress in a deep blue shade with a corsage of purple orchids.

Flags of the United States and countries below the Rio Grande decorated the enormous hall at the Officers Club at the Army War College, where the party was held. There were also vases of autumn leaves placed on the floor along the walls, and clusters of rust-colored chrysanthemums.

The food served was reminiscent of the lavishness seen at South American diplomatic parties here and was more substantial than is usual at local tea parties. There were cold turkey sandwiches, crab cakes, hearts of artichokes on sticks, all kinds of cakes and a well-stocked bar.

The South Americans seem delighted with their tour and several said they were sorry to be leaving. The second group starts its schedule tomorrow. Some are already here; others, the Brazilian and the Argentine officers among them, got to New York yesterday.

Mrs. Henry L. Stimson, wife of the Secretary of War, arrived early and took her place at the tea table. She was in black, with a small diamond clip at the neck and pearl and diamond pendant earrings. Senora de Caceres, wife of the Honduran envoy, presided over the coffee at the other end of the table.

Mrs. Robert Patterson, wife of the Assistant Secretary of War, also chose black, with a silver fox scarf. Brig. Gen. John Alden Crane, who was in charge of working out details of the tour, was accompanied by Mrs. Crane, whose hat had a feather on it. Many other generals and their wives were present, among them Gen. and Mrs. William Bryden and the Surgeon General of the Army and Mrs. Magee. Mrs. Julian Schley, wife of Gen. Schley, wore a green wool dress with a silver fox scarf.

Party Honors Betty Shouse And Mr. Train

Miss Suzanne Walker Entertains Couple To Be Wed October 26

Miss Betty Shouse and Cuthbert Train, who will be married October 26, were honor guests at a cocktail party given yesterday by Miss Suzanne Caroline Walker. Friends of the young couple gathered at the home of Miss Walker's grandmother, Mrs. Harrison Dodge, of R street. The hostess wore a black afternoon dress topped off with a pearl necklace.

Among the guests were Judge and Mrs. D. Lawrence Groner—the latter is Miss Shouse's mother, and Mr. Train's parents, Read Admiral and Mrs. Charles R. Train. Mr. and Mrs. Myron Whitney, uncle and aunt of the prospective bridegroom; Mrs. Elvin Heiberg, aunt of Miss Walker, and Mrs. Walter Heiberg were other guests.

The Misses Laura Tuckerman, Anne Perin and Mary Bradley were among Miss Shouse's wedding attendants present at the party. Other guests included Miss Belle Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Jean de Sibour, Mrs. B. Lauriston Hardin, Harry Covington, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Martin, of Alexandria; Dr. and Mrs. Dabney Jarman, Mrs. F. Moran McConihe, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Hiss, Miss Mimi Scott and Samuel Biddle.

Welcomed on all sides was Mrs. Charles Cunningham-Brown, the former Miss Folly McNeal, of Washington. Her husband is with the British navy, and she recently left her London home with her two children to seek refuge in this country.

Boons Feted At Cocktails

The new Second Secretary of the Netherlands Legation and Mme. H. N. Boon, were guests in whose honor George Abell gathered in a few friends yesterday afternoon at cocktail time.

Arranged in a few hours, the fete started out to be very small and informal; ended by being a good deal larger than was originally intended and almost filled Mr. Abell's spacious apartment on Twentieth Street.

Among the guests were Dr. and Mrs. H. R. van Houten and Mr. and Mme. Kleijn Molekamp, and Valck Lucassen, of the Netherlands Legation; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Pell, Mr. and Mrs. William P. MacCracken, Mr. and Mrs. William Lacy, Mr. and Mrs. Brutus Coste, of the Rumanian Legation; Andrew Wylie, Mr. and Mrs. John Caswell, Mrs. Marshall Exnicios, Mrs. Jean Delattre-Seguy, Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Walmsley, and several others.

Marcia O'Brien Will Make Bdw This Winter

And yet another bud has been added to the bouquet of debutantes who will be presented to society.

Miss Marcia O'Brien will bow to Washington society this winter at a party to be given by her parents, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. James A. O'Brien. The debutante is also planning a luncheon next month at Hotel 2400 for this season's crop of buds.

At present Miss O'Brien is attending Notre Dame College in Baltimore. Although Col. and Mrs. O'Brien maintain a home in Langley, McLean, Va., they are spending the winter at the Toronto.

Boyd Triplets Meet Andrews Sisters

The Boyd triplets took up their guitars last night to teach the Andrews sisters, who are currently playing here, a thing or two in the Latin way.

The daughters of the Ambassador of Panama and Senora de Boyd, Mildred, Edith and Elena, have had several movie offers. Last night, accompanied by the Ambassador and Senorita Lillian Somoza, the trio met the Andrews sisters at the Columbia School of Music.

Mrs. Maples Entertained By Mrs. A. T. Emerson

Mrs. Arthur T. Emerson, wife of Lieut. Comdr Emerson, was hostess at luncheon yesterday in the Louis Seize room of the Shoreham in honor of Mrs. Houston L. Maples, whose husband, Commander Maples, is being transferred from Annapolis.

In the party were Mrs. F. L. Lowe, Mrs. John R. Redman, Mrs. E. S. Earnhardt, Mrs. John McCrea and Mrs. Hugh Eldridge.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff, will entertain at dinner tomorrow night at the Shoreham for the Latin-American army officers touring our defenses.

Col. and Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim have issued invitations to an "at home" on Thursday, October 24, from 5 until 7 at 2700 Macomb street, which they have leased for the winter.

Mrs. Helen Ray Hagner will entertain at cocktails on Monday from 5 to 7 at the Lounge Riviera.

Mrs. Carl A. Joerissen has invitations out for a luncheon on Thursday at the Washington Club.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Hinckley have leased Nordix farm in Warrenton until their own home in the hunt country is completed. Mr. Hinckley is in New York for several weeks.

Miss Audrey Campbell and Miss Gertrude Webb have taken an apartment in New York for the winter.

Mrs. E. Brooke Lee, of Silver Spring, is in New York to confer with Mrs. Wales Latham, president of Bundles for Britain, on plans for starting an organization in Montgomery County.

The Big Sisters of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club mapped out plans for the season last night at a meeting at Hotel 2400. Miss Molly Stonestreet and Mrs. Lucille Bernard were reelected chairman and vice chairman for 1940-41. The members have raised enough money to build a first log cabin at the boys' camp in Maryland and hope to make enough to build a second in the spring. The next meeting will be a breakfast October 27 at Normandy Farm.

About the Town

with Dudley Harmon

THAT STRONGHOLD of Republicanism, Long Island, was invaded by an army of Washingtonians over the week-end.

DUDLEY HARMON

At a tea at the Piping Rock Club I ran into several leading lights of the New Deal grounded by New York stockbrokers who had tactfully left certain badges and buttons at home.

Hosts were the Richard Pattersons—he was Assistant Secretary of Commerce a year or so ago—and honor guests were the Attorney General and Mrs. Robert Jackson. The Pattersons have just taken a house on Long Island and the Jacksons were their guests over Sunday.

Mr. Patterson returned to private business after having the "little cabinet." His wife, a clever, attractive person, is a member of the board for Town Hall in New York.

BRIGHT FIRES burned on the hearths of the club, which is decorated in the chintzy fashion of a country house. Many of the women present wore tweeds in autumn shades of rust and green.

Among the Democrats was Mrs. Samuel Conner, National Committeewoman from Kentucky. She looked handsome in a navy blue wool suit with a Roman striped turban to match her handbag. Mrs. Conner said she had left Washington and would make her home in New York this winter.

ANOTHER EX-WASHINGTONIAN there was Miss Mary V. Johnson, of New York, who was accompanied by a beau. I also saw Jack and Stanley Reed, jr., sons of Justice and Mrs. Reed, who work in law offices in Manhattan. Their parents had a house in Locust Valley, L. I., this past summer.

Among the tweedy groups was Mrs. James Alley, whose husband was General Counsel of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for several years. The Alleys, who have many friends in Washington, had driven down from New York to week-end at their place, Windover, in Jericho. Mrs. Alley and her daughter, Miss Jane Lowe, have gone int othe cocker spaniel business and are so enthusiastic that the yeven keep dogs in their Manhattan apartment.

THE GUEST HOUSE at Windover is occupied by another former Washingtonian, Mrs. Willard Reed, jr., who was Mary Cowles. The Reeds had with them for the week-end the latter's mother, Ferdinanda W. Reed, one of three women (one has since died) who several months ago bought the Daily Worker, Mrs. Reed, whose family is one of the most conservative in Boston, has long beeo interested in the Soviet Union, and on one trip there helped in building the famous Moscow subway. One of her daughters has lived in the Russian capital for many years.

• • • •

MRS. REED, who is 70 years old, is awaiting a passport from the State Department to return to the Soviet, where she will correspond for the Daily Worker. She I sone of several sisters, all of whom have led unusual lives. One of them, Gertrude Hoffman, of Santa Barbara, crashed the movies at the age of 60, and recently wrote an article for a national magazine telling how. (Her daughter is married to Arthur Bliss, the English composer). Another sister once ran for Mayor of Santa Barbara on the Communist ticket.

AT A SMALL dinner in New York on Saturday I ran into Barbara Korff, who says she will join her mother, Baroness Serge Korff, at their Washington home for the winter. For the past few years Barbara has lived in New York, studying painting. She and her mother spent the summer at their home in West Chop, Martha's Vineyard.

Col. Pedraza To Be Honored

High-ranking American Government officials and Army officers will gather at the Cuban Embassy tonight to meet the chief of staff of the Cuban Army, Col. Jose E. Pedraza. The visitor will be guest of honor at a dinner to be held by the Ambassador, Dr. Pedro Martinez Fraga.

Col. Pedraza is one of the Latin-American officers here to tour American defenses as the guest of Gen. George C. Marshall. When he arrived at the Washington airport, he was met by Dr. Fraga, Col. R. T. Heard, representing the Secretary of War, and Gen. Marshall; the Cuban Military Attache and Senora de Munilla, and Capt. George Hernandez, of the Cuban police.

Also in the welcoming committee were members of Cuba's technical commission, Eduardo I. Montoulieu, Amadeo Lopez Castro, Oscar Garcia Montes, Maj. Antonio Bolet, and Eduardo Durruthy.

Bunges Leave Capital Today

Usually when a diplomat is recalled from Washington he is feted at a hectic series of farewell parties. Exceptions to this general rule are the Counselor of the Argentine Embassy and Senora de Bunge, who are leaving in such a hurry they haven't time to call up friends to say good-by.

Senor Bunge has been transferred to the foreign office in Buenos Aires and he and his wife are leaving Washington today. They will spend two weeks in New York before sailing. The Bunges have been here a year and a half and say they like the Capital so well they hope they're ordered back some day.

Stewart-Richardson Debut Set Dec. 26

Miss Elizabeth Stewart-Richardson, daughter of Maj. and Mrs. Stewart-Richardson, of the British Embassy, has changed the date of her debut from December 28 to December 26. She found that the former date conflicted with a debut party planned several months ago by Miss Barbara Beale.

Miss Stewart-Richardson will make her bow to society at a tea at her parents' residence.

Society Sees Theater Guild Season Open

First-Nighters View 'Suzanna and Elders' At the National

The ninth subscription season of the Theater Guild opened with a well-bred bang last night as Capital society turned out to see "Suzanna and the Elders" at the National.

Lawrence Langner, one of the authors, sat in the audience that gave itself up to wholehearted applause and seemed to have the time of its collective life. Virtually all the regular first-nighters in Washington social circles were among those present, as well as a sizable number who put in appearances at the theater infrequently.

Many Notables Seen in Throng

Boxes on either side the stage had their share of social celebrities. Justice and Mrs. Stanley Reed arrived with Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Smith, with whom they had dined earlier. In the opposite box were Mrs. Edward Beale McLean and her daughter, Miss Evalyn Washington McLean.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Houghteling, accompanied by Frederick Delano, were seen going down the aisle shortly before the curtain went up; as were Mr. and Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin, Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Casper Miller, and Mrs. James Helm, accompanied by Miss Laura Harlan.

Registered mink and certified silver fox seemed to be all over the place, covering fashionable new evening gowns that gave the audience an extra dash of interest. A bright red-fringe jacket, worn with a pencil-slim black skirt, made Mrs. Horace Smith's ensemble particularly attractive. Seated just behind Maj. and Mrs. Smith were Dr. and Mrs. William A. Morgan, the latter wearing a stunning red and gold lame jacket frock.

Many 'Regulars' Among Those Present

Mr. and Mrs. T. Sim Lee were in their usual front seats, as were Mannix Walker and his mother, Mrs. Ernest G. Walker. Several rows back were Mr. and Mrs. John Caswell with debutante Peggy Lansdowne, whose drape champagne frock was topped by a fox cape.

Mr. and Mrs. Carlos del Mar were seen in the crowd; also, Col. and Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim, the latter in a smart turquoise ensemble; and Mrs. Jouett Shouse, who recently returned from a stay in New York.

Lady Chalkley, wearing a simply cut black frock with a short grey jacket, and Lady Leslie, in a pale green gown, arrived together. Others seen there were Col. and Mrs. C. C. Schiffler, Mrs. Irene Caldwell and Mrs. Albert Warner; Mrs. William N. Doak, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Abell, Dr. and Mrs. Edgar P. Copeland, and many others.

ALL-ASSOCIATION DINNER GUESTS—Staff members of the World's Y. W. C. A. Office, moved from Geneva, Switzerland, to Washington for the duration of the war, were guests last night at the all-association dinner in Barker Hall. Among those leaders attending were (left to right) Miss Ann Mills, director of the World's Office; Miss Elsa M. Peterson, president of the board of directors of the Y. W. C. A., and Miss Pearl Carruthers, of the national board

British Guests Speak At Y. W. C. A. Dinner

Members of Organization's World Staff Describe Activities in Europe And Orient, at First Fall Affair

By Jessie Ash Arndt

The Post Club Editor

The first important event of the fall season for the Y. W. C. A. was the all-association dinner last night, sponsored by the membership council, with Miss Ann Mills and Miss Pearl Carruthers as guests of honor. Both are British members of the staff of the World's Y. W. C. A. who arrived recently from Geneva, Switzerland, to establish a temporary office in Washington, now located in the NEA Building.

Miss Mills told of the Geneva office, which is still being kept open under the direction of Miss Ruth Woodsmall, an American, and two other staff members. She also described the difficulties of maintaining contact with some of the branches, due to the war.

Miss Mills recounted the experience she and Miss Carruthers had in getting from Geneva to Spain by auto and by taxi to Lisbon, Portugal, where they waited several weeks for passage to America. There was trouble in finding places to eat and sleep and even to bathe—for baths were at a premium in Lisbon then, she said. The lack of tea also was a problem for the two English women.

The association in each country carries on its own program except in places where war conditions make this impossible and then the world's Y. W. C. A. gives aid, she said.

Associations in the Far East, with gratitude for the contributions sent them from the West, gave to the extent of their ability when the appeal went out for aid in Europe, said Miss Mills.

Miss Elsa Peterson, president of the board of the Washington Y. W. C. A., presided at the dinner, which was attended by more than 200 members and their guests. Others came in later to hear Miss Mills' talk, among them members of the Elizabeth Somers Glee Club and girls from Strong Residence. The glee club sang under the direction of Miss Mary Burnett, and a skit, "It Does Not Happen Here," was presented by members of the business nad professional women's department.

At the head table with the two honor guests were Miss Marcia Dunham, of the national board of the Y. W. C. A., who is here from New York assisting with the establishment of the World's Y. W. office; Mrs. Herbert E. Day, chairman of the community relations committee; Miss Elizabeth M. Haney general secretary; Miss Sara Motley, chairman of the membership council; Miss Ruth Lee Pearson, Mrs. Henry DeCourcey Adams, chairman of the chapter council; Mrs. L. K. Cone, Mrs. John Burlew, Miss Kathryn G. Heath and Mrs. Robert L. Fisher, newly elected president of the Young Married Women's Club of the Y. W. C. A.

Triple-Header Baseball Game at 'Y. M.' Set Saturday With Parents Participating

A TRIPLE-HEADER baseball game is scheduled for Saturday night, October 19, in the gymnasium of the boys' building of the Y. M. C. A. It is all the Parents' Club's doing, for the parents challenged the boys to the games.

The first will be between the mothers and the junior team; the second between the fathers and the senior team and the third between the two winners. The announcement suggests there is plenty of room in the balconies for rooters and that both sides will need them.

Plans are also under way for a big carnival to be given the middle of January by the club and the members of the Boys' Department. A committee has been appointed to plan for the yearly presentation of a silver cup to the outstanding boy. He must fulfill rigid requirements of strength in mind, body and spirit and be liked and respected by both the leaders and other boys. He will have his name engraved on the cup and keep it until the next year's winner is chosen.

The club had its regular meeting Tuesday night.

BALTIMORE ADDRESS—Mrs. Lydia Van Hagen Van Zandt, widely known lecturer of this city, goes to Baltimore on Thursday to speak before the Woman's Club of Roland Park, on "Aspects of International Affairs."

THANKSGIVING POEMS—Poems, stressing the traditions and accomplishments of our country as a reason for giving thanks, are being called for by the National Thanksgiving Association. Mrs. Grace Kiess Swiggett, 701 Nicholson street, District chairman of the poetry contest, is asking all Washington poets to submit from one to three poems of 20 lines or less. The District group is offering prizes in addition to those of the national association, which are $25 for first place, $15 for second, $10 for third and ten $5 awards.

The poems are to be sent to Mrs. Swiggett unsigned, but accompanied by the name and address of the author in a separate envelope. Query M. B. Dickson, of Staples, Minn., is the national chairman.

NATIONAL RECOGNITION—Chapter B of the local P. E. O. Sisterhood, of which Mrs. Edgar B. Meritt is president, received a pat on the back in the October issue of the P. E. O. Record, official organ of the national society.

The Record printed the report of Mrs. Inez Sheldon Tyler, chairman of the program committee, outlining the program for the year and there was a comment on it by the editor, Mrs. Winona Evans Reeves, who was here last season. The program, Mrs. Tyler explains, has been arranged with a view to having more participation by members and less outside talent.

On the committeee with Mrs. Tyler in the preparation of Chapter B's yearbook were Mrs. J. W. Crabtree, Mrs. Swiggett, Mrs. F. B. Linton, Mrs. Ethel Blake, Mrs. J. Harry Cunningham and Mrs. Robert H. Young.

Evening Auxiliary of Women's Guild Announces Session at President's Home; Committees to Be Named

The first get-to-gether meeting with her new official family has been set for November 6 by Miss Marjorie Webster, recently elected president of the Evening Auxiliary of the Women's Guild of the Central Union Mission. This session is to be held at Miss Webster's home on Kalmia Road and is expected to include the committees to be named before that date.

The Auxiliary has chosen an entirely new slate of officers to serve with Miss Webster, except for the treasurer, Miss Jessie Rentz. The remaining officers are: first vice president, Miss Carrie Williams; second vice president, Miss Effie T. Brodnax; recording secretary, Miss Laura Lindley; corresponding secretary, Miss Ruth Failor, and financial secretary, Miss Mabel G. Hutchins.

Mrs. William H. Ramsey again heads the Women's Guild, this being more than 25 years she has served this office. The officers elected with her include: First vice president, Mrs. Jean Bennett; second vice president, Mrs. Caroline B. Stephen; recording secretary, Mrs. Munroe H. Stockett; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Robert Bayley, and treasurer, Mrs. Marion P. Lord.

The first appearance of Susie's Kitchen Band for this winter will be on October 18 at 8 o'clock at the Eldbrooke Methodist Church, Wisconsin Avenue and Ricer Road.

Annual reports of both organizations indicate the past year has been among the best in their respective histories. Mrs. Mervyn Lanham is retiring president of the Auxiliary and Miss Charlotte Darrow, president emeritus, was chairman of the nominating committee which hoose the new official slate.

Observe Anniversary

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Gen. M. Emmet Urell Camp, United Spanish War Veterans, will celebrate its twenty-seventh anniversary at the Pythian Temple, 1012 Ninth Street, tomorrow night. The Military Order of the Serpent will attend in uniform.

Democrats Hear Mrs. Blair

Wendell L. Willkie has disclosed his own unavailability for the office of President by tactics he has used in his campaign, said Mrs. Emily Newell Blair yesterday at the first regular Monday luncheon meeting of the Women's National Democratic Club for the fall and winter.

Mrs. Blair, who is honorary vice president of the club, opened the Monday speaking programs before a large group of members and guests, including Cabinet wives and Government officials.

The issue of national unity and its significance to totalitarian nations, as well as to the friendly powers looking to the United States for democratic leadership, said the speaker, far overshadowed that of the third term, and made it obvious that the Nation should relect the experienced leader who had conducted our foreign affairs for eight years.

The speaker was introduced by Mrs. D. Tucker Brown, president of the club.

Among the guests were Mrs. Cordell Hull, Mrs. Frank Walker, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, Mrs. Albert Cox, Miss Minerva Bernardino and Mrs. James Newell Blair.

Scholarship to Be Presented At D. C. Auxiliary Conference

Marie Louise Ralph Will Receive $250 Oliphant Award When Presidents, Secretaries of Legion Units Meet Saturday

Presentation of the Claire Oliphant Memorial scholarship award of $250 to Marie Louise Ralph will be a feature of the presidents and secretaries conference of the District Department of the American Legion Auxiliary, to be held Saturday at the Department of Commerce auditorium.

Miss Ralph, a junior of Sergt. Jasper Unit, won the scholarship at the national convention in Boston as the entry from the Eastern division of 1940 high school girl graduates. Past national president of the auxiliary, Mrs. Louise Williams will make the presentation at the evening session.

Dr. Lewis G. Beardsley, superintendent of Mount Alto Hospital, will be a guest speaker on the evening program, telling of the appreciation of the hospitalized veterans for the "gift shop" provided for them from which they can make their own selection of gifts to send to their families at Christmas and for other occasions. The "merchandise" in the "shop" is all given by members of the auxiliary.

Other speakers will be Paul Griffith, national employment chairman; Karl Brown, national rehabilitation chairman, and Thomas Owen, national historian of the American Legion.

The department membership chairman, Heywood Saunders, of the legion, and Mrs. Ellen Louise Warren, of the auxiliary, will give a membership "pep" talk.

The Navy Band Orchestra will play at the afternoon session.

The conference will open at 2 p. m. with Mrs. Helen M. McCabe presiding.

Mrs. Edyth O'Connor, conference chairman, is in charge of arrangements. Mrs. Mary Corwin, department parliamentarian, will speak on the proper conduct of units at meetings, and Mrs. Rae R. Zaontz, department publicity director, on how to handle publicity.

Mary Astor Trains to Keep Her Beauty

Goes Thrice Weekly For Two-Hour Gymnasium Workout

By Ida Jean Kain

DON'T BELIEVE IT when you see Mary Astor playing that almost plain role as one of Brigham Young's wives! If the first Mrs. Young had looked like Miss Astor, there might never have been any additions to the famous Mormon's household.

And if the average woman would adopt Miss Astor's vigorous viewpoint—that of "getting down to work instead of trying every fad that comes along"—she would stand a much better chance of keeping and even improving the looks she has. It is not just a stroke of luck that this screen star and mother of two children is as breathtakingly lovely today as she ever was.

Before we knuckle down to the subject of exercise, I'll tell you two of her beauty "secrets." She is convinced "There is nothing like ice! I use it night and morning, after my skin has been thoroughly cleansed. It's the best astringent I know."

Dab on Face, Throat

Should you want to try her tip, have a bowl of ice cubes melting while you are cleansing your face. Then dab the ice water on face and throat with a pad of cotton.

She believes in using plenty of cold cream, but removes every trace of it before going to bed. "It's so messy—the sight of a cold-creamed face must be very repulsive to one's husband! I take it all off and use a tiny bit of lip rouge—so little that it appears natural." Obviously, Miss Astor's skin care suffices. She really has that schoolgirl complexion the advertisers are always talking about.

The second secret is brushing her hair. It is impossible, she says, to brush too much or too often.

Now, let's get down to the point—exercise! "You don't have much luck with your face if you don't take care of your body," she declares. So she goes three times a week, for two hours each time, to a good gymnasium "where I get a supervised workout that includes a bout with the punching bag, stretching exercises of various kinds, and a few of those ballet exercises at a bar. After that I have a steam bath—the kind the Finnish people like—and, finally, a massage. I come out looking like a wet hen and feeling marvelous!"

Family Comes First

You can be sure of one thing: She doesn't neglect her family. Her husband and those two children come first—even in an interview. Her young son, she claims, is the only proof she needs of the value of a good diet. "Look at him," she says, fondly displaying his photograph, "he certainly gets his vitamins!"

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl Pledges Her Pastor to Officiate at Her Wedding To Out-of-Town Man; Then It 'Leaks Out' That Fiance Has Pledged Clergyman Friend of His; What to Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am in trouble and I earnestly request your frank advice. I am soon to be married and until a couple of days ago, I thought it was clearly understood that the marriage ceremony was to be performed by the pastor with whom I have been associated since birth. In fact, I have talked with my pastor about the happy event ever since my engagement was announced.

Now, to my great disappointment, it has literally "leaked out" that my fiance has arranged to have the ceremony performed by a personal friend of his, who is a clergyman. Mind you, there is no question of creed involved. We belong to the same faith. But I live here in Washington and my fiance's home is in a distant city—and the clergyman he has chosen is not his pastor, just a personal friend.

I do not intend to start a quarrel before our vows are exchanged, but I shall be bitterly disappointed if I cannot be married by my own pastor. Am I right or wrong? Also, my parents say it is my privilege to select the clergyman; just as it is my privilege to decide whether we shall be married at home or elsewhere. Hoping for prompt advice in your excellent column, I am, sincerely yours,

CAROLINE M.

Beware of Getting Off to Wrong Start

DEAR CAROLINE M.: In my opinion, you are "wrong" in blowing a fuse about something that surely can be corrected by the exchange of letters or a pleasant conversation via long distance telephone. If you have sufficient confidence in your fiance to marry him, surely you would be justified in assuming he has acted in good faith (even though out of turn, according to "etiquette"), in drafting his "personal friend" to officiate at his wedding.

Maybe the best friend insisted (refusing to take "No," for an answer) upon tying the knot. Maybe your finance doesn't realize that, traditionally, it's up to the bride's family to supervise all "ceremony" arrangements. Or maybe it's just a lot of foolish talk; a kind of joke between them—that some busybody has got wind of and reported to you as fact.

In any event, whatever is behind the rumor, it seems to me you are jumping at trouble in visualizing yourself as "bitterly disappointed" on your wedding day, because of a hushed-up misunderstanding about who was to perform the ceremony. Also, your remark that you "don't intend to start a quarrel before the vows are exchanged," bodes ill for future harmony. It implies that once you get your man, you will feel much more free to give him a piece of your mind—even to lay down the law to him—if and when he bobs up with some bright idea that takes you by painful surprise.

Believe me, if you marry in a mood of suppressed irritation at your bridegroom (because thinking he hasn't played fairly with you; or that you're going to have to "teach him a thing or two"), you will be getting off to a wrong start that probably never can be entirely remedied. What's more, if you can't iron out the present misunderstanding immediately, in the most amiable manner, arriving at a mutually satisfactory agreement upon a clergyman, you haven't any business marrying each other. Heaven help the couple who can't get together on the very details of the marriage ceremony!

As for your parents' view that yours is the privilege of naming the clergyman—one must admit precedent supports that opinion. Emily Post implies the bride's responsibility in the matter, when she says (page 310, 1935 edition of ETIQUETTE): "To begin with, before deciding the date of the wedding, the bride's mother must find out definitely on which day the clergyman who is to perform the ceremony is disengaged . . ."

However, this doesn't mean that the bride is ever justified in coolly overriding the bridegroom's preference, if he happens to have one. If each has a special reason for wanting a clergyman of his own choice,—as distinct from the affianced's preference,—they may compromise by having both clergymen officiate, either at one ceremony or two consecutive ceremonies. It has been done. It also happens that many marriages are performed by a clergyman who has long been identified with the bridegroom's (and NOT the bride's) family.

The solution of your problem is not to be found in proving yourself right and your fiance wrong in the present misunderstanding. Nor is it to be found in biting your lips and steeling yourself to endure "bitter disappointment" for the sake of surface peace. The thing to do is write or telephone the young man, telling him that rumors trickle through which indicate a conference is in order. You might say: "I hear you've got a minister to marry us, and I've got one, too. I've had him ever since the day we got engaged; in fact, ever since the day I was born. How long have you had yours? And what are we going to do with two?

"This really puts us behind the eight ball, doesn't it? Gee, I'm in a fix. Is there any way you could ease your man out of the picture? Could you use him as best man instead? No? Well, gosh. Let's see. Shall we get married twice? Or shall we put both of them to work tying the knot? Maybe we'd just better elope. Honestly, John, if my pastor doesn't marry us, I'm afraid the family will have to leave town. He's been counting on this event for 20-odd years; etc., etc."

In other words, bring a sense of humor (which is to say, a sense of proportion, of ability to see things in their true perspective) to your treatment of the ticklish question. Be enough the "great lady" to spare your fiance any feeling of having blundered badly in balling things up. Invite his cooperation in straightening out the tangle. And DON'T make the mistake of thinking WHO marries you is to be compared in importance to the spirit of cooperation with which you and your husband embark upon the adventure. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Rubies in Lead In Season's Jewels

This season the jewel of first importance is the ruby. Possibly the use of rose, green and yellow-gold in evening jewelry has added to its prestige since the rich red of the ruby is greatly enhanced by its gold setting. Large mounds of rubies and cabachons are worn for ring, and earrings, and bracelets of gold combining rubies and diamonds are large, impressive and rich looking.

A new ruby and pearl necklace is being worn by Loretta Young, the film star.

A young society matron who owns three conically shaped clips of large rubies and diamonds wears the three together on a simple velvet band around her throat for evening—these are clipped on to her coat lapel for daytime, and for cocktail hour at the base of a shaped neckline.

Rubies are very handsome with star sapphires, and a New York jeweler displays a necklace of stars and rubies set with diamonds. However, moonstones set with very tiny rubies or sapphires have a way of looking very lovely.

R. A. F. Bombs Naval Bases

Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

London, Oct. 14.—Fighting its way through ice and clouds, the Royal Air Force last night struck heavily against Germany's main naval bases at Kiel and Wilhelmshaven, and inflicted severe damage on heavy industries in the Ruhr.

Railway junctions, warehouses, airports and other military objectives in western Germany also were attacked, according to the air ministry, while the Channel ports from Ostend to Le Havre came in for their nightly pounding.

British pilots last night met with the worst weather yet, as they swept over western Germany to unloose their bombs on specified targets. Heavy clouds and fog obscured their vision, so that they were forced to fly almost blind most of the time, and subzero temperatures coated their machines with ice, hampering their movements and threatening to force them down in enemy territory.

Several of the British raiders battled their way through to their targets, only to find their objectives completely hidden by low, heavy clouds. Others were most fortunate in meeting with fleeting gaps in the cloud banks, through which they could locate and bomb their targets.

The naval dockyards at Kiel—Baltic base of the German navy—were assaulted by one group of planes which reached the area about 10 p. m. after a 400-mile flight through violent electrical storms and an ice-forming belt, 8,000 feet deep, which extended over the greater part of the route.

When the planes reached Kiel they had to cruise above the area for three-quarters of an hour, waiting for a break in the cloud which would allow them to drop their bombs on the dockyards. When the time came to loose their bombs the flash of the exploding bombs could be seen as a sudden glow over the enveloping carpet of clouds.

The naval dockyards at Wilhelmshaven—Germany's naval base on the North Sea—were attacked during a heavy snowstorm, which at times reduced visibility to zero. Two of the main shipping basins were, however, located through momentary cloud breaks and heavily bombed despite severe antiaircraft fire from the ground batteries.

Shortly after midnight British raiders reached Hamburg and dropped a number of high explosives on the Blohm and Voss shipbuilding yards.

Weather conditions over the industrial Ruhr district were little better, according to the air ministry. Again thick clouds obscured all vision, but the bomber force detailed to attack a large coal tar factory at Duisburg—where nearly half the coal tar in Germany is distilled—finally succeeded in finding its objective after a chance glimpse of the plant's tall chimneys through a gap in the murky skies.

Sticks of high explosives, the air ministry stated, were dropped on the factory and a large fire broke out after the bombing.

Despite the "appalling" weather, the Royal Air Force pilots managed to locate and bomb a number of other targets in the Ruhr, including the Krupp munitions factory at Essen, the motor viaduct near Schwerte and a railway junction where several warehouses were struck and set afire.

Other raiders, prevented by the weather from finding their primary objectives, sought out alternative targets. High explosive bombs were dropped by these aircraft on airports at Wesel, Woensdrecht and Texel, on gun positions on the islands of Borkum and Terschelling and on the seaplane base at Norderney.

The harbor of Flushing had been heavily attacked earlier by a squadron of coastal command bombers. The main railway line junction was one of their chief targets. Severe explosions, followed by fierce fires, were caused by the British bombs, the air ministry stated.

Other coastal command planes carried out attacks over Domburg harbor, northwest of Flushing, and across the quays at Zeebrugge, Belgium.

Calais, on the French coast, came in for the heaviest attack among the Channel ports. British raiders swooped over the area in a series of raids which began at 8 p. m. and lasted until nearly midnight.

Among the other Channel ports bombed by the British last night were Ostend, Dunkerque and Le Havre.

One British plane was reported missing as a result of last night's operations.

U. S. Will Send Three Liners To Evacuate 3,000 in Orient

The State Department announced last night that three American liners are being dispatched to the Far East to help repatriate about 3,000 Americans desiring to return immediately to the United States because of disturbed conditions in that area.

It said the Matson liners Mariposa and Monterey were being pressed into service and the United States liner Washington was being prepared to leave New York next Saturday for a special journey to the Orient.

State Department officials said that reports from the Far East indicated that about 3,000 Americans in China and Japan desired to return to the United States in accordance with the Government's advice to nationals to consider leaving the Orient.

About 17,000 Americans are in the areas where consuls were instructed to advise evacuation. Most of the 3,000 seeking immediate return are civilian employes of the United States Army and Navy and women and children of military families.

The announcement of the special transportation arrangements came almost on the eve of the imposition of an embargo against iron and steel scrap to countries outside the Western Hemisphere, except Great Britain. This measure, which becomes effective at midnight tomorrow, strikes especially at Japan, which has obtained most of its scrap from this country.

The announcement also precedes by four days the reopening of the Burma Road for military supplies to China.

Nazis Hammer England With Attack Planes

Pilots of Lighter, More Limber Craft Report Great Fires

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Oct. 14.—Pursuing its new strategy of using faster, more maneuverable fighting planes to freight cargoes of explosives to England, the Luftwaffe hammered a whole string of "war important" industrial plants with "well-aimed" bombing today, military quarters reported.

The pilots of fighting squadrons returned with reports that great destructive fires had broken out in west and southwest England under the impact of their raids, it was said.

Attack planes, used instead of egular bombers, were dispatched in such rapid order yesterday to carry out a rolling barrage, the high command said, that the English were given almost no chance to rest their gun and fighter crews.

Fires Seen for Miles

Conflagrations were visible for miles from London and great damage was done in Liverpool and other places, its communique declared.

Both light and heavy fighting planes, protected by other chaser squadrons, unloaded bombs on London's Victoria and India Docks yesterday and last night, a communique said, and started explosions and fires which could be seen by new attack waves moving over the mouth of the Thames, 40 miles away. A power plant also was reported hit.

An even heavier attack was directed against Britain's great west coast shipping center at Liverpool, the high command added, and here again explosions and fires resulted.

Two Barracks Hit

Barracks in two army camps in south England and numerous military objectives in central England were also destroyed or damaged, it was declared.

The high command said the attack by a long-range German bomber on a British ship near Gibraltar, reported in German dispatches yesterday, resulted in the sinking of a ship of 3,000 or 4,000 tons "west of Cadiz."

Britain's "random" attacks against Germany did very little damage, the communique declared. DNB, the official news agency, said, however, that several dwellings were damaged and a factory railroad siding torn up by British bombs.

British reports of damage to an electric power station in the Moabit district of Berlin, a gas works and and important freight yard damaged by tons of bombs in a British raid Saturday night were challenged by German authorities who declared only five incendiary and eight explosive bombs, of which two were duds, were dropped.

Pension Bill For Firemen, Police Signed

President Roosevelt yesterday signed a bill which permits District police and firemen, United States Park Police, White House Police and Secret Service men assigned to the White House to retire voluntarily at half pay providing they have reached the age of 55 and served 25 years.

One of the officers who will be eligible for retirement, District officials understood, will be Col. Edmund W. Starling, chief of the White House detail of Secret Service.

Because of a Senate amendment restricting the amount of any year's pension to $30,000, only a limited number of police and firemen will be able to take advantage of the retirement plan.

It was reported more than a week ago that the Commissioners were going to report adversely on the legislation because of the Barkley amendment extending the retirement privilege to Secret Service aides at the White House. Yesterday, the Commissioners declined to comment on the President's action.

The Secret Service men eligible for retirement will transfer their civil service retirement funds to the police and firemen's fund. This will not be equal to the amount of pension for which they will be eligible. The District consequently will have to make up the difference.

State Distributes 15,000 Bass Fry In Shenandoah

Front Royal, Va., Oct. 14 (AP).—The State's Front Royal fish hatchery has distributed 15,000 small mouth bass in the Shenandoah River and its two main branches this season. They will not reach legal size of 10 inches before next summer, said Manager W. C. Hawley of the hatchery.

Altogether, 10,000 of the fry have been distributed in the north fork of the Shenandoah between Strasburg and Harrisonburg, and 3,000 in the south fork between Front Royal and Luray. About 2,500 were placed in the main river from Front Royal downstream to Berryville.

The hatchery has distributed approximately 60,000 of the small mouth bass this season, including many in the southwestern part of the State.

U. S., Canada To Rush Power Project Study

International Plant Would Provide Current For Defense Industries

Looking toward "adequate power supplies" for defense industries, the United States and Canada last night announced they would start immediate engineering and other "investigations" for a huge power project in the St. Lawrence River.

The undertaking will cover only "that part of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Basin project which is located in the international rapids section" of the river. It does not involve action on the navigation phases of the St. Lawrence project, which were in the treaty refused ratification by the Senate in 1934.

Carrying out the speed theme of the defense program, the State Department, announcing the agreement, said the investigations were to be started now so that no part of a "favorable construction season" need be lost when final agreement is reached on the project itself.

At the same time the United States agreed provisionally, "pending conclusion of a final Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Basin agreement," to permit the Province of Ontario to use immediately additional waters at Niagara Falls for power to meet Canadian defense needs.

Both the Canadian and American governments announced the agreement in a statement saying:

"In order to assure adequate power supplies to meet the requirements of defense production in the Northeastern part of the United States and in Canada, steps have been taken by the Government of these United States and Canada to initiate immediately preliminary engineering and other investigations for that part of the Great-Lakes-St. Lawrence Basin project which is located in the International Rapids section of the St. Lawrence River.

"These steps have been taken in order that the entire project may be started without loss of a favorable construction season when final decision is reached between the two governments. The investigations will be made under the direction of temporary committees to be appointed by the two governments.

"Meanwhile, to assist in providing an adequate supply of power to meet Canadian defense needs, and contingent upon the Province of Ontario's agreeing to provide immediately for diversion into the Great Lakes system of waters from the Albany River basin which normally flow into Hudson Bay, the Government of the United States has informed the Canadian government that it will interpose no objection, pending the conclusion of a final Great Lakes-St. Lowrence basin agreement between the two countries, to the immediate utilization for power at Niagara Falls by the Province of Ontario of additional waters equivalent in quantity to the diversions into the Great Lakes basin above referred to."

U. S. Talks Involve Naval, Air Bases In Latin America

Secretary Hull indicated yesterday that naval and air base facilities were involved in discussions with various South American countries, but said that there was no question of any change in sovereignty.

He said that exchanges were taking place regarding all phases of hemisphere defense and that any talks relating to facilities, resources or methods were within the scope of the Havana and Panama inter-American conferences.

His comment was prompted by reports from South America that Brazil and Chile had agreed to lease naval and air bases to the United States.

Santiago, Chile, Oct. 14.—The ministry of foreign relations declared this evening that a report published in New York, according to which Chile and Brazil were ready to grant naval and air bases to the United States, was unfounded, as far as Chile is concerned.

5,000 Doctors Will Attend Meeting Here

Scientific Assembly Opens Today, to Have Elaborate Exhibits

Approximately 5,000 physicians from Washington and three nearby States will attend the annual scientific assembly of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia, opening today at the Mayflower Hotel.

They will witness one of the most elaborate exhibits ever seen here, and as a sideline, the exhibition of the hobbies engaged in by Washington physicians.

In all, 40 booths, many of these sponsored by large Washington institutions, were being set up yesterday. The largest display will be from Walter Reed Hospital on activities at this Army medical center. Second largest space was allotted the Warwick Clinic at Garfield Hospital. This booth will explain some of the newer methods of diagnosis by X-ray.

Dr. Daniel D. V. Stuart, of Washington, brought an outstanding exhibit to the hobby displays—a model of the sloop of war Hornet, an 18-gun fighting craft used by the Navy in 1811. The model was built by an officer aboard the sloop, although some of its rigging was restored by Dr. Stuart.

The hobby show is an innovation of the assembly. More than 80 physicians are cooperating in it, demonstrating the devices they turn to for relaxation. Paintings, electrical railroads, cedar chests, stamps and photography comprise the bulk of exhibits being set up in the Chinese room at the hotel.

On the scientific side, "congenital hearts" is the subject of a display by Dr. Margaret Nicholson, featuring 12 patients, children all born with heart ailments who will be available for examination by the visiting doctors.

Another exhibit will concern preserved blood and plasma transfusions, a display providing for the visitors the clinical experiences at Gallinger Hospital in 1,000 transfusions in which the blood plasma or liquid portion of the blood, without the cells was injected.

The sessions will continue through Thursday.

Italy's Eastern Mediterranean Bases Raided

British Pound Points Vital to Axis Drive Toward Asia Minor

By the Associated Press

Rome, Oct. 14.—British sea and air raids on Italian bases in Eastern Mediterranean zones which are potential battlefields of the European war were reported today, by the high command.

British bombers attacked Portolago, on the fortified island of Lero, in the Dodecanese, where Italian air and naval bases are situated.

A direct hit on a Catholic church "and other civilian buildings" killed 34 persons and injured 20 "without considerable damage to military objectives," the communique said. Two British warplanes were shot down, it declared.

(The Dodecanese Islands, lying like stepping stones off the Turkish coast in the Aegean Sea, might have high strategic importance in Axis plans to reach Asia Minor. They have been the target of repeated British raids. Lero, particularly, is regarded as valuable to any such plan.)

Warships Shell Coastal Bases

Three British warships, the communique reported, also pounded Italian positions near Sidi Barrani, on Egypt's Mediterranean coast along the line of the Italian push eastward from Libya toward the Suez. It said no casualties or damage resulted, however.

A shed was hit and several telephone lines were cut at the Libyan port of Tobruk in a long British air attack, the communique acknowledged but, it said, "intense, accurate antiaircraft reaction . . . made the enemy's fire noticeably inaccurate."

Italian fliers were credited with having spread large fires with bull's eye hits on British works at Perim, on the Red Sea, and with having caught British forces unawares with night raids on flying fields at Fuka and El Daba, in Egypt.

Italian Unit Surprised

Cairo, Egypt, Oct. 14 (AP).—A fight in which a British mechanized patrol caught an Italian unit of 120 men crossing a river in the eastern Anglo-Egyptian Sudan and inflicted heavy casualties was reported today by the British command here.

This fight occurred at the River Cash, 20 miles southeast of Kassala, near the Sudan-Eritrea border. This region has seen increased patrol and aviation activity recently.

The British communique also reported an Italian air raid on British "forward positions" in the Gallabat region, farther south, but said there were no casualties or damage.

New Stanton School Need Stressed

Present Building Rouses Criticism Of Hillcrest Citizens' President

John W. Martin, president of the Hillcrest Citizens Associations, charged last night that the lunchroom of Stanton School at Alabama Avenue and Naylor Road is unsanitary, that its roof leaks when it rains and that the interior of the building has not been painted in 10 years.

Reporting to the association after an investigation, Martin declared that a thorough reconditioning of the structure would make the school suitable for use this year, but that a new building was really needed.

He pointed to the use of a "portable" wooden annex which is being used for the overflow attendance at the school as proof that a newer and larger building would be a worthwhile investment. The annex, Martin added, will be dangerously cold in the winter, since it is heated by a single stove.

West End Association

Efforts to further a Commissioners' survey of the liquor distribution system in the District will be renewed by the West End Citizens Association as part of a five-point program of unfinished business, readopted last night at its annual meeting.

Discussion of the survey proposal set off criticism of the ABC Board by several members of the Association. Walter F. Wasson, president, said it was "absurd" for a man's business to be suspended for a day for certain "serious violations," as is happening, he added.

Wasson was reelected to a third term as president, at the meeting held in the Third Precinct station.

Other points on the renewed program which the association will push in the coming year are: Installation of parking meters on Pennsylvania Avenue between Seventeenth and Twenty-second Streets; request for removal of the west works of the Washington Gas Co.; purchase by the District of two properties adjacent to Precinct No. 3, on the east, for parking lot for impounded cars; request for Capital Transit Co. to sell three tokens for a quarter.

Warren Gardner explained a plan which had been "put up" to West End businessmen for sponsoring a recreation program for boys of the section.

Other officers named last night, most of whom were reelected, were John F. Kelley, first vice president; Warren Gardner, second vice president; W. Paul Sweet, third vice president; Elaine Wasson, secretary; William R. Brown, treasurer; Austin N. Cooper, delegate to the Federation of Citizens Associations, along with Walter F. Wasson.

Kalorama

The Kalorama Citizens Association last night voted to request the National Capital Park and Planning Commission to acquire approximately a square block of territory at Columbia and Kalorama Roads Northwest for park purposes.

Members, meeting in the John Quincy Adams School, heard Mrs. Cora Casey, of the American Red Cross, report activities of the organization and made a roll call appeal.

Piney Branch

The Piney Branch Citizens Association last night went on record approving an amendment to a proposed alcoholic beverage control act placing a ban on all liquor establishments within 600 feet of churches, schools and playgrounds. There is no existing regulation on the distance liquor establishments must be from public institutions.

It was urged in a resolution that the new Wilson Teachers College be placed on the site of the old tuberculosis hospital at Upshur and Thirteenth streets northwest.

A speaker at the meeting accused the District Health and Engineer Departments of "passing the buck" in removal of ragweed from an estimated three acres of District property in the vicinity of the Roosevelt High School.

Frank G. Thomas, of 1509 Buchanan street northwest, termed the ragweed a "demon in the District." He cited an article appearing recently in The Post in which it was stated that property owners are compelled by law to remove ragweed from their land.

Park View

Park View Citizens Association last night adopted a resolution regretting the reduction in the number of teachers at Park View School, in its conversion from a platoon school to a regular elementary school. The transferred teachers were thanked for their long service.

After a discussion of the question of reopening the District testing laboratory, the matter was left to the association's legislative committee for further investigation.

John T. McGrath, a former president of the association, made a talk on community history. The meeting was held at Park View School.

National Gateway

Sponsorship of a drive to obtain an ambulance for the community was undertaken last night by the National Gateway Citizens Association.

The association urged that the abandoned fire station at Twenty-second and Franklin Streets Northeast be converted into a library branch; requested a mail box for the corner of Twenty-first Place and Lafayette Avenue Northeast and called for reopening of the District Testing Laboratory.

In other resolutions the unit opposed a proposed zoning change to permit light factories and warehouses on Bladensburg road, between Hickey Road and New York Avenue, and protested a plan to cut short curb and gutter improvement in the area.

A committee, including N. M. Murray, Diedrick Egbers, Bennett G. Miller, and Mrs. Marie Cuthbertson Nold, was named to seek bus transportation in the neighborhood.

Aggressive Association Has Obtained Many Improvements in Western Section Of City Since Its Formation in 1916

This is the sixteenth article in a series of citizens associations in the District of Columbia and their efforts to make the community a better place in which to live.

Traffic problems caused by automobiles forcing pedestrians off west Washington roads back in 1916 resulted in a mass meeting of residents of that area and formation of the Conduit Road Citizens Association.

Sidewalks were obtained in short order, and since then a good share of the development of the sector between the Potomac River, Foxall Village, the Maryland line and Georgetown has been originated by the association, according to its spokesmen.

The new Palisades Park development and Field House near Conduit Road, plenty of paved streets and walks, high water pressure, gas, bus service and storm sewers are some of the accomplishments that have been sponsored at monthly meetings of the organization over the past 24 years.

First on the association's program for this fall is a plan to improve bus service for the sector, now highly inadequate, according to President Thomas V. Regan, of 4757 Conduit Road Northwest.

The citizens' unit is also driving for a new library for the area and underground conduits to carry the present overhead wires through the neighborhood.

Policy of the organization is to keep a close watch on the type of businesses established in the community, to oppose liquor stores and dance places, and to maintain the current residential zoning provisions. It has opposed the regulation proposed for the District to permit religious groups to build in all residential districts.

President Regan has lived in the District for two years and considers the vote here unnecessary, although he believes most of the members favor national suffrage for District residents. He does favor having the city run by somebody with the influence of the Senate and House committees, but without their other more pressing interests.

Next social get-together of the association will be at a Halloween party October 31, in the Palisades Park Field House, sponsored jointly with the Potomac Post of the American Legion and the Parent-Teachers Association.

Regular meetings are held on the last Thursday of each month at 8 p. m. in the Field House, Edmunds Street and Sherrier Place Northwest. This month's meeting, however, will be held October 24.

Officers of the association include President Regan, Mrs. Rosetta Wells, vice president; George Morse, treasurer, and A. D. MacKinnon, secretary. Delegates to the Federation of Citizens Association are Regan and Charles E. S. Rich, and to the Board of Trade, Walter Cunyus.

Engineer's Wife, Ball Player Guilty Of Housebreaking

The wife of a District municipal engineer and a former major league ball player were found guilty of housebreaking yesterday and each given sentences of one to three years. Because neither had had a previous criminal conviction, they were placed on probation.

The sentences were imposed by Justice James W. Morris, of the United States District Court here, on Mrs. Virginia Blatt, 31, of Kensington, Md., and John W. Jones, 38, of the 3600 block of Queseda Street Northwest. Both had pleaded guilty to looting a model home on Primrose Street Northwest.

Mrs. Blatt now faces a second trial in Montgomery County, where she is being held in $2,000 bond for the housebreaking into three exhibit homes there.

'Trial of Errors' Victim Receives Maryland Parole

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 14 (AP).—Arlie Lewis, convicted of second-degree murder at a "trial of errors" in the Wicomico County Circuit Court in 1935, was paroled today by Gov. O'Conor.

O'Conor also paroled five other prisoners, including Edward W. Case, 63-year-old former Carroll County real estate broker convicted of embezzlement, and remitted a fine to Robert Anderson, who recently was pardoned.

Lewis was sentenced to 15 years in the penitentiary in the death of Howard Kelly, whose body was found in a mill pond, near Powellsville. The Governor said both men had been drinking and apparently had engaged in a fight.

After Lewis was sentenced it was discovered that the form of procedure used at the 1935 trial had been repealed by the 1933 Legislature.

Fleming Urges Understanding Of Bank Service

Robert V. Fleming, president of the Riggs National Bank, declared last night it is the duty of the banks "to give the public an understanding of what the banking service means to the community."

He addressed more than 200 persons attending a customers' relations meeting of the bank at the Wardman Park Hotel.

William Powers, director of customer relations of the American Banking Association, declared that "the way to increase the earning power of the banks and to improve their standing in public opinion . . . is to sell more banking interests to more people in such a way as to convince the public that we in the banking system are best fitted to run it."

James F. Bridges, of the Riggs National Bank, was chairman of the gathering.

Decision Due Today On Zoning Change

A definite decision on the requested zoning change of a 300-acre parcel owned by Edward Maloney near West Lanham is expected to be made today by the Prince Georges County Board of Commissioners.

At the last meeting of the board a request was made to rezone the property to permit the erection of a recreation center. The plans for the center included a midget auto race track, swimming pool, dancing pavilion and picnic grove.

The commissioners tabled the proposal in order to investigate the Maryland code on reversion of the property to a residential zone should the recreation center cease operations.

First Printing of U. S. Anthem To Go on Display Tomorrow

Stowed away in a rustic attic for an undetermined number of years, one of the two known existent copies of the first published version of the Star-Spangled Banner will be on public display for the first time at the Congressional Library tomorrow.

Behind the worn 8 by 6½-inch broadside containing the National Anthem and a description of how it came to be written is a long story of scholarly research and discussion.

The copy which will go on display was discovered last summer by Jesse L. Cassard, of Baltimore, in an old scrapbook in his attic.

History of Anthem

The exact circumstances under which the broadside came to be printed and distributed may never be known, but this is the account on which Congressional Library officials agree:

Francis Scott Key jotted down a preliminary sketch of the song, with some of the lines left blank, on the back of an old envelope as he paced the decks of a British ship on the morning of September 14, 1814. As a prisoner of war, he watched his countrymen defend Fort McHenry in Baltimore against the British onslaught and in "the dawn's early light" saw that "the flag was still there."

Key was released that day. The same evening he completed the stanzas and wrote out the first full draft. He showed it to his brother-in-law, Judge Nicholson, of Baltimore, who took it to the office of the Baltimore American and Commercial Daily Advertiser for publication.

Type Set Up by Boy

Since all newspapers in the city had suspended publication while able-bodied citizens shouldered arms against the British, there was only a 14-year-old apprentice, Samuel Sands, to set type for the broadside.

It is a copy of this broadside which comes to the Library a century and a quarter later. The other known copy is in the Walters Art Gallery, Baltimore.

Judge Steps Down for Medical Suit

Morris Decides Some Might Regard His Presence As 'Prejudicial'

Justice James W. Morris last night announced that he would decline to preside over the antitrust prosecution of the American Medical Association and District Medical Society which was scheduled to open before him next Monday.

Indictment of the medical groups and a score of eminent physicians in December, 1938, climaxed a bitter controversy over alleged monopolistic practices of "organized medicine." The indictment charged a criminal conspiracy against Group Health Association, Inc., of Washington.

During part of this controversy, Justice Morris was an Assistant Attorney Genery, in charge of the tax division of the Department of Justice. He said in a statement that since ascending to the bench he has felt free to act in cases which originated in divisions other than the one in which he served, when the parties understood the situation and that when the medical case was before him this summer "it was the desire of all parties" that he should preside.

However, said Justice Morris: "I now understand form counsel for the defendants that they are fearful that many of the thousands of members of the medical profession throughout the country, who are interested in the result of this case—not understanding that an Assistant Attorney General rarely has personal or official connection or knowledge of cases in a division other than his own, and that this case is not one of those rare exceptions—might feel that the case was being tried before a judge who had had such previous conection with it as would be prejudicial to a fair and impartial trial. In these circumstances, I am not willing to act in this case."

Also sitting in criminal sessions is Justice F. Dickinson Letts, before whom the medical case is likely to come, unless a third justice is assigned to criminal court this week. District Attorney Edward M. Curran last week requested a third justice, but the court denied his request until further study of the need could be made.

District Income Tax Payment Due Today

Today will be the last day for Washingtonians to pay their second installment of the District income tax.

District officials said that approximately $700,000 was due on the second installment of the more than $3,200,000 tax levy, but they explained that much of this has been paid within recent weeks.

Failure to pay the remainder of the tax today will bring a penalty of 1 per cent a month thereafter.

Fireman Hurt When Truck Hits Ladder

Boy, 12, and Three Women Are Injured In District Accidents

A fireman was hurt early today when a hook and ladder collided with a transport truck at Third and F Streets Northwest, and four persons were sent to hospitals last night after other traffic accidents here.

Fireman J. C. Cooke, 27, suffered a leg injury when the hook and ladder, going to a minor restaurant fire, was struck and nearly broken in two by the huge trailer-truck.

Fireman C. K. Gladhill, also riding on the fire apparatus, escaped injury by jumping over a ladder and to the safety of the transport's top.

Boy Hurt in Fall

Police said James M. Kelley, 27, of Charlotte, N. C., drove the heavily-laden transport out of Third Street, past two other trucks stopped at the intersection to let fire apparatus go by on F Street.

Cooke was treated at Emergency Hospital. Firemen Edward Bowden, of No. 1 Truck Co., was driving the hook and ladder.

An unidentified white boy about 12 years old was critically injured when he fell from the rear of a truck on which witnesses said he had hitched a ride. The brown-haired youngster, dressed in blue dungarees, was still unconscious at Providence Hospital five hours after the fall, which occurred at Peace Monument, just west of the Capitol.

Two Women Injured

Hazel Auth, 30, of 2904 Thirteenth Street Northwest, was admitted to Emergency Hospital with injuries received when a car in which she was a passenger collided with a truck at Thirteenth and M Streets Northwest. Police listed David H. Mellott, 22, of 655 Morris Place Northwest, as driver of the car, and William F. Waters, colored, 33, of 1124 New Hampshire Avenue Northwest, as driver of the truck.

Bernice L. Smith, 24, of 1724 Duke Street, Alexandria, Va., suffered possible internal injuries when her car collided with a truck driven, police said, by Walter Watson, 39, of Baltimore, in the 100 block of Rhode Island Avenue. She was admitted to Sibley Hospital.

Struck by an automobile at Seventh and F Streets Northwest, Bessie Lockyer, 63, of 7209 Eighth Street Northwest, was admitted to Emergency Hospital with a fractured leg. George Pell, of 606 Tewksbury Place Northwest, was listed by police as driver of the car.

Trial Opens in Death Of D. C. Policeman

Clarence Blocker, 24, colored truck driver, went on trial in the District Court yesterday on charges of killing Park Policeman Ivan W. Thompson when resisting arrest last June 14. Conviction would subject him to the death penalty.

Thompson stopped Blocker at First and I Streets Northeast to arrest him on a charge of reckless driving. They struggled. Blocker is accused of seizing Thompson's revolver and firing several bullets into the policeman as he lay on the ground.

Club to Hear Talk By Dr. Steinmeyer

Dr. R. G. Steinmeyer, professor of economics of the University of Maryland, will talk on "The World Today" at a dinner meeting of the Business and Professional Woman's Club of Montgomery County, Md., at 6:30 o'clock tonight at Olney Inn.

Extra Effort Being Made to Reach Quota This Week

A total of 87,562 enrollments were received by the District Red Cross Chapter roll call through yesterday, leaving 42,438 to be secured before Saturday night. Memberships fell 430 behind the total for the same date in last year's drive, it was announced.

General Chairman Edgar Morris said that workers must stage a concerted campaign during the five remaining days, returning an average of 8,447 members per day to assure the goal of 130,000. This average is 1,000 greater than the average for the last five days of 1939, when 37,536 enrollments were made.

Reporting only 2,651 memberships yesterday, the workers are looking forward to the last bimonthly pay day in the campaign to put the drive ahead. Yesterday's enrollments were secured almost entirely from large business units. All divisions of the roll call other than Government and booths fell behind comparative figures of a year ago.

Rabbi Makes Appeal

Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, of the Washington Hebrew Congregation, will broadcast on behalf of the roll call over Station WOL at 9 p. m. today.

200 Attend Meeting

General Chairman Edgar Morris, entertaining group chairmen last night at a banquet given with Mrs. Morris at the Army and Navy Country Club, urged "concerted efforts" to put the drive over the top before it ends Saturday.

The enthusiastic dinner meeting, attended by an estimated 200 persons, heard inspirational addresses praising Chairman Morris for his previous two years' chairmanship and spurring roll call volunteers toward success this year.

Miss Mabel T. Boardman, secretary of the American Red Cross, congratulated the District chapter on its record during the last four roll calls, in which she said the local group obtained more enrollments on a population basis than any other chapter.

Other Guests Speak

Guests of honor with Miss Boardman were Commissioner and Mrs. David C. McCoach.

Other guests, most of whom addressed the meeting, were Brig. Gen. and Mrs. F. R. Keefer, Mr. and Mrs. Walter L. Davidson, Mrs. Ernest Swift, James L. Fieser, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Rust, John Saul, Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Robinson, Capt. and Mrs. H. C. Whitehurst, Miss Janet Fish and Mr. and Mrs. John W. Childress.

Yale Adopts Stringent 'De-Emphasis' Program

Ogden Miller Tells New York Football Writers Elis May Drop Old Rivals

By Bob Considine.

New York, Oct. 14.—In the wake of Yale's 50-7 loss to a great Penn team, Ogden Miller, director of athletics at the New Haven school, announced today at the New York Football Writers' luncheon that Yale is embarking on a newer and more stringent period of "deemphasis" for its football team.

Miller, who read his announcement painstakingly, to guard against "misquoting," called the announcement a "restatement" of Yale athletic policy, but envisioned changes that were not incorporated in a similar announcement of two years ago.

The Yale football team has been grossing about $500,000 income for several years, Miller said, an amount which just covers the cost of the university's athletic program. Miller said that an effort would be made to scale down these costs, and that once they were scaled down there would be a like deduction of ticket charges.

May Cut Cornell, Penn

"If we find that we can no longer play on even terms with our current and traditional rivals, we'll drop them from our schedule," Miller said. In this connectoin he mentoined Cornell and Penn as two possible foes, but added that Yale was making no insinuation that either school was going in for high-pressure football enlisting of grid talent. He reminded reporters that Yale has won 16 of its last 20 games against Cornell, though none for three years.

"The primary function of any director of athletics is to keep college athletics and educational goals in balance," Miller read to his slightly surprised audience of hard-bitten coaches and reporters. "In carrying any sport, and in particular football, to extremes we can be certain that we must compromise the principles of which most colleges were founded.

Athletics Face Crisis

"College athletics are at a critical stage. The development of big time football has had repercussions all down the line. Its major contribution for good has been the providing of funds to make possible athletics for all. Beyond that gift I would like to have someone list other tangible benefits. Big time football doesn't increase the educational stature of any institution; it doesn't make loyal alumni; it doesn't bring increased gifts to he alumni fund.

"Sports facilities for all would have been provided in some measure by many colleges without the commercialization of football. If gate reecipts from football were reduced sharply, the cost (of the athletic program) would be borne partly by gate reecipts, partly by student fees and partly by income from existing or new endowment funds.

"There will always be intercollegiate contests at Yale; all of our sports will be continued to every possible degree. If economic conditions force us to retrench we will retrench in places where the fewest students will be affected.

Football Reaching Peak

"We could enlist a swarm of athletes if we believed in that (big time) policy. We believe that athletes who need help should be treated neither better nor worse than nonathletes. That belief does not give us any holier than thou complex. We hold to it because in 240 years we have found that it best furthers the real purpose of the university.

"We believe that intercollegiate football is now reaching a peak of emphasis in many colleges which it reached elsewhere many years ago. I believe that there will be a decline or leveling off in the next several years and that even graver problems are ahead for some who will have to consolidate and retrench drastically. Professional football is one signpost along the way. Those who nurture the golden hope of continued high revenues in the future are, I fear, headed for trouble.

Lean Years Seen

"Until the problem resolves itself, Yale, and others, may be in for lean yers. We believe we are on the right track. We believe we will carry through and merit public respect."

Later Mr. Miller told reporters that about 75 per cent of the current Bulldog football squad was supporting itself by working at odd jobs around the university, or was receiving help from outside sources. No action, of course, will be taken about reducing the caliber of Yale's rivals this year, and contracts for games extending over next year and perhaps 1942 will probably be honored, no matter how overmatched the gradually weakened Bulldog will become." Miller could not state whether Yale would continue to sell its radio rights, purportedly for $25,000 a season.

V.P.I. May Give Hoyas Real Test Friday

Gobblers Victims Of Bad Breaks in Losing Three Straight

By Jack Munhall

Though the Waynesburg scare should have served as a stern warning to Georgetown's team in particular and the public in general that few football teams are setups nowadays, there seems to be an inclination on the part of both to view V. P. I. with ill-concealed disdain.

Virginia Poly, you know, will invade here Friday night, take a crack at Georgetown's great three-year record which includes 19 games without defeat, the only failure in that time being last year's 13-13 tie with Syracuse.

Well, it seems that V. P. I. not only looms as a real test for the Hoyas, but likely will cause more trouble than Waynesburg unless there is an immediate change of spirit among Georgetown players.

No "Wolf" Story

It is no "wolf" publicity to point out that V. P. I., with a 43-man squad which had been highly rated before the season, has encountered more than its share of bad luck in dropping its first three games. All by the margin of a single touchdown. The Gobblers opened their season with a 13-7 loss to Marshall College after holding a 7-6 lead with exactly one minute to play. Marshall marched 51 yards in those final 60 seconds to score an upset victory.

Next the groggy Gobblers ran into strong Richmond and a one-man Spider wrecking squad called Art Jones who was the deciding factor of the game. Despite the fact that the Gobblers outgained Richmond they dropped another 13-7 ball game, when Jones scored two touchdowns and kept V. P. I. on the defensive with his splendid plunging, passing and punting.

Then last week V. P. I. met William and Mary, another eleven which had not justified preseason rave notices, and was beaten, 20-13, in a sluggish game in which neither played up to par. Georgetown Head Coach Jack Hagerty and Line Coach George Murtagh scouted the Gobblers in that one and reported that extreme heat had both teams exhausted before the first half was over.

Feuds Feature This Week's Football Card

Tennessee-Alabama, Stanford-Wash. State Are Banner Games

By the United Press

New York, Oct. 14.—Purely regional competition—with its traditional rivalries and old-time feuds—features this week's national football program on which the two banner games are Tennessee-Alabama and Stanford-Washington State.

This Dixie classic between Maj. Neyland's volunteers and Frank Thomas' Alabama Crimson tide at Birmingham will have an important bearing upon the ultimate southeastern conference title, at least, although mighty Mississippi is still a strong contender for that crown.

Tennessee will be favored to beat Alabama again for two reasons: (1) in the volunteers' three games this season, they showed plenty of class, beating one major opponent, Duke, 13-0, while Alabama has played only three minor opponents; (2) both engaged Mercer, whom Tennessee downed 49-0, and whom Alabama vanquished only 20-0.

Coast Bellringer

That Pacific Coast collision between Stanford's enlivened Indians and strong Washington State at Pullman, Wash., shapes up as a bellringer which may make or break their robust conference and Rose Bowl hopes. Stanford won but one of its nine games last season, but under Clark Shaughnessy, new coach, it is the surprise team of 1940, with three straight victories over San Francisco, Oregon and Santa Clara. Meanwhile, Washington State entered its threat by deadlocking Southern California, 14-14, and beating Montana and California.

Washington tackles Oregon State in another excellent Pacific Conference clash, while Southern Cal. engages Oregon, and California meets U. C. L. A.

Competition reaches blow-torch heat in the Midwestern Big Ten, where the four outstanding title contenders get stiff tests in a quartet of conference brawls. Northwestern, conqueror of Ohio State, meets Wisconsin; mighty Minnesota—after a week of rest—slams into Ohio State; powerful Michigan tackles tricky Illinois, and ambitious Iowa engages Indiana. Three Big Six games match Kansas-Nebraska, Missouri-Iowa State, and Oklahoma-

Maryland's President Byrd Maybe Is Grid Coach Again

By the Associated Press

Football-conscious University of Maryland alumni saw more than a homecoming day game at College Park Saturday.

At least—they think they did.

They saw Virginia beat Maryland, 19 to 6, but things weren't nearly so bad as they'd feared. And, for many, what happened on the sidelines, behind the Maryland players, was more significant than the ball game.

Two members of Maryland's new coaching "board"—Jack Faber and Al Woods—were on the player's bench. The third, Al Heagy, was absent, presumably on a scouting trip. But Dr. H. C. Byrd, University president—who coached the Terps more than two decades—more than filled the vacancy.

Dr. Byrd was seated in a folding chair, alongside Gov. O'Conor's box.

Time after time as the game wore on, fans saw Byrd call Woods over from the bench. There would be a whispered conversation, Woods would return, and a substitute would shortly be tearing out on the field with instructions.

At no time did the university president go to the bench. To a casual observer, he was just another fan.

But, football-conscious alliumni think they saw something—the perfect picture of a university president coaching his football team from the sidelines.

During his long tenure at Maryland, Byrd turned out the best grid teams in Maryland's history, retiring from active coaching, when he assumed the presidency.

Loyola Prexy Calls Football Unnecessary

Increased Attendance Since Game Was Abandoned Proves Sport Is Futile, Father Roy Believes

By the Associated Press

New Orleans, Oct. 14.—The president of Loyola University of the South said today that increased enrollment since the school abandoned intercollegiate football last winter had proved the sport was "not a necessary complement to the educational system."

The Rev. P. A. Roy, S. J., Loyola head and former president of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, said many other university executives "would like to make the same step if they dared to." He scored "professional football" conducted by universities "under the guise of lily-white amateurism."

Asked Questions

"At our educational association meetings last winter," Father Roy said, "other university executives bombarded me with questions. 'How will the students take it?' and 'How will it affect enrollment?' they asked." Many, he said, told him they would like to make the same move if they dared.

Father Roy reported a record class of 226 freshmen, an 18 per cent increase over last year. Total registration is 1,946, a 7 per cent gain. He said the gains were noted despite the fact a number of football players did not return, including 30 of last year's freshmen. In 18 years of football competition, Loyola won 88, lost 70 and tied 11.

Statistics Prove

"The question of whether or not American higher education can attract students without football teams is at least partially answered by these statistics," he continued. "Although football on an amateur basis is a fine thing for universities, these figures prove that it is not a necessary complement to the educational system."

Citing engagement of professional speakers and artists to entertain students, the Loyola president said, "Even professional football, if conducted by universities on an openly professional basis for the entertainment of students and alumni, may be of benefit, particularly of financial benefit."

"But I cannot approve professional or semiprofessional football," he added, "conducted by universities under the guise of lily-white amateurism."

Irish Take Day Off, See Movies Of '39 Tech Victory

By the Associated Press

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 14.—Rain kept Notre Dame's football players off the practice field today so they went to the movies—to see pictures taken of last year's 7-to-6 triumph over Carnegie Tech, the Irish opponent here Saturday. Tomorrow the Irish will see the movies of last Saturday's 26-to-20 victory over Georgia Tech while Coach Elmer Layden points out mistakes in the play.

Layden expressed himself as well pleased with the Irish offense Saturday but said some improvement is needed in tackling, timing on reverses and blocking.

Kress Faces Big Problem at St. Paul

St. Paul, Oct. 14 (AP).—A possible wholesale shakeup of the St. Paul baseball club of the American Association may be one of the problems confronting Ralph (Red) Kress, Detroit Tiger coach, who is slated as the new manager of the Saints for next season.

Just what is in the cards for the Saints is not definite yet, but grapevine information says that the management is contemplating considerable rebuilding. Some new deals probably will be made at the coming winter baseball meetings, although Lou McKenna, business manager, was noncommital.

McKenna said, however, that he had reached a virtual agreement with Kress after a conference in Chicago Saturday to replace Babe Ganzel, who managed the Saints the past three years.

W.&L. Coaches Claim Score Against G.W.

'Movies Show Justice Scored Touchdown,' Says Coach Tilson

By the Associated Press

Lexington, Va., Oct. 14.—Washington and Lee coaches who viewed motion pictures today of Saturday's game with George Washington asserted after the showing that the pictures proved that the Generals deserved at least a tie score plus an opportunity to win the game with an extra point. The game officially went on the books a 20-14 victory for the visiting Colonials.

A controversy arose over the final play of the game in which Dan Justice hit the George Washington line from the Colonials' 1-yard marker. It was ruled a touchdown by Headlinesman F. G. Heath, but Referee Dutch Eberts, of Washington, ruled that there was no score.

In an official statement, Eberts said that Justice's knee touched the ground before he reached the goal line.

After seeing the pictures, with members of his football squad, Coach Tex Tilson said today:

"I am more disgusted and disappointed than ever now. There is no doubt whatsoever in my mind or in the mind of anyone who views these perfectly clear movies that Dan Justice scored a legal, clear-cut touchdown."

Tilson issued an invitation to any "qualified officials" to see the pictures.

Texas League Season Sliced to 154 Games

Dallas, Oct. 14 (AP).—Shortening of the Texas League season to 154 games instead of 161 was announced today after an executive meeting of club owners.

The 1941 season will open Sunday, April 13, and close Sunday, September 7. League President J. Alvin Gardner pointed out that the Sunday opening is an innovation.

The player limit was reduced from 18 to 17.

Bradley Sees Blinking Owl Win Feature

Filly Romps Home by Two Lengths to Beat Miss Discovery, Day's Favorite, at Laurel

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Laurel, Md., Oct. 14.—Col. E. R. Bradley, of Kentucky Derby fame, made his first appearance of the season in Maryland today and stayed to watch his filly, Blinking Owl turn back five other 2-year-olds of her sex in The Bolivar Purse, located sixth on the program. Installed a second choice to the Milky Way Farm's Miss Discovery, Blinking Owl led the favorite to the imaginary wire by two lengths. Third money in the test of a mile and 70 yards went to J. P. Jones' Flower Parade.

Those in the crowd of 7,000 who recalled that Bradley horses always run good with the boss around, collected a $5.70 mutuel. The winning filly was clocked in 1:44 4-5, fine time over this track. In fact, the surface today, if time is considered, was the best at the meeting.

Jockey F. A. Smith rode Blinking Owl and took the daughter of Pharamond 2d to the front, going to the first turn. She shook off Ambo to open a good lead, turned back a bid of Flower Parade and then held sway in front of Miss Discovery at the end. Blinking Owl had no trouble with Miss Discovery for Apprentice Madden put up a bungling ride on her.

The Cecil Purse, cofeatured with the Blinking Owl race, found the colors of George D. Widener's Rosetown in the winner's circle, much to the delight of her backers, who collected a $20.40 mutuel. Rosetown took command early and withstood a long drive by Jockey E. Mower to win by a length over Moscow 2d. Rough Pass was third in the field of seven operating at a mile and one-sixteenth.

One of the best claims of the Maryland season seems to have been made by the King Farm which plucked Close To from Brooke Johns for $1,400 and sent him out to win two straight against higher-grade company. Today the St. James gelding scored an easy victory over Dr. Bones and Interlace in the seventh race. The members of this field were priced from $2,500 to $3,000. Close To came from last position and paid $14.50.

Horses, the property of William F. Hitt, won both ends of the Daily Double. Last Call won the first race at a $10.40 mutuel and Meadow Dew won the third race at $17. Those who coupled the pair, both out of the mare What'll I Do, collected $107.80 for their $2 double tickets.

Bobby Estalella, Former Nat, Drafted by St. Louis Browns

Cuban Outfielder One of Top Hitters In Assn. Last Season

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Oct. 14.—Roberto Estalella, 27-year-old outfielder who formerly played with the Washington Senators, has been drafted by the Browns from Minneapolis, where he batted .342 and was one of the leading sluggers this past season.

Confirmation of the Browns' drafting of the Cuban player was received late today from Commissioner Landis' office. The choice was made by the Browns October 2, the day after other clubs announced their selections.

Estalella, a right-handed batter, was second in three slugging departments in the American Association—in home runs with 32, in runs batted in with 121, and in total bases with 323.

WASHINGTON, OCT. 15, 1940

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

There isn't much doubt now what makes the Redskins tick. Samuel Adrian Baugh is the mainspring, the works. He makes the Redskins move.

His passes are no less than stabbing thrusts that hurt and demoralize the opposition. This is no claim that the Redskins are a one-man football team; they'd be a pretty good club without Baugh. But with him they're leading the league, they're unbeaten and they're shooting at a new scoring record for a season's play.

POVICH

At the end of the season there may be lads with a better passing record than Baugh. The figures may show that Parker Hall, or Davey O'Brien or Joe Whoozis was a better passer than Baugh this season, but we'd stubbornly maintain they would be lying. Because the No. 1 man on the throwing end of a football is Slingin' Sammy. He's proving that.

There isn't another fellow in cleats who throws a ball like Baugh to start with. None of 'em has his split-second timing or ability to lead a receiver into his pass. That's sixth-sense stuff, anyway. Accuracy when he lets that ball loose doesn't sum up his skill. He's a great forward passer even before he lets fly.

Baugh is the magnificent faker among other things. Three times at Griffith Stadium this season he has thrown touchdown passes because he duped and feinted the opposition out of line. Baugh minimizes the best defense against passing—rushing the passer. He ducks, sidesteps, commits balks and outwits 'em. He threw a touchdown pass to Wayne Millner in the end zone against the Chicago Cardinals last Sunday after he was hit, but it didn't affect his accuracy.

Cliff Battles used to marvel unceasingly at Baugh's passing magic in 1937-38 when Battles was an all-league veteran and Baugh a comparative bushwacker in pro football. Until Baugh came along, Battles used to do much of the Redskins' passing. He willingly quit the role in favor of Baugh.

"That fellow," Battles would say, "is wonderful. I've seen all kinds of passing in this league, but he's showing me something new. He's the only man I ever saw who throws a football like a good infielder throws a baseball. He throws from his shoulder, from his hips, overarm, sidearm and underhand. He's never out of position, you'll notice."

The fact that Baugh is a pretty good sort of passer is, of course, no new discovery. With Battles running and Baugh pitching, they lifted the Redskins to the championship in 1937. That year Sammy set a new record for completed passes. Opposing coaches whose clubs are meeting the Redskins confess that they feel very much like baseball managers who know their teams will be facing Bob Feller. They've got to beat great pitching.

When any other Redskin attempts the passing for the Washington club the letdown in efficiency is terrific, and we cast no reflection on Frank Filchock, one of the better ball players on the Redskin team. When there is no Baugh to throw the Redskins' passes, the Redskins' keen edge is dulled. With Baugh in there, well, it has usually been a case of how many touchdowns do the Redskins need?

He has been that kind of a passer ever since he broke into the pro league in 1937 and frankly confessed, at the outset, that he didn't know how well he'd do. Down at Texas Christian he had been some shucks as a passer, but his college football fame was no guarantee that he'd go well among the pros. Precedents in point were plentiful. But before the Redskins had played three games of their 1937 season, Baugh was already recognized as a power in the league. He'd do.

We like best the story they told about Sammy when he first joined the Redskins and was taken aside by Coach Ray Flaherty for a heart-to-heart discussion of pro football. Flaherty had seen other college football geniuses flop in the pro league. He could be forgiven for any doubts he might have had of Baugh's ability to fit into pro football.

There's one thing about the pros, Sammy," said Flaherty, according to the story. "Our pass receivers are not used to going after these wild heaves a passer sometimes throws. They like that ball thrown right at their faces where they can reach up and snag it. Keep it up around the receiver's eye."

Baugh nodded in understanding. Then he asked, calmly: "Which eye, coach?"

As a highly touted graduate of collegiate ranks, Baugh takes his place among the top four who have made good among the pros in great emphasis in contrast to the dozens who have flopped. Red Grange was never the star in pro ranks that he was in college. Among the pros he lost his luster. Bronko Nagurski didn't. Nor did Whizzer White and Davey O'Brien. When he finally hangs up his cleats, Baugh may have eclipsed them all.

This is not a bad year for Baugh to be hitting his peak as a passer. This is the year when his latest holdover contract with the Redskins expires. And when contract-signing time rolls around next spring, Samuel Adrian will have himself some potent talking points.

Cornell, Clemson Top College Grid Elevens

Williamson Rates Big Red First As Result of 45-0 Rout of Army; Scored 'Scoop' With Choice of Northwestern

By Paul B. Williamson.

The Williamson System scored a scoop in picking Northwestern to beat Ohio State. The Wildcats, playing on their home field at Evanston, clawed through to a 6-to-3 victory over the visiting Buckeyes.

Northwestern showed tremendous power the previous week by swamping Syracuse 50 to 0, a team that proved it was no push-over by defeating N. Y. U. last Saturday 47 to 13.

For its victory over Ohio State, Northwestern earned a rating of 96.1 for sixth place in the national ratings.

Outstanding among the Williamson picks for last week were: Stanford over Santa Clara, 7 to 6; Nebraska over Indiana, 13 to 7; Columbia over Dartmouth, 20 to 6; Ole Miss over Georgia, 28 to 14; Iowa over Wisconsin, 30 to 12; Fordham over Tulane, 20 to 7, and Texas Tech over Montana, 32 to 19.

Stanford's victory was the first Pacific Coast defeat of Santa Clara in three years, and was the first time in five years that Stanford had beaten the Bronchos. Stanford remains the only undefeated and untied major team on the West Coast. Cornell's Big Reds remain as the No. 1 team of the Nation, with their same rating of 99.9, by their 45 to 0 rout of Army.

Clemson rates second place with 98.2 for its 39 to 0 swamping of the strong Wake Forest team.

Tennessee Third

Tennessee remains in the first ten at third place with a rating of 97.3 for its top-heavy 53 to 0 shut-out of Chattanooga. Texas Aggies blanked U. C. L. a 7 to 0 for a rating of 97.2 and fourth place, but the Aggies will have to do better than that if they hope to fulfill their Southwestern and national aspirations.

The Quakers from Pennsylvania gave Yale its worst skunking, 50 to 7, and moved into fifth place with a rating of 96.9. Which causes us to wonder if the Quakers can keep up their pace and stop Cornell.

Some more picks by the System included: Michigan 26, Harvard 0; Washington 10, Oregon 0; Syracuse over N. Y. U.; Pennsylvania over Yale; Texas Aggies over U. C. L. A.; Boston College, 33; Temple, 20.

Other picks we're proud of were: Manhattan 20, Boston U. 6; Tempe 13, N. Mex. 6; Cedar Falls 13, North Dakota State 7; San Jose 10, San

5,433,791 Fans Set American League Attendance Mark

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Oct. 14.—The American League's season attendance record was broken this year, when 5,433,791 paid spectators passed through the turnstiles, President William Harridge announced today.

This figure, Harridge pointed out, surpassed the 1939 aggregate by 1,163,189 and was 1,078,352 better than the record set in 1924. Every club showed a gain in attendance.

Night games attracted 634,228, an average of 18,121 per contest. The Chicago White Sox proved to be the best night ball town, drawing an average of 30,680 to seven games, Cleveland was close behind with a 30,159 average.

Detroit alone drew more than a million, its total being 1,112,693. Total figures of the other seven clubs follow: New York, 988,975; Cleveland, 902,576; Boston, 716,234; Chicago, 660,336; Philadelphia, 432,145; Washington, 381,241; St. Louis, 239,591.

Del Baker Signs For One More Year

Detroit, Oct. 14 (AP).—Del Baker, manager of the Detroit Tigers, today signed a contract to pilot the American League champions in 1941.

Salary terms were not disclosed, but Baker, it was announced, received a "substantial raise." The quiet-spoken manager and Owner Walter O. Briggs had come to terms during the World Series.

Baker, who also was given an automobile by Briggs, said he would leave soon on a business trip to the West Coast.

Injuries May Stand in Way of 'Skins Setting 3 New Records

Wilkin, Moore Out; Edwards Hurt Again

Shvinski May Be Ready Sunday; Locals Pace Passing And Scoring Depts.

By Al Hailey

Don't hold your breath until it happens, but the Washington Redskins are well on the way to smashing at least three all-time offensive records in the National Football League—if the present injury epidemic abates in time.

In their harrowing escape from defeat at the hands of the rampaging Chicago Cardinals Sunday, the Skins suffered a severe blow to their line strength, and Wilbur Moore, a key man in the second period backfield, may not see action next Sunday against the Philadelphia Eagles.

Capt. Turk Edwards in his brief appearance in the game against the Cardinals so aggravated his leg injury that he will be unable to play for two weeks, while Willie Wilkin, Turk's understudy, received a bad charleyhorse that may bench him for a week.

May Face Eagles

Moore received a painfully sprained knee and will be forced to take it easy this week but may play against the Eagles in Philadelphia.

Ed Justice, veteran wingback recovering from a separated clavicle, will be unable to play until late October, while the status of Steve Slivinski, first-string guard whose play was also sorely missed in the Cardinal game, is still doubtful. Bandages were removed yesterday from Slivinski's eye, which was discovered to have a piece of metal lodged in it just last Saturday night, and physicians said he may be able to play next Sunday.

A cheering piece of news was received yesterday at Redskin offices. Andy Farkas, the leading league scorer last year, notified Skin bosses he expects to arrive in Washington the middle of this week and that he hopes to be able to play October 27 in Detroit, Andy's home town, when the Skins go there to play the Lions.

Set Ten Weeks

Physicians who performed an operation on the powerful little fullback's knee in September said that it should be at least ten weeks before Farkas could play again. Despite Farkas' keen desire to play in his home town, Flaherty is inclined to hold Andy back until mid-November. Should Farkas return to form earlier than expected, the Redskins would be a virtual odds-on choice to break the National League records they are so well up on at present.

Team statistics for the fifth week of play in the league show that the Redskins are two completions a game superior, 1 per cent more efficient in forward passing and one point a game better in scoring than all-time records in these departments showed at a comparable stage in the schedule.

In winning four straight games, the Redskins have scored 113 points and completed 53 passes in 89 attempts for an efficiency of 59 per cent. Against the Cardinal aerial defense, touted as the best in the league, the almost mechanical perfection of Slingin' Sammy Baugh and Frank Filchock had a 62 per cent completion.

Get Idle Period

The Redskins enjoyed a rest yesterday but will return today at 10 a. m. in Griffith Stadium with Coach Ray Flaherty hammering home on the defensive department in which they looked so bad Sunday.

Flaherty, fearing another attack of overconfidence by the Redskins this week, tonight will conduct a lengthy discourse on the Redskin play with motion pictures of the Cardinal game as his subject.

In the Philadelphia Eagles, the Redskins will be facing a team which has yet to win a game after five attempts. Flaherty fears the Eagles are ripe, and he's taking no chances on another lapse. From now on, every team in the league will be pointing for the Redskins, so there'll be no rest for the weary, Flaherty reasons.

Cavaliers Play V. M. I.

15,000 Expected to See Charlottesville Game

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 14.—Finished with three week-ends of successful campaigning against out-of-State opponents, Virginia's football forces turn their attention to neighboring rivals, beginning with V. M. I. here Saturday.

And this week's round of play, which has taken rank as the classic in State collegiate circles for this stage of the season, is what the Cavaliers and Cadets have been waiting for since they parted after their memorable clash of last year.

Victory in the 1939 game, played before a full house at Lexington, rests with V. M. I. by the slender margin of 16 to 13, and was something of a repetition of the 12-to-12 hair-raiser of 1938 for 12,000 spectators here in Scott Stadium. Prospects call for the same kind of action Saturday, but with crowd estimates already ranging upward of 15,000. It's Virginia's homecoming day.

Nearly all of the stars of last year's thriller will be back, along with several new ones. Virginia has Eddie Bryant, its prize sophomore back, to match strides with V. M. I.'s Bosh Pritchard, and up from the freshman ranks at V. M. I. is Joe Muha, 196 pounds of backfield dynamite, who shifts the balance of power to the Cadets.

Bill Dudley, who played one of the greatest games of his young career against the Old Liners, and Bryant, whose defensive work choked several Maryland threats, came through with only the usual run of bruises.

Take It From Us, Folks, Those Redskins Are In

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Oct. 14.—We print the following letters because they are from gents who are better versed in their topics than most sportswriters could hope to be.

CONSIDINE

"In a recent article you stated that the nickel-nursing ball player was conspicuous by his absence at the World Series," writes Fresco Thompson, the former big leaguer, and adds, "Why is it that you never miss an opportunity to mention the name of the penurious professional ball player?

"I feel certain that if you had played a full season's schedule, with its attendant strain, disappointments and headaches, that you would not be anxious to look a horsehide in the face for several months. Do you suppose that a player who underwent the disastrous seasons that befell Crosetti, Ruffing, Hubbell, Hamlin and others slept the sleep of innocent babes? They probably heaved a sigh like Benchley's snore when the curtain dropped on the season of 1940. I do not believe that these men avoided the series because of the expense.

"I know that there have been players who were a bit on the stingy side. But who is to decide where thrift ends and miserliness begins? I have seen players sit in a dining room waiting for the waiter to go into the kitchen so they could leave the dining room without tipping. I have seen them walk through two or three cars to avoid the porter when leaving the train. I have had roomies that would call for ice water and then lock themselves in the bathroom until the bellboy left the room.

"Conversely, I have seen players who were sailors with their money, and they were always in the majority. They were grabbing the checks from the sportswriters, which, of course, is no Herculean feat. They tipped lavishly and never questioned a price. They always traveled first class.

"You must remember that there are more $6,000 players in the majors than there are $15,000 stars. What is $6,000 a year for the best ten years of a man's life? And the average is well under ten years. The player never knows when a slide, a bad hop or a wild fast ball will write finis to his career and send him back to the plow. He realizes that the cheers of the mob die out with each succeeding day, so if he is wise enough to be frugal why censure him? You and I know many stars of yesterday who are now living from hand to mouth. Mentioning their names would serve no purpose but to justify the actions of the thrifty player of today."

Lieut. Col. Harvey L. Miller, who at 52 is dropping his jobs with the N. B. A., the D. C. Boxing Commission, the United States Coast Guard Magazine and the University of Maryland in order to take active command of the Fifth Battalion, Marine Corps Reserve, writes:

"Zivic qualified for the welterweight shot against Armstrong by winning a close ten-round nod over Sammy Angott, N. B. A. lightweight champion. Zivic's victory should stop a lot of criticism of the N. B. A. for pushing Angott's lightweight claims. Angott went the distance with Zivic, while Jenkins was flattened by Armstrong, who lost to Zivic. Angott also defeated Lello, who stopped Jenkins.

"Angott has agreed to box Jenkins on a 50-50 basis, waiving all claim to the titleholder's end. Similarly, Pete Scalzo, N. B. A. feather champ, is willing to go 50-50 with Harry Jeffra, recognized in New York as champion. These two matches, plus Tony Zale, N. B. A. middleweight champ, versus Ken Overlin, New York champ, are the three most desirable bouts before the public today. All three would clean up the conflicting title claims."

Anent the late-lamented Baer-Comiskey fight, Jersey Jones, astute manager of the young heavyweight, Charley Ketchuck, writes:

"I've long contended that the only way a fighter can be developed properly is through competition. Comiskey was built up via a string of easy conquests—one and two-round kayos over soft opposition. In this hard-bitten fight racket a guy's got to learn to taks as well as give. And Comiskey, who had never before had to take, was completely lost in the shuffle when the going became a bit tough.

"I don't say Comiskey is through. Many of the ring's great survived tough early going. But they learned and profited from the experience. Benny Leonard, Jack Britton, Harry Greb, Jack Dempsey, Pete Herman, Jack Delaney, Paul Berlenbach, Tiger Flowers and that bunch all knew what it was to be knocked out. But they came on to become world's champions because their setbacks didn't get them down. I don't know what is in Comiskey's mind today. Some good fighters have been ruined in one fight. Ruby Goldstein, for instance. Ruby never recovered from his experience with Ace Hudkins. Al Singer was wrecked by the kayo Jimmy McLarnin scored. Knute Hansen, a brilliant heavyweight prospect, fell apart after K. O. Christner knocked him out.

"Anyway, I'm bringing Ketchuck along the right way. The kid hasn't been fed any soft touches. He's learning to take it, as well as dish it out. When I'm ready to step out with this kid and go after the so-called 'names' he'll be thoroughly grounded in the fundamentals of boxing."

Jannazzo Wins Decision Over Cocoa Kid

Gains Maryland's Recognition as Champ In Baltimore Victory

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Oct. 14.—Izzy Jannazzo, of New York, won a close 15-round decision over Louis (Kid) Cocoa, of Puerto Rico and New Haven, Conn., tonight and gained recognition in Maryland as the welterweight boxing champion. Each fighter weighed 147 pounds.

Close Fight

It was a close fight all the way. They started slowly, feeling each other out with lefts and were still swapping lefts at the bell. The decesion was 2 to 1 for Jannazzo.

The winner hardly used his right at all, but Cocoa was constantly trying to get over a right-hand smash to his opponent. The Puerto Rican managed to land his wicked right several times but on each occasion Jannazzo was able to recover by pumping his left into Cocoa's face.

Dempsey Refereed

Toward the end of the fight Cocoa was definitely stalking Jannazzo. In the thirteenth round and again in the fourteenth, Cocoa went after Jannazzo with stinging lefts and rights to the head and body, but each time Jannazzo, as he had done throughout, managed to save himself with his good left hand.

Through his victory Jannazzo was recognized by the Maryland Boxing Commission as welterweight champion. The commission, before the Henry Armstrong-Fritzie Zivic fight in New York, had declared Armstrong's title vacant and announced that it would stage a championship fight of its own between Jannazzo and Cocoa.

There was a crowd of about 3,500 and the decision was greeted with mixed cheers and boos. Jack Dempsey refereed.

Eagles Work On Hopkins Grid Plays

A. U. Plays in Baltimore Saturday; Stages Three-Hour Scrimmage

American University's eleven, preparing to return to the football wars Saturday against John Hopkins at Baltimore after a week layoff, worked yesterday against Hopkins plays in a three-hour scrimmage.

Head Coach Staff Cassell and Assistant Coach George Menke scouted Johns Hopkins Saturday as it lost, 20-0, to Washington College. The Eagles coaches were impressed with a tricky shift with which Hopkins befoozled Washington and warned their charges to be on the lookout for it.

Outstanding in the scrimmage in which the first team was placed on defense with the seconds using Johns Hopkins plays were Potter, end, and Bob Lanzilloti, guard, both freshmen. Potter may have earned himself a starting position. Lanzilotti, former Central All-high player, is showing improvement commensurate with his rounding into condition. Reporting for practice just three days before A. U.'s opener with Susquehanna, the stocky youngster nevertheless played nearly three-fourths of the game and acquitted himself creditably.

Meantime, it was feared the Eagles might lose the services of Halfback Archie Norford for the Hopkins game. Norford has a sprained shoulder. Coach Menke, incidentally is celebrating the birth, Saturday, of an 8-pound baby boy, the family's second male heir.

Two Birmingham Sandlot Nines Bring Home Titles

By the Associated Press

Birmingham, Ala., Oct. 14.—This city has long claimed it was the sandlot baseball capital of the world and this year two of its 150 teams set out to prove the point.

The Acipco Club, winner of the Birmingham Amateur Baseball Federation races, won the world's series of the National Amateur Baseball Federation in Birmingham with eight consecutive victories after an opening defeat.

Birmingham Paper Co., eliminated by Acipco in sectional play, entered the American Baseball Congress tournament at Battle Creek, Mich., and emerged with the championship without a loss, a record in itself.

These two clubs were members of the same Class A League, one of ten under the sponsorship of the B. A. B. F. Other teams, in Class C and Knothole Leagues, bring the total here to more than 150 and the players' list to something like 2,500.

Triscope Indorsed By D. C. Officials

The invention of a former George Washington football player, designed to aid football officials in making more accurate yardage determinations received the indorsement last night of the District Football Association.

The inventor, Paul Lamar explained his device to members of the association in a meeting last night at the Force School.

Pro Sportswriters' Golf Tourney Goes To Team of Al Houghton-Rod Thomas

Two gray-haired, red-faced, heavy-set golfers who could almost be mistaken for twin brothers, Al Houghton, the Beaver Dam pro, and Rod Thomas, Star sportswriter, won the Pro-Sportswriter tournament yesterday at Kenwood to the cries of "robber, cheat, and Ali Baba."

Thomas, it seems was chairman of the handicap committee and armed himself with 14 luscious strokes, while Houghton shot his usual game, a one-under-par 69 Thomas surprised the entire gathering, and himself, with an 87 and, minus his handicap, the net score was 75, plus Houghton's 69, for a total of 144.

The newshawks, as a whole, shot far under their usual game, Tony Neri's 110 being the highest score. Before the tournament guesses as to the highest total were running around the 150 mark and up.

Berryman Whiffs

Cartoonist Jim Berryman reported the only whiff of the day, missing a chip shot on the seventeenth hole by at least 3 feet in his anxiety to complete a tiresome round. Jim Wild, of the Baltimore Sun, was the only one to match the hole with his score, taking 13 strokes on the thirteenth.

Second place in the tournament went to Mel Shorey, the Indian Spring pro, and Maury Fitzgerald, of the Times-Herald, who was the red-hot favorite over his home course but disappointed with an 80. Shorey's 72 and Fitzgerald's 80, with no handicap, totaled 152.

The generous prize list included two other teams, Tommy Doerer, jr., the Rock Creek manager, and Merrell Whittlesey, of The Post, who staggered around in 77 and 84 strokes, respectively, with the latter deducting three handicap strokes. Fourth was Wiffy Cox, 72, and Francis Stan, of the Star, 106-12, 88, for 160. Cox did a horrible job of throwing Stan down, his 72 being 20 strokes over the 52 Stan expected him to shoot.

Several of the boys were well off their game, including Shirley Povich, who was in trouble on 18 of the 18 holes and finished with a cool 102. Frank "Buck" O'Neill and Bill Burnett, who have been taking lessons of late, left their practice tee form at home and finished with 97 and 101, respectively, while Walter R. McCalium, on whose game the handicaps were based, said "That was the worst round of my career" as he turned in an 84.

Houghton, Cox and Shorey reported the best rounds among the pros and split the pro sweepstakes money with Lew Worsham one stroke too many and Levi Yoder two shots out of the cash list.

Cornell Player Numbers Aid In Deception

Size and Similarity Fool Foes; Balanced Power Is Big Factor

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 14.—Coach Carl Snavely has given his Cornell football team a smoothly balanced offense that combines deception with power and fine passing and which, against Army at least, appeared virtually irresistible.

The Big Red's numbering system does nothing to dispel the deception, either.

For one thing the numbers on the front of the players' jerseys are very small. In addition, in the No. 1 backfield the ball is handled chiefly by Hal McCullough, a triple-threat; Mort Landsberg, a spinning, driving fullback despite his 175 pounds, and Bill Murphy, who can pass and run. McCullough is No. 63; Landsberg, No. 53; Murphy, No. 36.

In the next backfield the chief attacking operatives are Walt Scholl and Lou Bufalino. School is No. 56, Bufalino No. 66. Walt Matuszczak, the No. 1 blocking back, is No. 88. The lad who takes his place is No. 33. Syracuse, Ohio State and Pennsylvania—welcome to the circle of confusion.

Larsen Hopeful

Maj. Emery (Swede) Larsen, the genial marine, who coaches Navy, forecast good times to come for the Middies at today's Football Writers' luncheon. The international situation has brought a great increase in enrollment at Annapolis, and Larsen is confident this will mean a proportionate increase in good gridiron material.

Navy operated handsomely against Princeton, and hopes to do even better when "Youngster" (Sophomore) Jack Harrell returns to the No. 2 back slot. Harrell, a 208-pounder, won the heavyweight wrestling title while at Oklahoma A. and M.—"where fortunately for us he did not play football," said Larsen—but needs no mat to toss the opposition around.

Other youngsters whose names Larsen recommended be kept in mind are Alan Cameron, a fullback; Bill Busik, rated a potential second Buzz Borries, and Howie Clark, a 145-pounder, whose dad, now a lieutenant-commander of submarines, played for Minnesota.

Improved Terps Pointing for First Victory Over Florida

G.W. Worried By Wildcats' Aerial Skill

C. U. Squad Warned Of Miami's Strength; Maryland Bolstered By Surprising Conrad

Having changed their football theme song from "I'll Never Smile Again" to "Happy Days Are Here Again" in the light of the Terps' impressive showing against Virginia, Maryland's coaches actually believe they have a chance to break into the victory column against Florida at Gainesville Saturday.

The improvement in the backfield of Mearle DuVall, the passing, plunging junior halfback, plus the startling play of Luther Conrad at end, a position strange to him before Saturday, are among the biggest reasons for Maryland's expected surge of fortune.

Free of injuries for the first Monday following a week-end football engagement in several years, the Terrapins went through a light drill yesterday and heard some information concerning their next opponent.

Five 'Gators Kept on Bench

Not a bit encouraging to the Maryland squad, however, was news that Florida was without the services of five regulars Friday night, when it was beaten, 28-0, by powerful Villanova. The 'Gators kept the five players on the bench rather than risk having their injuries aggravated. They are Herbie Hutson, quarterback; Charlie Tate and Red Mack, fullbacks; Spike Goodwin, guard, and Frank Smoack, end.

Moreover, despite the four-touchdown margin of Villanova's victory over Florida, the Philadelphia eleven enjoyed only a slight edge in statistics. They had 11 first downs to Florida's nine and gained only 15 more yards by running and passing.

Cards Are Warned

With optimism running high following last week's 6-0 victory St. Anselm, Catholic University's eleven fairly skipped through drills yesterday in preparation for Friday night's game at Miami University.

Coach Dutch Bergman, however, warned his Cardinals not to be feeling too frisky for there is plenty of work yet to be done if they would upset the powerful and undefeated Miami Hurricanes. Miami is unscored on in two starts, having licked Stetson, 19-0, and Tampa University, 27-0.

Of chief concern to Bergman as he moulds a defense to check the high-scoring Hurricanes are a pair of fleet backs, Bill Steiner and Terry Fox, who ran wild against both Stetson and Tampa. Steiner will be no stranger to the Cardinal team, though, for they will remember him from last year when he was a complete nuisance even though C. U. beat Miami.

This will be the fourth meeting between the two schools. Opening relations in 1937, the Cardinals defeated Miami, 20-0, and repeated the victories in 1938 by 7-0 and in 1939 by 14-0.

C. U. sustained three injuries in the St. Anselm game. Julius Buckanavage and Al Norris, both fullbacks, are suffering slight leg ailments and Walter Laukaitis, sophomore guard, has a bad shoulder. He will miss the Miami fray, but the other two casualties are expected to be ready.

G. W. Faces Tough Battle

George Washington, its undefeated record stretched taut but still unbroken after a wild game with Washington and Lee, will work extra hard this week to polish its pass defense before meeting Kentucky's undefeated Wildcats Saturday at Lexington, Ky.

None too strong against aerials in both the Manhattan and W. and L. games, the Colonials must tighten this phase of defense if they expect to have any chance against Kentucky which boasts runaway victories over Baldwin-Wallace, Xavier and W. and L. and a 7-7 tie with Vanderbilt.

For scholarly Ab Kirwan has built considerable of his Kentucky attack around the accurate and strong young arm of Ermal Allen, a pint-sized sophomore who flings the ball with the speed of a bullet.

And even should G. W. be able to check the threat of Kentucky passing it will be confronted with still another formidable task, that of stopping a bevy of hard running Wildcat backs. Charlie Ishmael is a powerful fullback and Davy Zoeller and Noah (Moon) Mullins are especially capable halfbacks. Mullins, in particular, has impressed George Washington scouts.

Standouts of the Kentucky line are Joe Bailey at center, Capt. Jonn Ebner at tackle and Jim Hardin at end. All are well-seasoned campaigners.—JACK MUNHALL.

8 Injuries Mark Florida Squad for TerpHome-Coming

Gainesville, Fla., Oct. 14 (AP).—Eight players, five of them regulars, were on the injured list today as Florida's grid squad began practice for their homecoming tilt with Maryland here Saturday.

As the Gators worked out the kinks from a 2,500-mile trip to Philadelphia and return, Charlie Tate, Hubie Houston and Red Harrison, regular backs; Jack Jones, sophomore reserve back, and Fergie Ferguson, left end, took part only in light uniform. Right End Frank Smoak and Reserve Guard Chubby Ferrigno watched from the sidelines.

Light work was ordered for all but a reserve eleven which Coach Tom Lieb pitted against the freshmen in a short scrimmage.

Bethesdans Win

The Bethesda Chevy Chase Recreation Center eleven defeated Sacred Heart, 13-0, yesterday, with Lowe and Garwood accounting for the touchdowns and Sam Miller adding a field goal.

Georgetown Prep Midgets Beat Landon

Win, 13-7; O'Connor Sets Up Winning Score by Deveraux

Georgetown Prep's midget football team took a 13-to-7 victory over Landon's midgets yesterday, with Walter O'Connor pacing the attack. O'Connor failed to score a point, but his dashes through the line helped to set up the winning touchdown.

Jimmy Guyer accounted for the first prep score in the first period, tearing over the goal from the 20-yard stripe. Kemp Devereux added the extra point on a rush through the center of the line.

After Landon's Sanderson to Sager pass combination had tied the count in the third period from the 60-yard line and the same duo had clicked for the extra point, Devereux scored the winning goal in the last period with a 3-yard line plunge. An O'Connor drive of 15 yards, however, had advanced the ball into scoring territoy.

3 Former Mat Champions toSwap Groans Thursday

Three groan artists who at one time or another claimed the world's wrestling championship will appear on Thursday night's card at Turner's arena—all of which goes to set some sort of a record for ex-champions, Promoter Joe Turner claims.

Danno O'Mahoney, title-holder in 1934, will swap yawns with Babe Zaharias in a 30-minute specialty, Louis Thesz, last season acclaimed by the National Wrestling Association as the "real champion," meets Lou Plummer in the feature, and Yvon Robert already is booked for a preliminary.

Ackerman On Fishing

ACKERMAN

Noted several weeks back the fact that several fishing editors were having considerable of a problem in awarding the fine Tycoon rod for Frank O'Brien, the Miami rod manufacturer, to the sportswoman tagging and releasing the greatest number of white marlin at Ocean City, Md., this season.

The rod for the men was a simple proposition, Paul Townsend taking it with two more fish than had the second-place angler, Paul Blundon, a West Virginian. In the case of the ladies, Mrs. Lee Fisher, of Baltimore, was tied with Mrs. C. L. Parker, of Washington, and a toss was about the only equitable way out of it.

At the meeting of the Game and Fish Protective Association last week, Hammond Brown had Lee Fisher make the toss while he called the "heads" selected by Mrs. Parker several weeks ago. And heads it was.

With all due regard to Mrs. Fisher, who is a grand sportswoman, were were particularly gratified, for we have the idea this rod is due to change the long run of tough luck experienced by Mrs. Parker this season. From June 15 to September 15 she was offshore on an average of four days out of ten, and didn't take her first fish until September 4. Almost as much as any charter-boatman was out.

Many calls have come in regarding the showing of Kip Farrington's moving pictures of marlin and broadbill fishing on the Pacific Coast and Bimini in the Bahamas. Don't call, write to this column, and tickets, as long as they last will be mailed without charge.

Assistant Director Charles E. Jackson, U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service, obtained the new Department of Interior auditorium for the showing, and will introduce Kip. He promises real celerity on his part, so the program will be fast, but packed jam-full of piscatorial thrills, one after the other.

The date is October 30, but it is hardly likely the tickets will be available after the 20th, so get busy now.

The latest report from Southport, N. C., notes the run of bluefish, the first in any area north of Hatteras since the catches there last May.

Where did they come from?

One guess is as good as another—most certainly we don't know. We do believe, however, that this fishing will not last long, for the vanguard of the schools have been along the southern Florida coast for the past three weeks.

Bill Briggs, one of Washington's most consistent anglers, is recuperating in Miami from a recent illness by daily trolling the blue waters of the Gulf Stream, and from all reports giving the sailfish whatfor.

He goes to New York next week to head the department of special activities for Eastern Air Lines, of which the Flying Fisherman Club might be said to head the list.

Kansas State Hopeful for Sooner Game

By the Associated Press

Manhattan, Kans., Oct. 14.—Blue tinges of Monday weren't so bad around Manhattan as Hobbs Adams, admittedly pleased with continued improvement that his team showed in absorbing the Missouri loss, hurride his players through a short workout.

The injury jinx failed to nail a single Kansas State player in Saturday's game, and if all goes well, the team will be in top shape for the encounter with Oklahoma.

Friedrichs Rejoins Sooners

Norman, Okla., Oct. 14 (AP).—The offensive and defensive power of the University of Oklahoma Sooners was bolstered today as Halfback L. G. Frederichs rejoined the squad.

Friedrichs, a junior from New Orleans, has been pronounced fully recovered from a knee injury suffered in the Oklahoma Aggie game a year ago.

Missouri Eyes State

Columbia, Mo., Oct. 14 (AP).—Missouri started work today for Saturday's game with the last team to beat the Tigers here—Iowa State's Cyclones of 1938.

Coach Don Faurot ignored the customary Monday morning limbering up drill for the regulars and instead sent them through mock scrimmage against freshmen employing Iowa State plays. Capt. Jack Crocker, guard, played defensive right end; Right End Bud Wallach moved to right tackle, and Reserve End Bob Brenton also moved to tackle.

Faurot said Fullback Myron Counsell, who injured his knee severely against Kansas State, would miss the Iowa State game.

Kansas Frosh Shine

Lawrence, Kans., Oct. 14 (AP).—Kansas freshmen using Nebraska plays got the best of a scrimmage game with the varsity and reserves today, scoring four touchdowns to the regulars' three.

Working to build up end reserves, Coach Gwinn Henry used Wallace Hinshaw, Paul Hardman and Grant Hunter considerably and transferred Al Zernickow from center to end.

Tarheels Surprised

The Williamson System got jarred on some big upsets. Arkansas bumped off Baylor's 13-to-6, vanishing Baylor's hopes for the Southwestern championship by losing to the cellar team of the circuit. Holy Cross upset Carnegie Tech 18-to-0 in a big surprise. Michigan State blackened our "shade" for Purdue by winning 20-to-7, although we had cautioned the State had "a whale of a team."

North Carolina kicked over everybody's dope bucket by defeating big T. C. U. 21-to-14. Navy's 13-to-6 victory over Princeton wasn't according to figures, and Clemson taking Wake Forest was upsetting mainly because of the heavy 39-to-0 score.

The Rice Owls' 23-to-0 triumph over L. S. U. just about convinces this mathematical forecaster that only true prophecy can ever tell about those Southwestern teams. Both those teams were rated close together, and there's no scientific accounting for the wide margin in the score.

Pittsburgh hit the system with an upsetting 7-to-7 tie with favored S. M. U. We figured that Vanderbilt 7, Kentucky 7 would be close although we gave ever so slight a nod to Kentucky.

Missouri Mines blanking the Maryville Teachers 25-to-0 was about the biggest upset in the minor circuits. That was the first game the Teachers lost in two and a half seasons.

A surprising set-back in the minors was strong Louisiana Normal being tied by Louisiana College 7-to-7, although Normal has been mopping up this year and College was tied 0-to-0 the previous week by the relatively weak Delta Teachers of Mississippi.

In the same class was Sam Houston's 19-to-14 triumph over Texas A. and I. Sam Houston, it turns out, has the same team that beat big Rice last year, which accounts for the toppling of stronger teams in their class this year like Mississippi Southern and the Texas A. and I. outfit.

Eagle Back Cluttered Up With Giants

Cadets Start Drills for Virginia

By the Associated Press

Lexington, Va., Oct. 14.—V. M. I.'s cadet squad turned out in full force today for their first practice session in preparation for the "Big Six" set-to with Virginia Saturday.

The Davidson game, coupled with a long bus ride, caused some stiffness and sore muscles, but Clyde Ellington, sophomore tackle injured in the Newberry game, was the only player who could not take full workout.

Prep for Spiders

Lexington, Va., Oct. 14 (AP).—Washington and Lee's football squad settled down this afternoon and tried to forget Saturday's controversial contest with George Washington in anticipation of the Generals' first conference and a Big Six tilt Saturday with Richmond.

The squad worked without pads and prepared a special defense designed to stop Arthur Jones, Richmond's triple-threat backfield star.

Richmond Works

Richmond, Va., Oct. 14 (AP).—Little Walter "Sonny" Wholey ran like a scared rabbit today as the University of Richmond Spiders went to work in preparation for Saturday's homecoming encounter with Washington and Lee.

Wholey scatted for three touchdowns in the scrimmage with the freshmen and shared starring honors with big Cozey Bowen, who repeatedly tore off sizable chunks of yardage through the yearling line.

Va. Stresses Passes

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 14 (AP).—The University of Virginia wasted no time today in starting preparations for the early season feature engagement with V. M. I. here Saturday.

The Cavalier passers, who completed exactly half of 64 throws against Lehigh, Yale and Maryland, were especially busy. Mosby Cardozo, who was withheld from the Maryland game to effect a full recovery from an injury, joined Bill Dudley in exercising receivers.

William-Mary In Action

Williamsburg, Va., Oct. 14 (AP).—William and Mary's regulars worked off to themselves today while Varsity Reserves played a regulation practice game against the Freshmen.

The Indians came out of the Virginia Tech game with no serious injuries reported and will be at full strength for the game here Saturday with Hampden-Sydney's surprising Tigers.

2 Gobblers Ready

Blacksburg, Va., Oct. 14 (AP).—Henry Morehead, sophomore wingback, and Co-Capt. Jim Coleman, left tackle, who did not play against William and Mary last week because of injuries, returned to the Virginia Tech squad today and took light workouts as the Gobblers began preparations for the clash with Georgetown at Washington Friday.

Dissatisfied with the performance of several of his starting gridmen in the 20-13 loss to the Indians, the Tech head coach, Henry Redd, predicted several changes in the lineup this week.

Charles Town Sets 18-Day Race Meet

Charles Town, W. Va., Oct. 14 (AP).—Al J. Boyle, general manager of the Charles Town Jockey Club announced today the West Virginia Racing Commission has approved an 18-day fall racing meet for the local course.

The meet will open Monday, December 2 and run to Saturday, December 21. Extensive improvements are being made at the track.

Blue Devils Practice Againts Colgate Plays

Durham, N. C., Oct. 14 (AP).—Duke's Blue Devil's drilled on both offense and defense today. The defense was against Colgate plays and there was an offensive scrimmage against the reserves and frosh.

Frank Killian, halfback, and John Nania, tackle, were unable to take part. Killian should be able to play Saturday, but Nania will probably be out of the lineup. Killian has a knee sprain, Nania a bad ankle.

Newsom Given Hero's Welcome By Hartsville

Hartsville, S. C., Oct. 14 (AP).—Louis Norman (Buck) Newsom got a hero's welcome in his home town today, Hartsville, a town of under 6,000 population, did itself really proud, and an estimated 5,000 natives and visitors lined the streets to welcome the big Detroit pitcher.

Down the streets bedecked with "Welcome Home, Buck" banners, high school bands, Boy Scouts, the high school baseball team attired in Detroit Tiger uniforms, made up the procession. A car occupied by Newsom and Mayor L. H. Stokes headed a long string of automobiles bearing public officials and civic leaders.

At the town square there was a brief ceremony. Rotarian Leon C. Pennington, a schoolmate, paid tribute to Newsom and presented Mayor Stokes, who welcomed the World Series pitcher home and referred to him as Hartsville's No. 1 celebrity.

Commented Buck:

Injured Illinois Tackle Returns

Champaign, Ill., Oct. 14 (AP).—George Bernhardt, who suffered a broken hand in the Illinois opener two weeks ago, returned to practice today, running at right tackle on the second team.

Coach Bob Zuppke, although well pleased with the team's showing against Southern California Saturday, switched Lavere Astroth, junior quarterback, to right halfback and advanced Harry Siebold, senior guard, to the first team, replacing Landis Hurley.

Washingtonians Fight Off Presidents' Second-Half Drive

Special Dispatch to The Post

Alexandria, Va., Oct. 14.—Scoring all its points in the second quarter, Central High School's junior varsity eleven defeated the George Washington High School Jayvees, 12-6, in a hard-fought contest here this afternoon. The defeat was the Presidents' first in three starts.

Central tallied early in the second period when Mess plunged over from the 7-yard line, to climax a sustained drive from midfield, while a few moments later Denikos brought the victors their second score on a 27-yard touchdown jaunt.

George Washington came back strong in the second half and threatened constantly, finally hitting pay dirt when Wood took a 12-yard pass from Feagans and scampered 28 yards to score early in the fourth quarter. Central was called on to repel two other threats deep in the Vikings' territory before the final whistle sounded, but its line rose to the occasion and held for downs.

Chicago Bears Lose Bob Swisher For Dodger Game

Chicago, Oct. 14 (AP).—Bob Swisher, nimble halfback, will be unable to play Sunday, when his teammates, the Chicago Bears, engage the Brooklyn Dodgers, because of injuries suffered in yesterday's game with Detroit.

An examination at Illinois Masonic Hospital revealed Swisher had three cracked ribs, which may keep him idle for a month. Bill Osmanski, fullback, who suffered a slight head concussion, was reported in good condition today. He is expected to be ready for the Brooklyn game.

Unbeaten Iowa Prep for Indiana

Iowa City, Iowa, Oct. 14 (AP).—The unbeaten Iowa Hawkeyes gave little thought to rest today as they started preparations for Saturday's Big Ten engagement with Indiana's twice-beaten Hoosiers at Bloomington.

Coach Eddie Anderson bemoaned the fact that the Iowa pass defense needed overhauling and said it would have to improve a good deal in order to stop accurate tosses of hurling Hal Hursh, the Indiana passing ace.

The entire squad, without exception, reported for practice, showing no ill effects of the Wisconsin battle save a few sore muscles here and there.

Navy Eleven Is Improved by War

Good Team Held Vital To Training

Defeatist Complex Must Be Replaced By Winning Morale, Says Coach Larsen

By Jack Guenther
United Press Staff Correspondent.

New York, Oct. 14.—"Wanted—football players with prep school or college experience. Must be under 21 years of age, intelligent and mathematically inclined. Board, room, tuition, $720 a year guaranteed. Permanent job upon graduation. Apply United State Naval Academy, Annapolis, Md."

Obviously the advertisement won't ever appear, but it may well be regarded as a distinct sign of the times. For the Navy has had its share of character building on the gridiron and from now on the middies are out to win. You can thank or blame the European war.

Swede Larsen, the tall and angular major of marines who coaches Navy, said so today himself—and he should know. The reason behind the decision is neither bigger box office receipts nor the quest for a more awesome reputation. Rather the time has come for Navy's future officers to break loose from its defeatist complex and build a winning morale.

Won't Proselyte

"Actually," Larsen explained with a hurried grin, "we have no thought of proselyting. We want football players, but not just for the sake of a winning team. We think the United States is in a critical position in world affairs. Conscription has arrived and a war is possible. Under the circumstances our service leaders should be thoroughly grounded in victory as well as in defeat."

Navy has been building character with defeats for years. That is because the Middies are bound by more restrictions than perhaps any other college team. Until this year they had to be under 20 years of age, they took only a three and a half year course and they could practice no more than eight—count 'em—hours a week. The rest of the time they studied, and hard.

War Changes Situation

The war has changed the situation somewhat. Now the embryo ensigns attend the Academy for four years and may range to 21 years of age. This permits an extra season of prep school or college experience and in many cases three years of Annapolis competition instead of two. Things have picked up already—the team is undefeated this year—and they should keep right on improving.

That is, Larsen explains, because the less severe restrictions will give Navy a larger quota of experienced players. The numerical strength must remain the same because the squad is limited to 88 players in a given year. And the players will obtain no advantages not enjoyed by other students. The only favors they receive are permission to spend eight hours a week in practice instead of drilling, and permission to attend skull practice 25 minutes a night.

Feuds Feature This Week's Football Card

Kansas State. Meanwhile Notre Dame entertains weak Carnegie Tech.

Columbia Plays Georgia

Fordham is the only Eastern leader to receive a stiff test this week. Jim Crowley's Rams tangle with surprisingly strong Pittsburgh, which held Southern Methodist to a 7-7 deadlock. The other three Eastern standouts should have easy going as Cornell meets Syracuse, Boston College entertains Idaho, and Pennsylvania engages floundering Princeton. The Columbia-Georgia and Colgate-Duke clashes top the Eastern intersectional list which includes Navy-Drake, Georgetown-Virginia Tech, Manhattan-Detroit, Temple-Michigan State, and Boston U.-Cincinnati. In addition Yale encounters Dartmouth in a lusterless Ivy classic, New York U. meets Holy Cross, Harvard tries Army, and Brown engages Tufts.

In Dixie, the Southeastern Conference has the Alabama-Tennessee classic and the Georgia Tech-Vanderbilt tilt. Two games also are slated in the Southern Conference: North Carolina State-North Carolina and Richmond-Washington and Lee.

Mississippi gets an intersectional test against Duquesne; likewise Rice of the Southwest, against Tulane. In similar engagements, Kentucky entertains George Washington, and Catholic U. invades Miami. Wake Forest tries a comeback against Marshall, and other tilts match: Louisiana State-Mercer, Florida-Maryland, Mississippi State-Howard, Virginia-Virginia Military, and William and Mary-Hampden Sydney.

While Rice plays outside the Southeast Conference, the two other Southwest contenders get rousing tests. Texas tangles with Arkansas, upset victor over Baylor, and the Texas Aggies engage Texas Christian, which will be trying to bounce back after last week's surprising defeat by North Carolina. In intersectional contests, Southern Methodist entertains Auburn, Baylor meets strong Villanova Saturday night, and Texas Tech engages Brigham Young.

Three games are slated in the Big Seven: Utah, Colorado, Colorado State and Denver-Wyoming. Also Montana brawls with Montana State.

enough, however, to cause them to respect the potential strength of the Gobblers and put forth new efforts to eliminate any overconfidence in the Georgetown players.

The Gobblers, losing only eight lettermen from last years' team, began the season with high hopes and an unusually large squad of 43 men, of whom 13 were monogram winners and 11 were playing their third season of varsity ball.

Heading the squad are co-Captains John Henderson, end, and James E. (Big Jim) Coleman, both seniors and fine linemen. Ace of the Gobbler backfield is Herb Thomas, an elusive running halfback who made a profound impression on the Georgetown scouts.

Sharing with Thomas most of the ball carrying, kicking and passing are a pair of senior fullbacks, George (Buckeye) Warriner and Rudkin Hudson. Of the two, Warriner is the better thrower and line smasher and Hudson the superior punter.

Another V. P. I. star who will bear close scrutiny by Georgetown is Roger McClure, a fine guard and the squad's best point-after-touchdown kicker. McClure, incidentally, is exceptionally fast, according to Hagerty, and usually beats his ends down the field to cover punts.

Georgetown, it appears, will face V. P. I. with a makeshift line-up possibly minus two outstanding regulars, Fullback Jim Castiglia and Mike Kopcik, both of whom were injured in the Waynesburg game. In the possible absence of Kopcik, the team's best punter, Hagerty this week is grooming Joe Daniels to share the kicking assignment with Reserve Quarterback Lou Falcone.

Sophomore John Barrett, whose plunging and passing was surprisingly good against Waynesburg, will supplant Castiglia at the fullback post. Kopcik's end will be taken by Long Will Wixted, the 6 foot 4 inch senior who finally came into his own in the Waynesburg game, catching several crucial passes and recovering two fumbles, one for a touchdown.

Green Terrors See Grid Movies

Westminster, Md., Oct. 14 (AP).—Western Maryland College's football squad was shown motion pictures of Saturday's victory over Mount St. Mary's today after starting a four-day practice grind for the clash with Bucknell in Baltimore Friday night.

The squad came through the opening game without injuries. Coach Charlie Havens, pleased but not thoroughly satisfied with Saturday's showing, said more work on both offense and defense was needed. Much of this week's practice will be devoted to polishing a pass defense.

Baltimore's club will come to Washington to take on the Riverside club in the Coliseum Sunday night while the Red Mikes travel. Bob Soners, letter center for the Mikes, pushed over two scores for Washington in Baltimore to pace the Mikes' attack.

Middies Rest After Defeat Of Princeton

Special Dispatch to The Post

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 14.—Navy football players had a well-earned respite today in the wake of their smashing triumph over Princeton on Saturday. All men who got into the game were given a complete lay-off from practice, save for a run around the field several times to limber their muscles.

During the earlier part of the afternoon the squad relaxed in a section of the gymnasium and watched a fine series of moving pictures of their tangle with the Tigers, during which Maj. Swede Larson, head coach, and other mentors, pointed out the good points of their play, as well as the errors of omission and commission. These were brought home to the gridders more impressively through the slow movie process.

Though there was no celebration to mark the victory, everyone on the Naval Reservation still is discussing the masterly manner in which the Tars handled the Jungaleers, and erased last year's humiliating defeat, by beating them at their own game—passing. The Middies not only presented an effective defense against the Tiger aerials, but their own overhead game functioned with far greater success than at any time this season. This was one of the most pleasing angles of the contest from the Navy viewpoint.

Ringie, Washington-Owned Horse, Wins Jamaica Feature

Scores Nose Victory, Pays $18.60 Price

Gen'l Manager, Day's Favorite, Is Second In Aga Khan Purse; 10,243 See Races

By the Associated Press

Jamaica Race Track, N. Y., Oct. 14.—Before the largest weekday crowd of the meeting, Gustave Ring's black gelding Ringie, snapping out of an extended losing streak, won the mile and a sixteenth Aga Khan Purse, for 3-year-olds, here today. The $18.60 for $2 shot, with rving Anderson up, clicked by four lengths in 1:45 2-5. Ring is from Washington, D. C.

Harry T. Johnson's Gen' Manager went the way of most public choices here, finishing second by a nose. Samuel Riddle's Big Beauty was an easy third. The event was witnessed by 10,243, who enjoyed another day of sunshine.

Lord Carnarvon's green English colt, Rufigi, making his second appearance here, broke out of his stall while the field was at the post and ran a half mile before being caught and returned to the post. The unruly newcomer then carried Kear of Audley almost to the outside fence when the field raced to the first turn. Neither could become a factor thereafter.

Ringie was quick to get started but Anderson soon decided to wait off the pace as Gen'l Manager and Big Beauty alternated in command. Ringie moved up with the front pair rounding for home and easily pulled into the clear.

Jockey George Seabo reported ill today and cancelled his mounts. Anderson substituted for Seabo on Ringie.

Michigan Studies Harvard Game Films

Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 14 (AP).—Michigan's football team was shown motion pictures today of the 26-to-0 victory over Harvard but uppermost in mind was the homecoming game here Saturday with Illinois.

Ever since the Illini upset them a year ago the Wolverines have been itching to square accounts and Coach H. O. (Fritz) Crisler said he didn't expect any trouble keying the squad for its first conference engagement of the season.

Trainers reported Halfback Norman Call, injured in the opener with the University of California, was back in shape.

Dear Al:

Pimlico has announced an Exterminator Handicap for its coming meeting. I understand that the Maryland Jockey Club hopes to bring Exterminator out of retirement to lead the field to the post that day. If there ever was a people's horse, it was Exterminator. Old Bones was credited with having the mind of a human. It is said that he kept one eye on the starter and was under way at the first sign of the starter pressing the button. I can't go for that but Exterminator was an honest, hard running horse and he deserves the years of leisure that have come his way. If they do bring him to Pimlico, Outrider Happy Gordon may have trouble restraining him when Starter Milton rings the bell. I wonder what Old Exterminator will think of the electric starting gate? He went into retirement before that apparatus was brought around the tracks. J. K. C. writes that it took only a slight knowledge of American history to be a winner at Laurel last Saturday. He brings out that it was Columbus Day and that New World, winner of the Maryland Futurity was a son of Discovery. He also says Columbus was a Roman (or Italian) and that Roman, the horse, thus was a natural winner of the Laurel Mile. But here's the payoff, he maintains that Columbus had three ships and that No. 3 post position won the first four races including the 3 and 3 combination in that big daily double. Too bad he couldn't drag Yom Kippur into it through some angle. I heard somebody piping off again about jockey agents and the way they lead riders astray. That is bunk in my book. If a jockey is crooked he got that way a long time before he met an agent. Nine-tenths of the boys who go wrong got their first six lessons from the trainer or owner. You can't send a young boy out on the track to give a horse a conditioner or an easy race without the youngster getting the idea that he isn't supposed to win every time. Then if his boss tells him to pull one, he begins to feel that he has the right to pull one for himself once in a while. The louder the trainer talks about his horse being "taken" the more he poses as a factor in bettering the game and the more he talks about his love for horses, the more I distrust him. And I might have put in there "The bigger his job." See you on the rail—BILL.

First race—Bryan Station, racing against Paddy Malone and Fettacairn in New York last start, showed good effort to lose by five lengths. In a previous race he was second to Bold Irishman. Fitzedward appears best of the others, on local form. Salpeen might be close at a price.

Second race—Pine Tag has not shown his best form in two starts over the Laurel course. His second to Greenwich Time in New York accords him the edge here. Fatty has beaten the top horse in his last two starts and rates as the chief contender. Judges Bid should go well.

Third race—Dark Mischief displayed a creditable effort in the Richard Johnson but failed to repeat that effort in the mud recently. He evidently needs a fast strip. Martian put up a game effort to score in his last race in good time. He might prove hard to beat. Happy Pilot should go well.

Fourth race—Kings Blue raced well with the best sprinters in the Middle West and late form at Hawthorne indicates he has the ability to take the measure of his competitors today. Abbasside was a surprise winner last start but connections are expecting him to to improve. Aerial Toy to beat the others.

Fifth race—Microphobia was up in the final furlough to beat the speedy Birch Rod by a length last week. He drops seven pounds and meets cheaper competition. Panoramascope was no match for Honey Cloud in his last but should be a sharp contender here. Tony Steel is a possibility.

Sixth race—Roncat was second to Son Altesse in the mud after placing to Miolana at Havre. His record shows no mud form and with prospects of a fast track, he is expected to turn in a good performance. Gold Teddy might stick it out for the place. Iron Shot was fair in New York.

Seventh race—Nilon registered at the expense of Brown Twig in her last race and has shown consistent form in recent trials. Chief contention should come from Better Half despite her poor effort last outing. Stinging beat a fair field of platers last week and should be close.

Eighth race—Clapair and Accidental stand out as the form horses in the nightcap with Clapair holding the edge on the merits of his third behind Dulle and Blacant. Accidental was right behind Warlaine last week and indicates that she is rounding into good form. Goodwine has a chance at a price.

Best bet—Roncat.

Prestige Building Stressed

Vast improvement has been made in selling and servicing life insurance, according to Seneca M. Gamble, of the Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Co., who addressed a luncheon meeting yesterday of the District of Columbia Life Underwriters.

Mr. Gamble, who is advertising manager of the Massachusetts firm, also discussed newspaper advertising as a prestige builder. He pointed out that the Institute of Life Insurance with 90 member companies having $86,000,000,000 of life insurance in force in the United States, is running a weekly column in 250 newspapers with a combined circulation of 20,000,000. Letters received from policyholders and the general public clearly show reader interest in th column which is paid for at regular advertising rates.

"The gospel of life insurance, like the Christian gospel, must be taught or it will not be known," the speaker said. "The $30,000,000,000 that life insurance companies paid to policyholders and beneficiaries in the 1930's did not suddenly spring into being in the hour of financial need. Before the insurance was in force, much selling was done, and advertising played an important part in convincing the buyers of their need for the insurance."

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Oct. 14 (AP).—Wheat prices moved higher today on the strength of scattered buying by speculators coupled with purchases by milling interests.

The advance was around a cent a bushel, although not it resulted in the finish despite some taking of profits. The market was broad and the volume of trading about as usual. The advance carried the December delivery to the highest point since June, after set a new season's high, and July equaled the current high.

Wheat closed near the day's best levels and 1⅛@1¼ above Friday's finish: December, 64¾; May, 61⅞, and corn was 1@1⅛ up: December, 53⅝@53¾; May, 57¼@57⅝; oats, unchanged to ⅛ up, and beans, 2¼@3¼ higher, and lard, 20 cents advanced.

The tremendous amount of wheat sealed by loans has made the spot or cash market master of the situation. With cash wheat selling at a premium over the future delivery, wheat is going to the spot handlers. The trade believes that this situation will result in future prices advancing at least to the level of the cash grain, but most of them say there will be little action either way until after the election.

The Balkan war and the effects of Russia's possible entrance into the war in the Balkans had no appreciable market effect today.

The corn market advanced unevenly, chiefly because of strength in wheat. Corn traders were somewhat cautious because, they said, there were vast quantities of corn not good enough in quality to qualify under the loan program which a sharp price advance might bring on the market.

Oats trade was light. Rye was dull. Soy beans advanced sharply on a fairly active demand, but the cash market was weaker. Provisions with grains and hog market advances.

Refugee Money Reported Shifting To South America

New York, Oct. 14 (AP).—Informed banking sources said today considerable amounts of money had been shifted from the United States to South America lately, mostly to Aregentina, Brazil and Uruguay, supposedly to find a new haven from war in event this country becomes involved in the conflict.

Much of the capital, one bank official said, appeared to be funds which had been shifted to the United States from Central Europe, including accounts of refugees from war zones, and transferred as precaution against additional blocking of foreign assets here.

Banking circles expressed the view the shift was intended to find a refuge for cash rather than investment outlet in South America. Transfers, it was explained, mostly have been in sums ranging to $15,000 and $20,000.

Westinghouse Reports $93,700,000 Backlog

New York, Oct. 14 (AP).—Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. is working on approximately $93,700,000 or orders for national defense materials, George H. Bucher, said today.

Actual delivery of about $9,000,000 in orders will be made before the end of 1940, Bucher added. Some cannot be delivered before 1943 despite accelerated manufacturing efforts. Deliveries will reach a peak of nearly $31,500,000 in 1941-42.

Much of the equipment on order is for other industries which are expanding facilities for their own share of defense work.

B. & O. Handlings Dip

Baltimore, Oct. 14 (AP).—The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad reported today 52,768 freight cars handled during the week ended October 12, compared with 57,908 handled during the corresponding week last year. For the week ended October 5, th total was 56,723.

Cotton Futures

New York, Oct. 14 (AP).—The expanded movement of new crop cotton to market and large sales of spot cotton bore down on prices of futures today. Final quotations were off 2 to 7 points.

Futures have been under pressure since early last week, mostly as a result the hedging which grew out of the increase in marketings of the staple.

The Government report showing September consumption of 636,282 bales, a new high record for the month, was a disappointment to too optimistic observers.

Best support came from spot interests and domestic mill accounts.

Worth street textile traders estimated business in print cloths and related items at 3,000,000 to 4,000,000 yards. Prices were unchanged at the high levels of the current buying move.

Stocks Close Unevenly Lower in Light Deals; Japanese Bonds Rally as Tension Eases

New York, Oct. 14.—Efforts to tack another small-sized rally on the stock market encountered opposition today and early gains running to a point or so were substantially reduced or turned into losses of as much at the close.

Business news remained fairly comforting as traders returned from their lengthy week-end holiday and early light buying of favored issues was attributed mainly to this influence.

At the same time most were not slow in cashing minor profits when the list started up in the first hour. Spotty trends were the rule thereafter.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was off .1 of a point at 43.2. Dealings were negligible throughout and transfer for the five hours amounted to 402,350 shares against 404,250 last Friday. Handicapping sentiment, brokers said, were confusing war developments in the Balkans, persistence of tension over Far Eastern affairs, heavier air bombing on England and the inability of Wall Street to reach definite conclusions regarding domestic political currents.

U. S. Steel, Crucible common and preferred, Youngstown Sheet and Republic managed to emerge with modest improvement, but Bethlehem was a shade under water. The American Iron & Steel Institute estimated this week's mill operations at 94.4 per cent of capacity, up .2 of a point from last week and equaling the peak of November a year ago, which was a top since 1929. Demand for the metal both from governmental and private sources continued high.

Chrysler was off ¼ and General Motors up as much. Sales of new cars were reported broadening and there was talk of automotive production in the final quarter reaching 1,000,000 units.

Shares in arrears included American Telephone, Western Union, Consolidated Electric, duPont, Standard Oil of New Jersey and Southern Pacific.

Modest gains were held by Allied Chemical, Westinghouse, Pathe, Anaconda, Kennecott, Cerro de Pasco, Great Northern, J. I. Case, International Harvester and American Smelting.

The bond market reflected a high degree of selectivity among buyers with bad breaks in some groups offset by equally strong rises in others. The utilities rose to a new 1940 high in the averages.

A moderate demand appeared early in trading for a group of Japanese government and municipal issues, most of which had been under prolonged pressure for a week or more. Easing of tension between the Far Eastern power and the United States was credited in brokerage quarters with creating the demand. Gainers of major fractions to more than a point included Tokyo 5½s, Oriental development 6s, and the government 5½s.

Denmark 6½s cracked 6½ points to 25 and Italian 7s lost another 5 to close at 38¾. Some of the South Americans also backtracked for sizable losses.

Ahead in the domestic list were among others, Alleghany stamped 5s at 47, Columbia Gas & Electric 5s at 105⅛, International Hydro Electric 6s at 55, Western Union 5s at 72¼, Montana Power 3¾s at 104 and New York Central 5s at 64. U. S. Governments ended 7-32ds of a point higher to 4-32ds lower.

The Associated Press average of 10 utility bonds rose .2 of a point to 98.9, a new top for the year. Sales of $4,963,500, par value, compared with $6,235,600 last Friday.

Rubber, hides and wheat outdistanced other major staples in broad improvement in futures markets.

Rubber advanced .16 to .24 of a cent a pound at New York. Against a background of fears Far Eastern shipments might be curtailed and new September crude rubber imports were the highest for any month on record.

Hides jumped .28 to .41 of a cent a pound. Reported Government demand for leather products influenced the rise.

Wheat at Chicago closed ⅛ to ⅞ of a cent a bushel higher. A sharp increase in the amount of wheat under Government loan was a market spur. Corn added ¼ to 1 cent.

Other staples up at New York included silk, cocoa, and cottonseed oil. Wool tops and domestic sugar were mixed.

Cotton moved against the trend with losses of 10 to 35 cents a bale. Although a record for the month the September consumption report was somewhat disappointing to the trade.

The Associated Press weighted index of 35 wholesale spot staples, based on 1926 as 100, advanced to 74.22 from 74.20 Friday.

Buying Power Above 1929.

National income payments in August were up 6 per cent from a year earlier and were only 12 per cent under the all-time high reached in the summer of 1929. Current income, however, will buy even more than in 1929, because living costs are considerably lower. After adjustment for the lower cost of living, it is found that national buying power is the highest on record, exceeding 1929 by about 4 per cent. The fact that industrial production in the fourth quarter of the year will establish a new high causes less concern when it is seen that the volume of output will be accompanied by a high volume of consumer buying power.

October Industrial Production

The Standard Statistics index of industrial production is estimated at 111 for October, off two points from the revised figure for September but .1 points (4.7 per cent) above that for October, 1939. The decline as compared with September is traceable in the main to the abrupt gain in the composite last month, up nearly nine points, in turn the result of the early start and quick attainment of volume production on the new automobile models. The seasonal adjustments for this and most other production indexes are set to compensate for a dull September in the automotive field. If this does not eventuate, the indexes are more or less automatically thrown out of line on the high side.

Retail Sales Ease

The easing in trade which was expected to follow the early-fall spurt developed in the last week of September. Department store sales were even with those of the like week last year, compared with gains of 10 per cent in the preceding week and 7 per cent in the four weeks ended September 28. But nowhere is there much disposition to look for any lasting slump. Retailers still express confidence that holiday volumes will be the best in years, and wholesalers report that store buyers are backing this view with firm orders.

Freight Car Purchases Heavy

Freight car orders in September totaled 11,220, the best level reached since last fall and one which has been exceeded in only five of the last 131 months. There is, at this writing, what appears to be an excellent chance that the October purchases will equal and perhaps exceed those of September, and prospects over the rest of the year are good. Heretofore, we have been estimating full year freight car orders at about 55,000. The combination of a nine months' total of more than 38,000 and the aforementioned outlook suggests that this estimate is going to be low.

Tax Not Hard on Railroads

The latest version of the excess profits tax bill accords the railroads even more favorable treatment than the earlier proposals, mainly as a consequence of the increased allowance for borrowed funds. Tentative calculations indicate that the Virginian will be the only road which will have to pay such a tax, and in its case, the amount will not be at all large. The railroads evidently are, as far as this bill is concerned, going to get off considerably easier than even the most optimistic had expected.

Defense Orders for Trucks

It will take much heavier taxes than those contained in the current measure to prevent a good many truck manufacturers from lifting earnings into new high ground. It is a fair assumption that the Government's truck buying program has not passed its crest. Yet military orders placed in the September quarter with four truck makers amounted to over $100,000,000, a rate of buying roughly equal to the entire commercial vehicle industry's rate of sales in the last two years.

The Hide Industry

Despite the fact that shoe production in the first seven months of this year was 7.9 per cent under that of the like period last year, and the likelihood that the August figure was down by about 10 per cent, both hide and leather prices have strengthened in the last two or three weeks. The advances have come on comparatively meager buying, but this should be followed by a more active demand this fall. Shoe manufacturers have been operating for most of the year to date on a hand-to-mouth basis as far as leather is concerned, and current indications are that shoe production and sales will make more favorable comparisons with last year over the rest of 1940.

Bond Financing to Rise

Given continua ion of present conditions in the bond market, October may be the best mont of this year in point of new bond offerings. Some $200,000,000 of proposed corporate bonds issues have already been registered with the SEC, and it is estimated that an equal amount is far enough along in the discussion stage to go into registration shortly. In the tax-exempt field, two issues aggregating more than $100,000,000 are scheduled for early offering. Virtually all the corporate financing is for refunding purposes; from a bond market standpoint, those needing new funds are still to be heard from.

Sugar Futures

New York, Oct. 14 (AP).—Domestic sugar futures reacted today after broadened trade and speculative buying had lifted prices 2 points. The final range was 1 lower to 1 higher on sales of 7,000 tons. Main influence was the steady raw and refined markets.

The world list ended unchanged to 1 down on turnover of only 1,700 tons. December closed 92 bid, March 87½ bid.

Offerings of raw sugar were confined to duty-frees, all held at 2.80 cents a pound with the exception of 10,000 bags of overquota Puerto Ricans at 2.75 in combination with 15,000 bags for October shipment at 2.80.

Refined was steady at 4.35 cents a pound locally.

September Sales Of Life Insurance Show 8% Climb

New York, Oct. 14 (AP).—New paid-for life insurance reported by 40 United States companies for September amounted to $580,442,000 against 509,897,000 in September, 1939, the Association of life Insurance Presidents announced today.

The monthly gain over the 1939 period was 8 per cent and contrasted with a year-to-year loss of threetenths of 1 per cent in the first nine months.

Pulling the nine-months total down was a drop in group insurance to $481,795,000 from $578,115,000 in the first nine months of 1939. Ordinary insurance for the same period was up to $3,774,548,000 from $3,757,521,000 in the nine months of last year.

The 40 companies represent 82 per cent of outstanding life insurance in legal reserve units.

Cotton Consumption Jumps in Month

The Census Bureau reported yesterday that cotton consumed during September totaled 629,252 bales of lint and 94,395 bales of linters, compared with 654,503 of lint and 85,951 of linters during August this year, and 624,183 of lint and 81,709 of linters during September last year.

MR. BROPHY

Mr. Brophy died yesterday in Emergency Hospital after he was stricken with a cerebral hemorrhage Sunday while dining at the University Club. He did not regain consciousness.

A resident of Washington for less than a year, Mr. Brophy was vice president and a director of the Personal Industrial Bankers of Washington besides being a director of numerous other corporations. Previously he had lived in New York. His home here was at 4000 Cathedral Avenue Northwest.

Mr. Brophy was born in New York City and educated in the public schools there. He volunteered during the Spanish American War and later attended Columbia University.

Entering the banking business as a young man, he later turned his attention to the arts and became one of the first to succeed as a producer of musical recordings. He arranged the first orchestral recording of Toscanini. He was a director of the House of Art, and of Art Education Inc., of New York.

His wife, the former Marie Tiffany, Metropolitan Opera soprano, survives. Also surviving is a daughter by a former marriage, Mrs. Wilbur Coleman, of Tuckahoe, N. Y. His first wife, the former Cecile Monlon, died in 1920.

Student Fund, Inc., Sues A.F.L. Aide

Russian Student Fund, Inc., New York, filed suit in the District Court yesterday for $2,644 it claimed was loaned to Boris Basil Shishkin, American Federation of Labor headquarters economist, when he was a student at Columbia University.

The complaint said Shishkin agreed to repay the loan out of later earnings. However, it added, the foundation had no knowledge of Shishkin's earnings since the last advance was made to him in 1939.

"There is a defense to the action and proper action will be taken by my attorneys," Shishkin said.

Body of Hit-Run Victim Found Hidden in Weeds

Frederick, Md., Oct. 14 (AP).—The body of Schley Toms, 33, apparently the victim of a hit-and-run motorist, was found yesterday by his wife and brother-in-law in high weeds along Route 15 near Hansonville, about 8 miles north of here.

State Police Corpl. W. K. May, who investigated, said there seemed "little doubt" that Toms had been struck by an automobile as he walked along the road, and his body tossed into the weeds by the impact.

American Seeks Loan For Mexico, Is Deported

Mexico City, Oct. 14 (AP).—Marlowe Merrick, American business man formerly of Los Angeles, was deported last week because the Mexican government was "embarrassed" by Merrick's efforts to persuade Washington authorities to grant substantial defense loans to Mexico, it was learned tonight.

Ambassador Daniels conferred with Foreign Minister Gen. Eduardo Hay tonight on Merrick's deportation, but neither commented.

District Artist Gets 5-Year Term For Shooting Girl

New York, Oct. 14—John Mayo, 26, of Washington, freelance newspaper artist, was sentenced today in Brooklyn to from 5 to 10 years in Sing Sing Prison for shooting Laurabella Andrews, 21, a waitress at the World's Fair. Miss Andrews shared an apartment with Mayo's wife in Brooklyn until the shooting, which occurred on June 6 when Mayo came to New York to attempt a reconciliation with his wife.

Judge Franklin Taylor, imposing sentence on Mayo's plea of guilty to first-degree assault, said that he had no alternative but to imprison Mayo. "I believe, though," he said, "that at the time of the assault this man was irrational, but after an examination which, I am sad to say, was perfunctory, he was found sane."

Hines Becomes Number, Says He'll Sleep Well

Ex-Tammany District Chief Remarks Sing Sing 'Walls Look Pretty High'

By the Associated Press

Ossining, N. Y., Oct. 14.—Shorn of the power which made his name a synonym of political potency in New York for more than a quarter century, James J. (Jimmy) Hines became a grey-clad convict in Sing Sing prison today.

The big-shouldered, big-fisted, 63-year-old former Tammany district leader gazed at the forbidding buildings, somber even in the bright sunlight, and remarked, "those walls look pretty high."

Then, as he swung through the iron-barred gate to begin a 4-to-8-year sentence for protecting the $20,000,000-a-year gambling syndicate of gangster Arthur (Dutch Schultz) Flegenheimer, he philosophized:

"Well, I came on a nice, bright day, if that means anything."

Two hours before he left New York by automobile he briefly expressed his underlying bitterness:

"I slept well last night. I'll slept well last night. I'll sleep well tonight and every night I'm in prison because I know I'm innocent and the truth will come out.

"I hope that Davis, Dewey and Schoenhaus will sleep as well.

If any of them has a conscience, I known they won't," he concluded.

Hines referred to "Big Harry" Schoenhaus and J. Richard (Dixie) Davis, "mouthpiece" of the Schultz gang, codefendants with the politician, and Thomas E. Dewey, district attorney who prosecuted them.

Davis now is free, after receiving a year's sentence, with six months off for time he had already served. Schoenhaus was given a suspended two-year sentence. Both testified against Hines.

Latin-American Army Leaders Wind Up Tour

Twenty ranking Army officers from nine Latin American countries returned yesterday from a 4,000-mile air tour of United States Army posts and industrial centers, while military missions from two other nations to the south arrived at New York for a similar tour.

All were invited by Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff of the Army, to learn at first hand what the United States is doing as its share of hemisphere defense. Those returning today represented the armies of Bolivia, Colombia, Peru, Uruguay, Costa Rica, Honduras, Guatemala, Dominican Republic and Panama. Arriving at New York were missions from Brazil and Argentina, largest South American republics.

The latter will join representatives of other Latin American countries making a new contingent of missions from 11 nations which will repeat the tour just ended.

Renomination Held Up, Brown Quits FCC

Practice of Law Official Plans to Return to Private

Thad H. Brown, whose renomination as a member of the Federal Communications Commission has been pigeonholed by the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, yesterday submitted his resignation to President Roosevelt.

Brown, a Republican appointee from Ohio, said he would return to the private practice of law.

Senator Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, was largely responsible for the blocking of Brown's confirmation. The renomination for a 7-year term was submitted to the Senate on June 5.

Tobey, as a member of the Interstate Commerce Committee, conducted a virtual one-man investigation of Brown's qualifications. The inquiry ranged from an expose of a New York night club party to the findings of the FCC Monopoly Committee, of which Brown was chairman.

Former Secretary of State of Ohio, Brown became general counsel of the old Federal Radio Commission in 1929 and in 1933 was named by President Hoover as a member of the commission. He became vice chairman of the commission in 1939 before its reorganization and was on the broadcast division, before it was abolished in the shake-up effected by Frank R. McNinch, former chairman.

Lutherans Approve Bearing Arms to Defend Country

Omaha, Nebr., Oct. 14 (AP).—A declaration that Christian citizens are duty bound to bear arms in defense of their country received the approval of the United Lutheran Church of America Convention today.

The church, however, recognized the individual's right to conscientious objection to military service.

The executive board's report approved by the convention declares "it is right for Christians to bear civil office, to sit as judges, to engage in just wars, to serve as soldiers, to make legal contracts, to hold property, to make oath save only when commanded to sin, for then they ought to obey God rather than man."

Elections to various church boards included:

Board of social missions, Thomas P. Hickman, Washington, D. C.

Not a Diplomat Or Congressman On the Fix List

For the first time in many weeks, diplomats and Congressmen yesterday were totally excluded from Maj. Brown's traffic ticket fixing list.

There was not a single person pleading the familiar "diplomatic immunity" nor any member of Congress arranging a pardon for a constituent. The list included 67 warning and 11 tickets cancelled.

Four doctors who said they were on emergency calls were let off with warnings, as were six who said they were unfamiliar with traffic regulations.

A ticket issued to Otis P. Stearns, 1408 Maryland Avenue Northeast, for parking in a restricted zone, was canceled when the owner testified he was stricken with a heart attack.

'Red-Cap' Pay Inquiry Urged

An investigation of the dime-a-package payment system for "red-cap" porters at railroad terminals to eliminate alleged evasions of minimum wage payments was urged in a Senate resolution introduced yesterday by Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Utah.

The resolution, which was submitted by Majority Leader Barkley in Thomas' absence, cited complaints that "many red-caps have been discharged or otherwise discriminated against" for failing to earn enough money to cover minimum wage payments set by the Wage-Hour Act.

Under the arrangement now in force at most railroad terminals, including Union Station, red-caps are paid regular wages of 30 cents an hour, but they must collect 10 cents for each bag carried and turn this in to the company.

Mr. Everett Lane, of nearby Mine Run, Va., is one of those persons you read about. Unlike the rest of us, he's the kind of fellow who wins contests instead of losing them. To date from various radio programs and things, he's gathered himself more than $2,000 worth of prizes, including an automobile and a bicycle.

He just can't help winning, poor fellow. About a year ago on WJSV's "Magic Carpet," for instance, he found himself walking off with a half dozen loaves of bread. But, all in all, he maintains it's nice work.

In addition to that, Mr. Lane is well known to WJSV's early listeners through his frequent notes to Arthur Godfrey, of "The Sun Dial," and Mr. Godfrey's equally frequent mention of their contents on the air. Both of them are pretty humorous fellows. They've been corresponding now for something like six years.

Well, Mr. Lane is to be on the air himself tonight and, logically enough, he's going to be in a contest—Prof. Quiz's weekly battle of wits—heard over WJSV and the Columbia network at 9:30 p. m.

He'll have close competition, though. Another one of the contestants is Joan Lambert, of Willow Grove, Pa., who founded the All-American Contestar School in 1937 and who now has 2,000 students corresponding with her from all sections of the country.
